Foreword by General Barry R. McCaffrey, USA Ret.

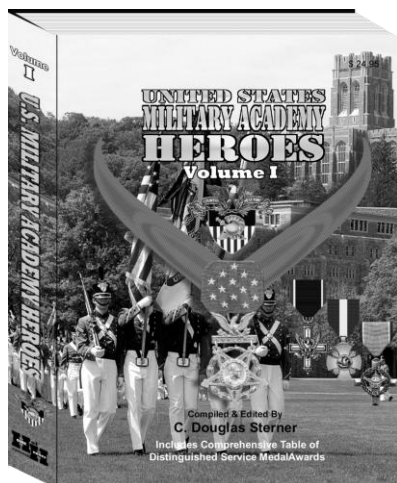

As the Command Historian of the U.S. Military Academy I heartily thank Doug Sterner for the incredible service and his unselfish labors to herald and honor our American service members but especially those who graduated from West Point: Members of the Long Gray Line. His never exhausting effort and his brilliant research and endurance have provided an astoundingly thorough and accurate record of thousands of Academy graduates who have received America's highest decorations for valor and service. Any future cadet, graduate, family member and historical researcher will be assisted by Doug Sterner's amazing work and professionalism. I have used his published works for years and delight in the vast library and archives he has amassed. No American knows and has done more for our nation's heroes recording and documenting their gallantry than Doug Sterner, a proud Vietnam veteran

FOREWORD

It is the nature of the men and women who have served, and those who continue to serve, to talk little about their service, especially so for those who have served in combat in the defense of our nation. This is especially true for those who have been highly decorated for their heroism on the battlefield. Combat decorations are not awarded for actions on what was a good day, but rather for rising to the demands of what may well have been the worst day of a soldier's life. On the day when one man may have been decorated with a valor award, he most likely saw close friends die, and often himself suffered serious and life-altering wounds.

Unfortunately, the military services do not track, compile, and record the citations of those who receive awards other than the Medal of Honor. In the aftermath of World War I a private citizen named Harry Stringer took it upon himself to compile awards of the Distinguished Service Cross and Navy Cross, the only then-available valor awards and second only to the Medal of Honor, in a series of published volumes. Thanks to his efforts, the heroic deeds of decorated Doughboys, Sailors, and Marines are available to read more than a century later.

Doug Sterner, another dedicated historian, has continued Stringer's work, compiling more than a quarter of a million of the highest valor awards for subsequent wars. The five volumes in this series of those who attended and/or graduated from the Military Academy at West Point who received Silver Stars, is the first such comprehensive work of its kind. He does so in the hope that in the decades, even centuries to come, the record of their deeds will continue to be available to inspire new generations of Americans, some of whom will themselves, no doubt, be called to service in the defense of democracy.

Of the 2,935 men who attended the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and were awarded 3,762 Silver Stars, only about 500 are still living. More than 300 were killed in action in service to our country. This has required Sterner to seek out and transcribe award citations and personal information from a wide variety of sources. With an eye to accurately preserving this history, he has communicated with many of the few still living recipients as well. All were humble about their high honors for, as is often pointed out, those who receive these awards often are acutely aware of others who did as much, in some cases more, that were never so recognized. It is appropriate then, that these accounts of gallantry in action, serve not only to recognize the man to whom the award was presented, but as an award they wear in honor and tribute to their comrades.

As a West Point graduate myself, I am proud of the great service, sacrifice, and uncommon valor so many of my classmates, as well as those who came before and after me, have demonstrated during America's wars. Each and every one of these men, as cadets, received not only a valuable education in a crucible of physical, moral, and tactical instruction, but also membership in a unique military brotherhood. The accounts of their deeds continue to amaze me as I read of what young men, often fresh out of school and newly commissioned as military officers, accomplished and achieved in leading others, and sacrificing for their safety and welfare.

This collection is important, not to glorify war or to praise the men who received the Silver Star. Most of our heroes are humble, self-effacing, and shy about their own service. But this is an important historical record that serves many important services. First, these awards are not so much about the men who received them as they are about their children and grandchildren, who some day will want to know what father/grandfather and even great grandfather did in service. Further, they will hopefully serve to inspire and motivate future generations who are called to serve.

As a combat commander in Vietnam and the Desert Storm Gulf war, I was privileged to recommend numerous soldiers for awards for their deeds, and in some cases to actually present their awards. These included many young men, enlisted soldiers who came to Vietnam prepared only to do their duty. For each leader represented in this book, there are hundreds of others who are heroes as well, and Mr. Sterner continues his work to document and preserve the records of their deeds in other volumes.

Of the men represented herein, I am pleased to say “Well Done.”
“Duty, Honor, Country.”

PREFACE

This compilation of U.S. Military Academy (USMA), West Point, New York, award citations is the only such comprehensive book of its kind. Is a result of my own three decades of research, built upon the foundation established by those who went before me, and whose efforts made my job much easier.

This volume is part of a six volume set. Volume I contains the names and citations of awards of the Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross, and Navy Cross to all graduates and non-graduating members of the U.S. Military Academy, as well as a comprehensive table of Distinguished Service Medals. Volume II through VI detail awards of 3,762 Silver Star awards to 2,935 different members of the USMA as detailed below:

Indian Campaigns	11
Spanish-American War	84
Philippine Insurrection	80
China (Boxer Rebellion)	10
Mexican Border Wars	7
World War I	196
World War II	1,569
Korean War	502
Congo (1964)	1
Dominican Republic	5
Vietnam War	1,248
Korean DMZ	1
Gulf War (1991)	12
Somalia (1993)	3
War on Terrorism	32
Total	3,762

With any project of this magnitude, errors and omissions are inevitable. Nonetheless, I am confident that this collection is at least 95% complete for USMA Silver Star awards.

METHODOLOGY

While it may seem unimaginable that the U.S. Army, or other branches of military service for that matter, awards medals without maintaining any database or compilation of those awards, it is true. The only official database of U.S. military awards is the “Roll of Honor” established in 1917 for the 3,500+ recipients of the Medal of Honor. Save for the painstaking efforts of the late Colonel Albert Gleim, for decades there was no comprehensive index of the Army/Army Air Forces recipients of the 5,000+ awards of the Distinguished Service Cross or the 75,000 Silver Stars during World War II.

Colonel Gleim spent countless years combing through Army general orders at the National Archives in College Park, Maryland, to hand-write and then transcribe the only comprehensive index of Army DSCs and Silver Stars for World War II and Korea. His work provided the framework that has enabled me to not only identify these award recipients, but search out and transcribe their award citations.

Colonel Gleim's index provided the primary resource for identifying Silver Star awards in World War II and Korea, and are usually indicated by the General Orders command, number, and date in the "Authority" column. While Gleim's work is indeed comprehensive, some award recipients were not found during his years of research.

My secondary resource for Silver Star awards in all wars is the "Biographical Register of the Officers and Graduates of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York," commonly called the "Cullum Register" and published by the Association of Graduates of the U.S. Military Academy.

The Cullum Register provided a secondary confirmation of the awards reported by Gleim, as well as a comprehensive listing of Silver Star awards in World War II and Korea that Gleim missed. Further, in the process of this work, I have found a few recipients of the Silver Star whose awards are not reported in the Cullum Roster, as well as three reported awards that were either erroneously reported or otherwise listed in error. Those three are not included herein.

There is no existing index for Silver Stars or other awards for actions after the Korean War, save for the ADCARS database, an index of Vietnam War general orders that is closely held by the Army Human Resources Command, and is unavailable to outside researchers. For awards from the Korean War to present, the Cullum Roster has been invaluable. Awards found in that resource and for which I have not obtained a general orders are noted in the "Authority" field as "United States Military Academy Register of Graduates "

Of the nearly 3,000 USMA Silver Star recipients, only about 500 are still living at the time of publication. In the process of compiling this collection, I emailed nearly all of them and most responded, providing citations or corrections to the generic synopsis I had drafted, and in two cases, to advise of classmates who had received Silver Stars whose awards were not already in my database and were not reported by the "Cullum Roster." Photos were gleaned from the USMA annual albums, "The Howitzer," with the exception of the Class of 1966 which volume was unavailable. My special thanks to Class of 1966 alumnus John Eberle who voluntarily scanned the many photos of his classmates for my use herein. Such was the level of cooperation I received from the living USMA recipients.

CONTENTS

For each individual recipient in these volumes I have tried to include:

- Full Name
- A brief biography including Class Year and retirement year and rank
- Photo
- Citation or synopsis for their award
- Authority (general orders or secondary source)
- Personal data: date and place of birth, hometown, date of death and burial location
- Additional awards above the Bronze Star but also including Purple Hearts, Air Medals, and the POW Medals are listed. In the case of Bronze Stars, they are simply enumerated, and the notation "w/V" indicates at least one was for valor.

With regard to award citations, when available I have provided the full text of the award citations with only the following edits: 1) I include the recipient's full name, 2) since many citations did not include the recipient's unit, I have appended their unit to the citation, and 3) since I am compiling these for history in the decades to come, I avoid abbreviations and acronyms that the lay person might not understand. In those cases where I have not obtained a citation, using multiple resources including news reports, I have tried to draft as much information as possible. The text "Synopsis:" in advance of a narrative is an indication that it is not the official citation, but a generic report of the award action.

As noted in the next chapter which details the history of the Silver Star, prior to 1932 there was no Silver Star MEDAL. Established as the Citation Star in World War I, it was presented usually without detail as to the actions meriting the recipient being cited. Subsequently, officers and enlisted men who had been cited for actions from the Indian Campaigns to World War I were able to see these upgraded to Silver Stars, Distinguished Service Medals, and in some cases even Distinguished Service Crosses. Again, these awards were usually acknowledged without any detailed citation.

It is important to note that with the confusion surrounding these World War I awards, as well as awards of the Citation Star in World War I, undoubtedly there are other valid USMA recipients yet to be found. The pre-World War II awards are probably the most incomplete section of this database, but are nevertheless comprehensive for World War I thanks to the Cullum Roster.

Of the 3,374 Silver Stars reflected herein for actions from World War II to present, where citations became more detailed, this collection includes the full-text citation for more than 1,240 awards, or 37% of all awards.

I have little doubt that after publication, as this collection receives a wider audience, additional citations will be forthcoming, and perhaps a few additional recipients will be identified. I welcome all input and information for update of the volumes in the years ahead.

HISTORY OF THE SILVER STAR

Before there was a Silver Star Medal, there was the Citation Star. Initially, President Woodrow Wilson authorized the Army Distinguished Service Cross (DSC), Army Distinguished Service Medal (DSM), plus the Citation Star on January 12, 1918. These two new awards and the Citation Star device, in descending order, comprised the top level of individual Army recognitions at that time, ranking consecutively in precedence after the Medal of Honor (MOH). With minor modification, Congress approved these three new decorations in Public Law 193, 65th Congress, on July 9, 1918.

The MOH, DSC, and DSM were each, specifically, medals awarded for varying degrees of extraordinary heroism or, in the case of the DSM, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service. The process for granting the three awards, as well as the Medal of Honor, were initiated for an individual soldier by written recommendation of his commander, which was sent up the chain of command to the War Department. If approved at the highest levels (the MOH goes all the way to the President for final approval), the award was announced in War Department General Orders and presented (or often simply mailed) to the soldier. If the soldier was deceased, it was mailed to his next of kin as a posthumous award.

The amended version of Paragraph 187 of Army Regulations regarding Citation Stars noted, “for each citation of an officer or enlisted man for gallantry in action, published in orders from headquarters of a force commanded by a general officer, not warranting the issue of a Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross or Distinguished Service Medal, he shall wear a silver star, 3/16 inch in diameter, as prescribed in Uniform Regulations.” Thus, the citation star differed from the three highest Army medals in five unique ways:

- 1) The Citation Star was not a medal. Rather, it was a small, 3/16” silver, star-shaped device that was intended for wear on the Campaign Ribbon of the recipient.
- 2) The Citation Star was largely an “impact award,” a recognition that could be awarded on-the-spot by a General Officer in command of a unit, often down to the Brigade level. Unlike the other awards, there was no necessity to send a recommendation for a Citation Star up the chain of command for approval at higher headquarters or War Department level.
- 3) The MOH, DSC and DSM were announced (published) under General Orders issued at the highest levels, usually the War Department. General Officers commanding a division, and even occasionally at the brigade level, had the distinct authority to cite a soldier under his command in General Orders he issued at his own command level (usually division level.)

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

- 4) Subsequent awards of the same medal among the top three were noted by placing a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster (OLC) on the ribbon. The Citation Star was not, itself, a medal. Rather, it was a star-shaped device, much as the OLC was, which was worn on the campaign ribbon. If an individual was cited more than once, they were authorized to wear additional Citation Stars on their campaign ribbon.
- 5) The Citation Star was retroactive to the Civil War. Soldiers who had been cited by their commanding generals in prior wars/conflicts, could wear the Citation Star on the campaign ribbon for that war/conflict, including:
 - Civil War Campaign Medal
 - Indian Campaign Medal
 - Spanish Campaign Medal
 - Philippine Campaign Medal
 - China Campaign Medal
 - Mexican Service Medal
 - World War I Victory Medal.

CITATION STAR CAVEATS

Any study or analysis of Citation Star awards by historians or others faces many problems. It is almost impossible to make a definitive determination in many cases as to the number of Citation Stars an individual soldier may have received. Some of the problems in accounting for these recognitions include the following facts:

- 1) Not infrequently was a soldier cited for the same action at two different levels. For instance, a soldier serving with the 1st Division, A.E.F. might have been cited for an action on a specific date by the Commanding General of that command in 1st Division General Orders. He might also have been cited for the same date/action by the Commanding General of the A.E.F. under American Expeditionary Force General Orders. This duplication notwithstanding, technically, though cited twice for the same action, the individual is generally noted as receiving two Citation Stars.
- 2) In some cases, a soldier cited in a division's General Orders for a specific action was subsequently awarded the DSC by the War Department for that same action. In some cases, the general orders for that higher award notes that it superseded the Citation Star, but in other instances, no such rescinding of the Citation Star was officially recorded. Absent a published indication that the Citation Star was rescinded in lieu of the DSC, the individual is usually listed for both awards for the same action. The Citation Star was, after all, a recognition by a soldier's Commanding General, while the DSC was a War Department award.
- 3) The Citation Star was established to cite individual soldiers for "gallantry in action." That terminology was included in most citations, however not a few were published without the word "gallantry" in the text. Marine Private Edward Bischoff and four of his comrades in the 6th Machine-Gun Battalion were cited identically: "Private Edward D. Bischoff (MCSN: 81488), United States Marine Corps, is cited by the Commanding General, Second Division, American Expeditionary Forces. Under heavy shell fire in an emergency he volunteered to carry ammunition, disregarding all danger to himself while serving with the 6th Machine-Gun Battalion near Chateau-Thierry, France." While gallantry is implied, it was not specifically stated in the citation. Such omission, while seemingly minor, later served to complicate the upgrade process when the Silver Star Medal was established in 1932.

THE SILVER STAR MEDAL

The Silver Star Medal was created and authorized for presentation by the U.S. Army in 1932. The first Silver Star ever awarded (Medal #1) was a Silver Star with six oak leaf clusters that was presented to General Douglas MacArthur, converting his seven World War I Citation Stars to the new Medal. (From inception of the Silver Star through 1943, the Army numbered these awards sequentially, but discontinued that practice in 1943 as the number of World War II awards made keeping track of them prohibitive.)

The image of the Silver Star Medal might tend to be misleading. Despite its name, the large star that hangs from the red, white and blue ribbon is gold-colored. In fact, the award takes its name from the 3/16” silver star embedded in the center of the larger gold star, recalling the initial Citation Star device.

The Silver Star Medal thus became the Army’s fourth highest medal in the Pyramid of Honor, and the third highest award for valor in combat. (The Distinguished Service Medal, which ranks just above the Silver Star, is not awarded for combat heroism but for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service.)

MULTIPLE AWARDS (DEVICES)

As additional awards became part of the Pyramid of Honor, some new awards had potential to be earned many times and the number of Oak Leaf Clusters (OLC) had the potential to run out of space on an award ribbon. As a result, subsequently, a Silver Oak Leaf Cluster was authorized to replace four bronze OLCs for the sixth, eleventh, sixteenth, etc. award. A ribbon with two silver OLCs [eleven awards] and three bronze OLCs [three additional awards] would reflect fourteen awards of a specific medal.

Both the Army and Air Force award Oak Leaf Clusters to represent additional awards of virtually all their authorized medals. Navy awards (which include awards to Marines and members of the Coast Guard), use a gold star device in place of a bronze OLC and a silver star device for the 6th, 11th, 16th, etc. award.

Bronze or silver Oak Leaf Clusters (Army/Air Force), or Gold or Silver Stars (Navy/Marines/Coast Guard), are the ONLY devices worn on the Silver Star medal or ribbon. There are however, other awards, which can be presented for combat heroism, for service, or for achievement. These are sometimes presented with a bronze “V” device, noting the award is for valor. One common example is the Bronze Star. The ribbon shown here is a Bronze Star with “V” and one OLC. It indicates the recipient earned two Bronze Stars, and that at least one of the two was awarded for combat valor. Only one “V” device is worn on the ribbon, no matter how many of the awards were presented for valor. Because the Silver Star is ONLY awarded for combat valor, it is NEVER awarded or worn with a “V” device. To do so would be redundant.

Conversion of Citation Stars to Silver Stars

While the Silver Star replaced the previously awarded Citation Stars, it did not automatically result in conversion. The individual recipients of the earlier award had to request the conversion and issuance of the new Silver Star Medal. By and large, by 1932 most World War I veterans were no longer in service. Generally, it was primarily career soldiers, still in service, that took the step to request their earlier award be replaced with the new medal. For this reason, one must be careful in drawing a distinction between a Citation Star recipient and Silver Star recipient. Both awards are basically equivalent, the only difference being that the latter was formalized by both a request and paperwork. The primary difference between the text of the citations is:

- The Citation Star is presented by a commanding general with introductory text similar to: “By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved July 9, 1918 (Bul. No. 43, W.D. 1918), [Rank, Name], United States Army, is cited by the Commanding General, SECOND DIVISION, American Expeditionary Forces, for gallantry in action and a silver star may be placed upon the ribbon of the Victory Medals awarded him.”
- The Silver Star begins with the text: “The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to [Rank, Name], United States Army, for gallantry in action against the enemy...” (Note: With most citations, the text “takes pleasure in presenting” is used only when the award is presented to a living recipient. In those cases when the award is posthumously presented, the President “takes pride in presenting....”)

Army Silver Stars for Sailors & Marines

While the Silver Star remained an Army-only award from 1918 until 1942, this did not preclude members of the Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard from receiving them. During World War I, U.S. Marines primarily of the Fifth and Sixth Regiments of Marines, served directly under command of the Army. Most of their service was performed while attached to the 2d Division, American Expeditionary Forces. More than 2,500 Marines were cited for their gallantry in General Orders issued by the Commanding General of the 2d Division. More than 500 Marines were similarly cited by the Commanding General of the American Expeditionary Forces under A.E.F. General Orders.

Nearly 200 members of the U.S. Navy were similarly cited. They were primarily Medical Officers or Corpsmen who were attached to Marine Corps infantry units serving side-by-side with the Army, but also included 5 Navy Chaplains who were serving with these Marines.

When World War II began, the Silver Star was still an Army-only award. In the Philippine Islands, Navy and Marine defenders fought valiantly alongside their Army comrades. General Douglas MacArthur was quick to honor the gallantry of the men of both services with awards of the Army Silver Star. He also awarded Silver Stars to sea-going members of the Navy, including the entire crew of the submarine U.S.S. Trout (SS-202). Those seagoing Sailors received 70 awards in all, for a single dangerous and classified mission. From December 7, 1941 through May 1942, more than 88 Army Silver Stars were awarded to U.S. Marines. A total of 191 were awarded to members of the Navy.

One member of the Marine Corps, Corporal William N. McCormack, was awarded the Silver Star three times for his gallantry in the defense of the Philippine Islands. He later received a fourth award from the Navy. His Silver Star ribbon is quite unique in that it properly displays two Oak Leaf Clusters and one Gold Star.

ABRAMS, BERNARD WILLIAM

Bernard Abrams graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1947. He retired with disability in 1952 as a U.S. Army Captain.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry), [then First Lieutenant] Bernard William Abrams (ASN: 0-50736), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company L, 3d Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 20 May 1951, near Pusan-ni, Korea, the First Platoon, spearheading L Company's assault on Hill 492, was subjected to a hail of fire and pinned down at the base of the objective. Heedless of the intense fire, Captain Abrams advanced forward of the pinned-down unit and, locating the enemy positions, called for and effectively directed artillery fire upon the enemy enabling the platoon to continue the attack. Having led the platoon to within 30 yards of the hill crest and becoming pinned down again, Captain Abrams called for the Third Platoon to move forward through the First Platoon; however, in advancing, the Third Platoon leader was seriously wounded. Immediately and with complete disregard for his safety, Captain Abrams dashed to the front of the leaderless men and vigorously led them in a successful assault upon the ridge. Upon securing the objective and finding that the company was low on ammunition, he quickly organized a detail and guided it through enemy small arms fire, procuring and returning with the ammunition necessary to retain the position. The gallant leadership, courage, and aggressiveness displayed by Captain Abrams reflect the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

ADAIR, DON WALTER

Don Walter graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1974 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Don Walter Adair (ASN: 0-28491), United States Army, for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action as Commanding Officer of the Heavy Mortar Company, 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 13 - 16 February 1951 near Chipyeong-ni, Korea. During that period his company was providing supporting mortar fire in defense of the regimental perimeter near Chipyeong-ni. During an enemy attack, Captain Adair, with complete disregard for his personal safety, and in the face of intense enemy mortar, artillery and small arms fire, exposed himself constantly in order to inspire and encourage his men. On two separate occasions, while visiting his platoons, enemy artillery and mortar shells landed in the immediate vicinity, and his calm attitude under these hazardous circumstances was an inspiration to his men who remained by their weapons despite the terrific odds against them. The coolness under fire and outstanding leadership displayed by Captain Adair reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

ADAMS, JAMES YEATES

James Adams graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1935. He retired in 1963 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) James Yeates Adams (ASN: 0-19755), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 17 September 1951 in the vicinity of Satae-ri, Korea. On that date a battalion of his regiment was assigned the mission of securing commanding terrain defended by well-entrenched forces. Due to the importance of this operation, Colonel Adams was ever present with the most forward elements of his command to direct the movements of his attacking units personally. Although under direct and observed hostile small arms, automatic weapons and mortar fire, he remained for the duration of the action, supervising each phase of the assault. By his example of bravery under fire, Colonel Adams instilled in his men, the courage and determination necessary to attack in the face of a numerically superior enemy force. His aggressive leadership and tactical ability were the major factors in the successful accomplishment of the battalion's mission. The gallantry in action displayed by Colonel Adams on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

and suffered heavy casualties. Leading his company in an attack on the hostile position, Captain Alfonso succeeded in reaching the trapped company, relieving the enemy pressure and evacuating the wounded. Through his efforts an enemy counter-attack was prevented and the company position secured. Advancing against strong opposition, he led his company to the Naktong River and assisted elements of a similarly encircled unit to reach the safety of friendly lines. Although his company in turn was trapped by the enemy, he successfully fought off the hostile forces for three days while inflicting heavy casualties and destroying much equipment. His gallant actions deprived the enemy of access to the vital road from the river and reflect the greatest credit upon himself and the United States Infantry.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Harold Raymond Anderegg, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of Company G, 2d Battalion, 7th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action against the enemy near Chorwon, Korea, on 8 June 1951. Company G was attacking an enemy position when it was subjected to a strong enemy counterattack under which it suffered heavy losses and soon became disorganized. Disregarding his personal safety, First Lieutenant Anderegg moved through the intense fire to a position from which he could better direct his men. Shouting words of encouragement and giving explicit instructions to the troops, he reformed his positions and placed his machine guns where they would be of most service. Although the enemy charged with considerable strength, the men of Company G, inspired and aided by First Lieutenant Anderegg's superior leadership, were able to repulse the attack and maintain the position. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Anderegg, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

BARBER, HENRY ANSON, III

Henry Barber, III graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of January 1943. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Henry Anson Barber, III (ASN: 0-25568), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3d Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea. On 17 August 1952, Company I was occupying defensive positions on an outpost known as "Nori" near Chuk-Kor-Ri, Korea. Major Barber, the battalion commander, realizing the need for strong defensive positions because of an expected enemy assault, left his position of safety in order to inspect the friendly emplacements. Departing from the main line of resistance, he proceeded through a mine field and crossed the hazardous rain-swollen Imjin River and continued over an area which was under enemy observation. In order to reach his destination, Major Barber fearlessly moved across an area which being subjected to an intense enemy artillery and mortar barrage. Completely oblivious to the deadly barrage, he undauntedly crossed the perilous fire-swept terrain until he had reached his objective. Major Barber then personally inspected the defensive positions, including the forward listening posts,

BARRETT, JOHN CURRAN, JR.

John Barrett graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1976 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major (Infantry), [then First Lieutenant] John Curran Barrett, Jr. (ASN: 0-28481), United States Army, for gallantry in action on 12 September 1950. As a Platoon Leader, Company K, 5th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division in Korea, Major Barrett's courageous conduct in battle during a critical period of highly concentrated enemy action was thoroughly manifested by his outstanding bravery, selfless devotion to troop welfare and superior leadership. Leading a platoon in an aggressive assault on an enemy held position north of Taegu, Major Barrett's bold and skillful actions were conspicuously evidenced. Despite the fact that he was wounded, he never stopped fighting and valiantly led his men in the face of heavy mortar, small arms and automatic weapons fire from a fanatically determined and numerically superior enemy. His singular efforts were instrumental in capturing the strategic hill and in holding it against the enemy until reinforcements moved up and organize the position. Major Barrett's heroic efforts and unselfish regard for his own personal safety are in the most cherished traditions of the United States Army, and reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service.

BARTH, GEORGE BITTMAN

George Barth graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of June 1918. He retired in 1957 as a U.S. Army Major General.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Brigadier General George Bittman Barth (ASN: 0-11241), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding General, Division Artillery, 25th Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 11 and 12 August 1950, when elements of the Division were subjected to repeated fanatic attacks by numerically superior hostile forces in the vicinity of Chinju, Korea, General Barth made frequent trips to the forward positions of the infantry units over roads exposed to heavy concentrations of hostile fire to obtain accurate information on the disposition of enemy forces and coordinate supporting artillery fire. On 12 August 1950, General Barth organized isolated units into a task force and led them in an attack to clear the main supply route and rescue a beleaguered battalion. While at a forward command post, General Barth coordinated artillery fire to repulse a hostile force which threatened envelopment of the command post; when the area had been secured, he arranged for air evacuation of the wounded. General Barth's conspicuous courage, inspired leadership and notable tactical skill served as an inspiration to his men and contributed materially to the successful operations of the Division during a most critical period. His actions reflect great credit upon himself and uphold the highest traditions of the United States Army.

Third Award

BARTHOLOMEES, JAMES BOONE

James Bartholomees graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1942. He retired in 1972 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) James Boone Bartholomees (ASN: 0-24839), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 18 to 19 September 1952 in the vicinity of Sokkogae, North Korea. During the afternoon of 18 September, all communications to a battalion outpost were cut due to an intense enemy artillery barrage and relentless enemy infantry attacks. Two squads of the raider platoon were dispatched to reinforce the outpost, but their leaders were wounded and their advance halted. Colonel Bartholomees, upon hearing this, went forward alone to the squads, reorganized them and led the small group through the enemy infested valley to the base of the outpost. After radioing instructions for artillery fire on his positions, should his attack fail, he led his men up the hill and re-established the position. Colonel Bartholomees then remained in the outpost, supervising the evacuation of the wounded and reorganizing the defenses. The conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty displayed by Colonel Bartholomees reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

*BATES, JOHN OLIN, JR. [KIA (KOREA)]

John Bates graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He was killed in action while serving as a First Lieutenant in Korea, only two years after graduation.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) John Olin Bates, Jr. (ASN: 0-62538), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Company G, 2d Battalion, 180th Infantry Regiment, 45th Infantry Division on 12 June 1952 near Karhyonni, Korea. Company G was counter attacking the bitterly contested Hills 191 and 183 and the company was being subjected to a bitter barrage of enemy artillery and mortar fire on the slopes of the hills. When the company commander was wounded, Lieutenant Bates reorganized the men and continued to the objective. While assaulting Hill 191 a severe barrage of enemy fire was placed on one of the advancing platoons, causing numerous casualties. Lieutenant Bates hurried to the platoon's position under heavy enemy fire and organized the evacuation of the wounded and the dead. He directed litter teams through the exploding shells to where the wounded lay, comforting and inspiring the men until they could be evacuated. While fearlessly moving from person to person, disregarding his safety to give aid and comfort to his men, Lieutenant Bates was hit by enemy fire and fatally wounded. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Bates, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

SILVER STAR (KOREAN WAR)

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

BLANCHARD, ROBERT MOORE, JR.

Robert Blanchard graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1933. He retired in 1963 as a U.S. Army Brigadier General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Robert Moore Blanchard, Jr. (ASN: 0-19292), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Headquarters, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea. On 28 November 1950, Lieutenant Colonel Blanchard was in Command of the 1st Battalion Combat Team, 15th Infantry Regiment, and distinguished himself by his gallantry and outstanding leadership in driving back a determined enemy force which temporarily halted the battalion. He met the opposition, which was well-entrenched and cleverly camouflaged from commanding ground, and through skillful maneuver moved Company C to its objective to act as a base of fire and immediately thereafter rejoined the remainder of the combat team; accomplished the necessary coordination, and led it to the combat team objective. The gallantry, disregard for his own personal safety while exposed to enemy fire, and aggressive leadership of Lieutenant Colonel Blanchard served as an inspiration to his men and caused the enemy to be completely routed with considerable losses of personnel and equipment. The gallantry displayed by Lieutenant Colonel Blanchard reflects great credit upon himself and upholds the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

BLAZEY, FRANK EARL

Frank Blazezy graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1975 as a U.S. Army Brigadier General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Frank Earl Blazezy (ASN: 0-28693), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company E, 2d Battalion, 65th Infantry, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 25 - 26 April 1951, near Tokchong, Korea, as Company E was occupying a defensive position on the Elgin Line, it was attacked by an enemy force of estimated regimental strength. Captain Blazezy, company commander, forced to tighten his perimeter in the face of the heavy pressure exerted by the enemy, fearlessly moved through the intense enemy fire as he organized a defensive position around the command post. When the supply of ammunition became critically low, Captain Blazezy, on three occasions, personally led a party through the heavy hostile fire to procure more. Throughout the entire action, his confident manner and vigorous exhortations were a source of inspiration to the members of his command. Captain Blazezy's superb gallantry and resourceful leadership reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

BLESSE, FREDERICK CORBIN

The son of a U.S. Army brigadier general, Frederick "Boots" Blesse was born in the Panama Canal Zone, graduated from American High School of Manila, and then attended West Point where he graduated with the Class of 1945. During the Korean War he flew more than 200 combat missions, becoming a Double-Ace with 10 victories. After serving in Korea he wrote the fighter tactics book, "No Guts, No Glory," which has been used as a basis of fighter combat operations for the Royal Air Force, Marines, Chinese Nationalist, Korean Air Force, and U.S. Air Force since 1955. General Blesse volunteered for duty again in Vietnam, where he was again decorated for valor. He retired in 1975 as a U.S. Air Force Major General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major Frederick Corbin Blesse (AFSN: 0-17010A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action against an enemy of the United Nations as Pilot of an F-86 Sabrejet Fighter-bomber of the 334th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, 4th Fighter-Interceptor Group, FIFTH Air Force, on 4 September 1952. Leading a flight of four F-86s on patrol, Major Blesse directed two of his flight to return to base as a result of faulty wing tank feeding on one F-86. After initiating an attack on two sighted MiGs, Major Blesse was about to close when three more MiGs positioned behind him and his wingman. Realizing the seriousness of his position, Major Blesse broke, and after a series of evasive actions ending in a maximum performance diving turn, he shook off the enemy aircraft. As he returned to his patrol, a three-ship enemy flight was sighted. As Major Blesse pressed his attack, two of the enemy broke into the overcast. Concentrating on the remaining MiG, he closed to 1,000 feet, following the enemy through a series of violent evasive actions as he attempted to shake free. Firing, Major Blesse scored hits on the fuselage, mid-section and wing roots, causing the pilot to eject himself when the MiG broke into flame. Through his skillful airmanship and gallantry in action against a determined enemy, Major Blesse reflected great credit upon himself, the FAR EAST Air Forces, and the United States Air Force.

BOATNER, HAYDON LEMAIRE

Haydon Boatner graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1924. He retired in 1960 as a U.S. Army Major General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Brigadier General Haydon Lemaire Boatner (ASN: 0-15641), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Assistant Division Commander, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 6 and 7 October 1951 in the vicinity of Kobangsa-ni, Korea. On these dates the 9th Infantry Regiment was attacking critical terrain features which were defended by a fanatically determined hostile force. As the securing of this objective was vital to the success of the entire operation, General Boatner was ever present. He repeatedly placed himself at crucial spots during the battle, moving from one point to another, encouraging individuals and assisting subordinate leaders. Although friendly troops and observation posts were subjected to intense hostile artillery, mortar and small arms fire, he moved about with complete disregard for his personal safety. The critical first hand information gained by General Boatner was vital as a basis for further combat directives. His outstanding courage and leadership were an inspiration to the front line troops and aided immeasurably to the success of their mission. The gallantry in action and devotion to duty displayed by General Boatner on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

BOATWRIGHT, LINTON SINCLAIR

Linton Boatwright graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1941. He retired in 1972 as a U.S. Army Major General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Field Artillery) Linton Sinclair Boatwright (ASN: 0-23968), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 37th Field Artillery Battalion, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 17 May 1951, in the vicinity of Chaun-ni, Korea. On that day Colonel Boatwright was with his battalion about a mile south of Chaun-ni, preparing to withdraw to the south in the face of rapidly advancing enemy ground troops. Realizing that two artillery battalions of the artillery under his control were still further north in the vicinity of Chaun-ni, and in imminent danger of being cut off, Colonel Boatwright, with complete disregard for his personal safety, proceeded to find a route of withdrawal for the two battalions. Although constantly exposed to enemy small arms and mortar fire, Colonel Boatwright was successful in locating a ford where the two artillery battalions could get their personnel and heavy equipment across. He then supervised and directed the evacuation of the battalions to previously selected new defensive positions. Colonel Boatwright's devotion to duty, his inspiring leadership, and heroism under fire were instrumental in the preservation of these two artillery battalions. The gallantry in action displayed by Colonel Boatwright reflects great credit upon himself and upholds the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

BOSWELL, JAMES ORR

James Boswell graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1933. He retired in 1961 as a U.S. Army Brigadier General.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) James Orr Boswell (ASN: 09-19188), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 25 April 1951, in the vicinity of Songna-ni, Korea, while covering the withdrawal of friendly units near Hill 228, the First Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, was in a blocking position when it received intense enemy fire. Realizing that this position was the critical point in the withdrawal, Colonel Boswell moved forward of the position under heavy enemy fire to evaluate the situation. Deciding that a tank company was necessary for support, he hastened two miles to the rear refueling position and brought the company forward. With no regard for his safety and fully aware that the enemy was attacking on two flanks, Colonel Boswell returned to an exposed position and, while under complete enemy observation and fire, effected the organization of the task force. Colonel Boswell's gallantry, courage, and professional skill immeasurably contributed to the success of the operation and reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

BRADLEY, JOSEPH SLADEN

Joseph Bradley graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1919. Originally members of that class were the Class of 1921, but because of World War I were graduated early in 1918, and subsequently graduated again in 1919. He received his first Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action on December 28, 1942, while serving as a colonel with the 32d Infantry Division. He received a SECOND Distinguished Service Cross in the Korean War. He subsequently retired in 1956 as a U.S. Army Major General.

Third Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Second Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Third Award of the Silver Star to Brigadier General Joseph Sladen Bradley (ASN: 0-12428), United States Army, for gallantry in action while as Assistant Division Commander of the 25th Infantry Division, in Korea. On 7 March 1951, the Division launched an assault crossing of the Han River. At 0540 General Bradley positioned himself on a forward observation post, immediately in rear of the leading elements making the assault crossing. From this forward position he was able to effectively coordinate and direct his units, although under enemy fire, including artillery and mortar fire. General Bradley, although subjected to this intense fire, steadfastly maintained his position continuing to direct and coordinate the operations. As the attack progressed he moved about the assault area, supervising and directing the operation, while under fire. The gallant action of General Bradley was directly responsible for the coordination of the assault elements and the successful lodgment of the United Nations Forces on the north shore of the Han River, permitting the drive into North Korea by the EIGHTH Army. His gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Fourth Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Third Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Fourth Award of the Silver Star to Brigadier General Joseph Sladen Bradley (ASN: 0-12428), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Assistant Division Commander of the 25th Infantry Division, in action near Topyong-ni, Korea, on 29 May 1951. On this date, the 24th Infantry Regiment was engaged in hot pursuit of the Chinese Communist Forces north of the 38th Parallel. Major General Bradley placed himself with the most forward elements of the march; personally supervising the movements by advancing on foot at the head of the column. Most of this advance was through terrain vulnerable to ambush and sniper fire. When the column was forced to deploy at Topyong-ni, Major General Bradley remained with the troops exposing himself to sniper fire until the front was cleared. Brigadier General Bradley's selfless devotion to duty and personal exposure reflect the highest credit upon himself and the United States Armed Forces.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

*BRUCKNER, JOHN ADAM, IV [KIA (KOREA)]

John Bruckner graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army Captain in Korea.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to Captain (Infantry) John Adam Bruckner, IV (ASN: 0-27622), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company A, 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, distinguished himself by gallantry in action on 31 December 1951 in the vicinity of Kumhwa, Korea. On this date Company A was occupying defensive positions which were under direct observation of hostile forces. The well entrenched enemy continually directed a deadly hail of mortar fire, preventing the movement of friendly soldiers to improve their positions. Realizing that the enemy fire was placing the entire defenses in jeopardy, Captain Bruckner repeatedly exposed himself in order to direct a counter-fire and guide the efforts of his men. While moving along the entire front of his position, encouraging his men, Captain Bruckner was fatally wounded by enemy fire. His self-sacrificing devotion to duty and outstanding leadership aided immeasurably in the successful defense of the friendly unit's positions. The gallantry in action displayed by Captain Bruckner was in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and will live forever in the hearts of his fellow men.

BUCKINGHAM, CLAY THOMPSON

Clay Buckingham graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He retired in 1982 as a U.S. Army Major General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Cavalry) Clay Thompson Buckingham (ASN: 0-59247), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company A, 64th Tank Battalion (Medium), 3d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea. On 18 September 1951, Lieutenant Buckingham was commanding the lead tank in the lead platoon of a battalion task force in an attack against a well-entrenched, determined enemy near Hat-o-Dong, Korea. While moving forward to bypass a destroyed bridge, the platoon ran into an extensive hostile mine field, well covered by anti-tank, artillery, mortar and small arms fire, disabling three of the tanks. Realizing the disorganized state the remainder of his unit was in, Lieutenant Buckingham dismounted from his vehicle and fearlessly directed the evacuation of the wounded and guided the return fire for his two remaining tanks. After an order to withdraw was received, he courageously reentered the one tank that had to be abandoned, cognizant of the fact that hostile anti-tank guns were firing directly on it, to remove classified material and prevent its capture by the enemy. His initiative and leadership in the face of intense and well observed fire served as an inspiration to his men who subsequently retrieved two damaged tanks. Lieutenant Buckingham's gallantry reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

Ellwood Burkhardt was a non-graduating member of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, Class of 1950.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Corps of Engineers) Ellwood Walter Burkhardt (ASN: 0-61418), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company D, 2d Engineer Combat Battalion, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 25 May 1951, near Chaun-ni, Korea. His unit, in convoy, was ambushed by enemy forces. Four infantrymen were seriously wounded due to the enemy fire and open terrain. Lieutenant Burkhardt reorganized his platoon for a base of fire and voluntarily crossed 200 yards in the open to obtain a tank. He led the tank to the four wounded soldiers and covered the crew with the tank's .50 caliber machine gun while they drew the wounded up through the escape hatch. This courageous action saved the lives of the four men. The gallantry displayed by Lieutenant Burkhardt reflects great credit upon himself and upholds the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

CALDWELL, WILLIAM BURNS, III

William Caldwell graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1948. He retired in 1980 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) William Burns Caldwell, III, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as a Platoon Leader in an Infantry Company of the 19th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 19 July 1950, in Korea. First Lieutenant Caldwell's platoon, while seeking to make contact with the enemy, was ambushed by a force estimated at company strength and suffered many casualties. Without regard for his own safety, First Lieutenant Caldwell led an assault on the enemy's lines and the men, inspired by his gallant example, overran the position. Endeavoring to locate men known to have been wounded in the previous action, he fearlessly advanced into the face of withering fire, killed four of the enemy, and reached his fallen men and directed their evacuation to a friendly position. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Caldwell, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

CAMERON, ROBERT CARROLL

Robert Cameron graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1940. He retired in 1962 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Robert Carroll Cameron (ASN: 0-23178), United States Army, for gallantry in action against the enemy in the vicinity of Taepyeong, Korea, between 25 and 27 October 1950. On 25 October 1950, the 10th Republic of Korea Regiment was given the mission of relieving a friendly unit that had been cut off by a large Chinese Communist force. Colonel Cameron, Senior United States Advisor to the regiment, moved out with the leading elements of the unit and for the next two days repeatedly exposed himself to intense enemy fire to direct air strikes and artillery fire against hostile positions. At 0100 hours on 27 October, enemy launched a massive enveloping attack against the regiment and succeeded in overrunning friendly rear area security troops. Although the regiment suffered tremendous casualties, Colonel Cameron aggressively moved among the remaining troops, encouraging them and directing the establishment of a defensive perimeter which the regiment held throughout the night. At daylight he led a counterattack which enabled the regiment to halt the enemy advance and reestablish the friendly lines. The aggressive leadership and gallantry displayed by Colonel Cameron reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

CARMICHAEL, RICHARD HENRY [POW (WWII)]

Richard Carmichael graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1936. Among the 16 bomber's Colonel Carmichael led on this mission was one B-17 piloted by Harl Pease. Pease was lost in the mission, and was subsequently awarded the Medal of Honor. Later in the war Colonel Carmichael piloted the first American B-29 to be shot down over Japan in World War II. He retired in 1961 as a U.S. Air Force Major General.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel Richard Henry Carmichael (ASN: 1214A/0-20203), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action near Sinuiju, Korea, on 8 November 1950. Serving as Command Pilot of a B-29 Bomber and as Commanding Officer of the 98th Bombardment Group, FIFTH Air Force, Colonel Carmichael led an aerial attack against that temporary capitol of North Korea. This target was a highly important enemy supply and communications center. Because of Sinuiju's location only 666 yards across the Yalu River from An-Tung, Manchuria, attack was expected from enemy conventional and jet type aircraft known to be in the area. Anti-aircraft artillery on both sides of the river was also expected to provide further danger. However, realizing the vital importance of this target, as well as to prevent possible consequences of a Manchurian border violation, Colonel Carmichael personally led his group. His skillful, courageous leadership resulted in maximum destruction of assigned targets and served as an inspiration to the personnel of his group. The

*CASSERLY, THOMAS FRANCIS, III [DNB (KOREA)]

Thomas Casserly graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He was killed in a non-combat air accident in Korea in 1952.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant Thomas Francis Casserly, III (AFSN: 20141A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action against an enemy of the United Nations as a Flight Leader of three F-51 Mustang Fighter Airplane of the 39th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, 51st Fighter-Interceptor Group, FIFTH Air Force, while engaged in a search mission for a mission B-26 aircraft near the Chinanyo Estuary on 5 April 1952. Flying at low altitude and at a very low airspeed necessitated by the nature of the mission, the three aircraft sustained hits from intense and heavy automatic weapons fire. The number three aircraft was completely disabled and the pilot bailed out. Lieutenant Casserly immediately alerted rescue facilities and began firing passes on various gun positions and enemy troops who were trying to reach the downed pilot. Though his aircraft was hit twice and was not developing full power, and despite heavy ground fire, Lieutenant Casserly continued to press his attacks against the enemy. Lieutenant Casserly's strafing attacks kept the enemy troops clear of the downed pilot and reduced the heavy ground fire, enabling a helicopter to effect the rescue. By his heroic actions in disregarding his own personal safety to save a fellow pilot from certain capture, Lieutenant Casserly reflected great credit upon himself, the FAR EAST Air Forces, and the United States Air Force.

CAVANAUGH, EDWARD JOSEPH [KIA (RVN)]

Edward Cavanaugh graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He earned a the Silver Star in both the Korean War and in Vietnam, the latter being a posthumous award when he was killed in action in Vietnam.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Edward Joseph Cavanaugh (ASN: 0-28499), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as a member of Headquarters, 1st Battalion, 31st Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division, near Kumhwa, Korea. On 22 August 1952, Captain Cavanaugh, observing a friendly patrol sustain several casualties in a firefight with an enemy force, immediately organized a patrol to go to the assistance of the wounded men. Leading the group through the intense enemy small-arms, automatic-weapons, and mortar fire, Captain Cavanaugh succeeded in removing the casualties from the battle area and carrying them to safety. Upon reaching friendly lines, Captain Cavanaugh again organized a rescue party and returned to the battle area to remove the remaining wounded personnel. Captain Cavanaugh remained in his exposed position until he had made certain that all known wounded had received medical attention and then, personally assisted in carrying the last wounded man from the area. When he had returned to friendly lines he learned that there were two men missing and he organized another party to return a third time to the withering enemy fire. With complete disregard for his personal safety, Captain Cavanaugh moved about in the area subjected to the most intense concentration of enemy fire in his determined efforts to locate the missing men. When he had approached to within thirty feet of the enemy's positions, Captain Cavanaugh was wounded in the arm and leg and was unable to move, yet he refused to be evacuated until all the other wounded had been taken care of. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Captain Cavanaugh, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

CAVE, EDMUND HARWOOD

Edmund Cave graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He retired with disability in 1962 as a U.S. Army Major.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Edmund Harwood Cave (ASN: 0-59411), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of the Heavy Mortar Company, 65th Infantry, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 26 April 1951, near Yungam-ni, Korea, a large enemy force powerfully attacked and penetrated the western portion of Lieutenant Cave's company's perimeter. Heedless of the severe hostile fire, Lieutenant Cave skillfully reorganized the defense line into a tight resisting force which succeeded in beating off all further enemy attacks. When the ammunition began to run low, Lieutenant Cave, disregarding the danger to his own safety, worked his way through the hostile fusillade to an ammunition truck located in temporarily held enemy territory and returned to his own lines. Not only once but twice did Lieutenant Cave perform this daring action, thus keeping his troops supplied with vital ammunition. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Cave, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

CHAMBERLAIN, SMITH BARTON

Smith Chamberlain graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1967 as a U.S. Army Captain.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Smith Barton Chamberlain (ASN: 0-27587), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company F, 2d Battalion, 65th Infantry, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 31 March 1951, near Choksong-myon, Korea, Lieutenant Chamberlain, well in advance of his platoon, was leading the unit in an attack on Hill 398. When the platoon came under heavy enemy mortar fire, he returned through the shelled area and brought his men forward. Reaching a wall-like cliff, the unit was forced to take cover as the enemy hurled down grenades; but Lieutenant Chamberlain, followed by only two enlisted men, aggressively climbed in the direction from which the grenades were falling and engaged the enemy. On the arrival of one squad, Lieutenant Chamberlain gallantly initiated an attack but was repulsed by the intense hostile fire. Observing another platoon flanking the enemy, he held his position and maintained a base of fire which materially aided the assaulting unit to close with and route the enemy. Lieutenant Chamberlain's gallantry and courage were an inspiration to his men and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Smith Barton Chamberlain (ASN: 0-27587), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company E, 2d Battalion, 65th Infantry, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 23 April 1951, near Onsu-dong, Korea, the Third Platoon was occupying a defensive position on Hill 150 when furiously attacked by an enemy force of battalion strength. Lieutenant Chamberlain, platoon leader, observing that his recoilless rifle positions were being overrun, raced 400 yards to reorganize that part of his platoon. Upon returning to the command post, he was cut off by hostile troops; undaunted, Lieutenant Chamberlain charged through the enemy soldiers killing five with grenades and accurate fire from his weapon. Immediately informing the company commander of the situation, he was advised to withdraw 600 yards to Hill 147. Lieutenant Chamberlain, realizing that such an action would expose the left flank of Company F, 2d Battalion, ordered a slight displacement to the highest point of Hill 150 where, spurred by his inspirational leadership, the platoon repulsed the fanatical attacks and held the strategic hill. Lieutenant Chamberlain's gallantry, courage, and outstanding tactical skill reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

CHAPMAN, HERSCHEL EUGENE

Herschel Chapman graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1970 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry), [then Second Lieutenant] Herschel Eugene Chapman (ASN: 0-62471), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters Company, (then Company B), 23rd Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, gallantry in action against the enemy on 1 February 1951 in the vicinity of Chipyeong-ni, Korea. On that date Lieutenant Chapman's platoon had the mission of attacking and seizing the high ground east of Chipyeong-ni. As the platoon approached a steep, snow covered peak, it was suddenly subjected to heavy enemy fire. When the enemy succeeded in dispersing his men, Lieutenant Chapman, with complete disregard for his personal safety, moved under the intense enemy fire, gathering his men and organizing them into a series of firing lines. His outstanding leadership enabled the entire platoon to withdraw safely to the company's sector. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Chapman, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

CHILDS, GEORGE WELDON

George Childs graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1936. He retired in 1955 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) George Weldon Childs (ASN: 0-20294), United States Army, for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action while serving with the 65th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division. During the period 5 to 11 December 1950 in the vicinity of Sudong, Korea, Lieutenant Colonel Childs organized and commanded a task force to assist in covering the withdrawal of the First United States Marine Division. Throughout the five difficult and critical days that the task force was under hostile fire, Lieutenant Colonel Childs with utter disregard for his own personal safety was always exposing himself to enemy fire in order to check fields of fire and direct gun positions. His tactical skill, conspicuous bravery, and tireless energy stimulated morale and contributed greatly to the successful evacuation of the entrapped allied forces and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to Second Lieutenant (Infantry) Frank Peter Christensen (ASN: 0-62445), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company F, 2d Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 10 February 1951, near Chumang-ni, Korea, Lieutenant Christensen's platoon was assigned the mission of rescuing a patrol that was pinned down and unable to move. As his platoon neared the beleaguered patrol intense small arms and automatic weapons fire halted his unit and wounded one of the men. With complete disregard for his own safety, Lieutenant Christensen crawled across an open area to the wounded man, and although completely exposed to heavy fire, shielded the soldier with his own body while administering first aid. Then, he carried the man fifty yards back through intense automatic fire to the comparative safety of his own platoon. Lieutenant Christensen's gallantry and concern for his men reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

CLARK, WILLIAM DORAN

William Clark graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired with disability as a U.S. Army Major in 1955. He was the son of World War II General Mark W. Clark.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) William Doran Clark (ASN: 0-27448), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of Company G, 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 16 May 1951 in the vicinity of Chunchon, Korea. On that day Captain Clark led his company on a routine patrol to probe enemy lines. As the company was crossing open terrain it was subjected to intense enemy fire which forced the men to seek cover. Noticing that two wounded men lay in an exposed position, Captain Clark and the company aidman went back, braving the deadly enemy fire to pick up the two wounded men. To get these two wounded men to safety, Captain Clark and the aidman constructed a crude stretcher and carried them out, all the time being subjected to intense enemy fire. Captain Clark's gallantry and devotion to the members of his command reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Major (Infantry), [then Captain] William Doran Clark (ASN: 0-27448), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company G, 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 23 May 1951 in the vicinity of Snagnyungal, Korea. On this date, while attacking heavily fortified enemy positions, Company G encountered heavy resistance. As the intensity of the hostile fire increased, leading elements were pinned down and unable to continue the advance. A well camouflaged enemy emplacement, directly in front of the assaulting platoon, continuously swept the terrain with automatic weapons and grenade fire, endangering the entire friendly unit. In a desperate attempt to eliminate the menace, Major Clark, with complete disregard for his own safety, advanced to neutralize the hostile position. Rapidly firing his pistol to keep the enemy down, he advanced to a point where he was able to throw a hand grenade into the emplacement, and succeeded in destroying it while killing its occupants. As a result of Major Clark's courageous actions, his unit was relieved of much pressure and enabled it to overrun the remaining opposition. The gallantry in action and selfless devotion to duty displayed by Major Clark on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

CLARKE, CARTER WELDON, JR.

Carter Clarke graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1948. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Brigadier General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Carter Weldon Clarke, Jr. (ASN: 0-57314), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 27th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy Korea. The Intelligence and Reconnaissance Platoon was reconnoitering enemy territory in the vicinity of Yechon, Korea, on 19 July 1950, when the lead vehicle was subjected to enemy machine gun and rifle fire which caused the occupants to seek cover. Observing that one of the occupants was wounded and lying on the road, Lieutenant Clarke manned a machine gun mounted on a jeep to provide covering fire as the vehicle to recover the casualty. Returning to the scene again, he assisted in the recovery of the abandoned jeep. Lieutenant Clarke's conspicuous courage and military skill reflect great credit upon himself and uphold the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

On 21 May 1951, near Songbong-dong, Korea, as the 2d Battalion moved out in an attack, the enemy counterattacked in the rear. Under the cover of an early morning haze, the hostile forces had infiltrated to within approximately 300 yards of the battalion command post. Colonel Cleary in the command post, called for tank and artillery support and moving to an exposed position under enemy fire, he personally placed the weapons in position. Under his astute guidance the counterfire of the artillery succeeded in repulsing the enemy assault. Colonel Cleary's heroism and superb leadership reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

CLEVELAND, CHARLES GOOLD

Charles Cleveland graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. In 2008 he was recognized by the Air Force as its 40th jet fighter ace of the Korean War when newly discovered documentation from the Russian Air Force, as well as eyewitness accounts by his wingmen, provided evidence to support converting one of his 'two probably destroyed' into his fifth confirmed kill. In 1984 he retired as a U.S. Air Force Lieutenant General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant Charles Goold Cleveland (AFSN: 18360A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action while serving as Pilot of an F-86 Sabrejet Fighter-bomber of the 334th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, 4th Fighter-Interceptor Group, FIFTH Air Force, in action on 21 September 1952 during military operations against an enemy of the United States by destroying his fifth enemy aircraft, a MiG-15, near Sinuiju, Korea. Flying the lead in a flight of two F-86 aircraft at 30,000 feet, Lieutenant Cleveland sighted two MiG-15s at his 1:00 o'clock position and immediately attacked, scoring hits on one of them in the tail pipe, engine, and right wing. There was an explosion with resulting fire, and the MiG lost airspeed and started to lose altitude with a long trail of smoke. Lieutenant Cleveland did not observe the crash, which was verified more than 50 years later through an analysis of admitted losses by the Russian Air Force on that day. By his gallantry and devotion to duty and to his country, Lieutenant Cleveland reflected great credit upon himself and the United States Air Force.

*COATES, WILLARD HOLBROOK [KIA (KOREA)]

Willard Coates graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He was killed in action in Korea while serving as a U.S. Army Second Lieutenant, only six months after graduation.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to Second Lieutenant (Infantry) Willard Holbrook Coates (ASN: 0-62465), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company B, 1st Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. During the night of 28 November 1950, near Sackang-ni, Korea, Lieutenant Coates' platoon came under a heavy mortar barrage. Having only verbal contact with his men, Lieutenant Coates left the comparative security of his foxhole to make a check for possible wounded men. Finding none, he nevertheless again went from position to position reassuring his men in an attempt to relieve tension. While doing so, another mortar barrage fell throughout the area. Lieutenant Coates, with complete disregard for his own personal safety, ignored the fire and kept moving from man to man until he was mortally wounded by a near hit. The gallantry displayed by Lieutenant Coates inspired his men and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

COBURN, MELVILLE BROWN

Melville Coburn graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1935. He retired in 1970 as a U.S. Army Major General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Field Artillery) Melville Brown Coburn (ASN: 0-19973), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 3d Infantry Division Artillery, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. During the early afternoon hours of 19 May 1953, while preparing to conduct artillery fire against enemy fortifications in the vicinity of Sangjin-ni, Korea. Colonel Coburn and his party were subjected to intense hostile fire. Without regard for his personal safety, Colonel Coburn dispersed the members of the party to positions that would afford cover and personal protection. He then further exposed himself by driving a truck, containing radio and fire control equipment, which was in imminent danger of being destroyed by bracketing enemy fire, to a protected area. He ordered the other members to remain protected while he moved the vehicle to a position of safety. While thus exposing himself, he was further subjected to direct fire around the vehicle. Two rounds of artillery shells landed within a few feet of the truck. As a result several thousand dollars worth of government equipment was saved. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Colonel Coburn, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

COGHILL, WILLIAM FORTUNE

William Coghill graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1947. He retired in 1975 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) William Fortune Coghill (ASN: 0-50753), United States Army, for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action as a member of the 24th Reconnaissance Company, 24th Infantry Division, in action on 12 August 1950 at Yongsan, Korea. By infiltration the enemy had reached the Division main supply route and succeeded in establishing a road block composed of anti-tank and automatic weapons which denied passage of supplies to front line units. Eight vehicles had been destroyed by the enemy in attempting to run this road block. Lieutenant Coghill, in an effort to locate exact enemy positions and to secure a re-supply of ammunition for the Reconnaissance Company, volunteered to run the road block in a jeep. In this attempt, he was seriously wounded through his leg but managed to get through the road block to his company command post. Although suffering intense pain, he refused treatment until he had informed his company commander of the enemy intelligence. This information enabled the company to successfully eliminate the road block and to open the Division main supply route. His bravery, devotion to duty and selfless action reflect the highest credit on Lieutenant Coghill and the armed forces.

COLE, CALEB ALLEN

Caleb Cole graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of June 1943. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Caleb Allen Cole (ASN: 0-26171), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of Company F, 2d Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy while in Korea, in 1951. Captain Cole was ordered to take Hill 425. Displaying outstanding courage, he, completely exposing himself to enemy fire, led his company toward the objective. At this instant an extremely heavy artillery barrage fell upon Company F, causing heavy casualties, disorganizing the company, and knocking Captain Cole off his feet, temporarily stunning him. The fanatical and determined enemy, immediately taking advantage of this situation, swarmed down the hill in a counterattack against the shattered elements of Company F. Captain Cole, regaining his feet, organized all available men and, exhibiting conspicuous bravery and courage in the face of overwhelming odds, personally led his company to meet the enemy, which was a close as 25 yards. The bravery displayed by Captain Cole inspired his men to repulse the counterattack and continue their own attack. Captain Cole assumed command of Companies E and G, which had become disorganized. With grim determination he maneuvered his composite force against the fanatical enemy, who were delivering deadly small-arms, automatic and mortar fire, in an attempt to halt the advance. Through his resolute, dynamic and aggressive leadership, Hill 425 was seized and secured. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Captain Cole, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

CONMY, JOSEPH BARTHOLOMEW, JR.

Joseph Conmy graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of January 1943. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major (Infantry) Joseph Bartholomew Conmy, Jr. (ASN: 0-25645), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters, 1st Battalion, 31st Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy near Popso-ri, Korea. On 22 May 1951, while all three companies of the 1st Battalion were actively engaged in separate actions on three hills, communications between the units were disrupted. Major Conmy, cognizant of the serious situation and aware of the possibility of the battalion being encircled by the enemy, immediately commandeered a light vehicle and moved toward the positions of Company A. During the trip, the driver was wounded by enemy gunfire, and after administering first aid, Major Conmy continued on. Reaching the company's position, he immediately directed the unit into new defensive positions and reorganized the forces. He then returned to the battalion aid station and left the wounded man and continued on toward Company B. Due to the intense enemy artillery fire, he was forced to abandon the vehicle and continue on foot. Locating Company B, he moved it into new positions and proceeded to Company C, where he repeated the process and insured that the battalion was physically tied in across the front. The aggressive leadership, initiative and complete disregard for personal safety demonstrated by Major Conmy enabled the battalion to successfully complete its mission without danger of an enemy encirclement. The gallantry displayed by Major Conmy reflects great credit on himself and is in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Infantry.

CONNOR, JOHN POWERS

John Connor graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1937. He retired in 1967 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) John Powers Connor (ASN: 0-20860), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving while serving as Commanding Officer of an Infantry Battalion of the 187th Regimental Combat Team, 11th Airborne Division, in action against the enemy in the vicinity of Inje, Korea, Korea, on 26 May 1951. Lieutenant Colonel Connor personally led his battalion across a fire-swept river and overran an enemy position. Completely heedless of the heavy volume of enemy fire, Lieutenant Connor personally accompanied the leading elements of the battalion in an assault on the hostile positions. Throughout the engagement, Lieutenant Colonel Connor moved among his men encouraging them and effectively directing their efforts to overrun the enemy position. As a result of his heroic actions and aggressive leadership, the battalion successfully executed and extremely difficult river crossing under direct enemy fire. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Lieutenant Colonel Connor, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry), [then Lieutenant Colonel] John Powers Connor (ASN: 0-20860), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 19th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, near Soum-ni, Korea, during the night of 7 - 8 November 1951. The First Battalion, holding defensive positions, was savagely attacked in the hours of darkness by a numerically superior enemy force. During the ensuing conflict, two companies became isolated from the units on the main line of resistance. Realizing this, Colonel Connor, displaying far greater concern for the welfare of his men than for his personal safety, advanced to aid the fighting infantrymen. Undaunted by the intense concentration of small arms, mortar and artillery fire with which the enemy was blasting the entire area, he made his way up the treacherously steep slope to the scene of thickest action. Immediately sizing up the situation, he moved from position to position, shouting words of encouragement and instruction to the men around him. Inspired by his fearlessness and cool, skillful leadership, the riflemen fought with renewed aggressiveness and soon sent the greatly decimated enemy hordes fleeing in panicky confusion. Colonel Connor's gallant action, exemplary leadership and selfless devotion to duty contributed immeasurably to the success of the Battalion's defenses and reflect the highest credit on himself and the United States Infantry.

CONRAD, ROBERT GRANT

Robert Conrad graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He resigned in 1953 as a U.S. Army Captain.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Field Artillery) Robert Grant Conrad (ASN: 0-27545), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters, 15th Field Artillery Battalion, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 12 February 1951 in the vicinity of Hoengsong, Korea. The 15th Field Artillery Battalion was brought under intense attack by the enemy who had broken through the lines of the supporting infantry. The firing batteries were completely surrounded by the enemy forces who were pouring extremely intense fire into the area. Captain Conrad, noting a firing vehicle sitting inactive, left his position and went to the vehicle. He discovered that the crew chief had been killed and the crew demoralized. By moving on foot ahead of the vehicle, he directed it to a position where effective fire could be placed upon the enemy. Remaining in an exposed position, Captain Conrad directed the fire until the enemy was forced to withdraw. Returning to the assembly area, he discovered that as a result of the intensity of the attacks, few of the howitzers were still in action. With complete disregard for his own safety, Captain Conrad organized the heterogeneous personnel in the area and personally directed their fire upon the enemy until the ammunition was expended. He then organized these personnel into a perimeter defense until the order to withdraw was given. The gallantry displayed by Captain Conrad throughout the entire action reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

*COOPER, ROLAND EUGENE [KIA (KOREA)]

Roland Cooper graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1951. He was killed in action as a First Lieutenant serving in Korea, little more than a year after graduation.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Roland Eugene Cooper (ASN: 0-63946), United States Army, for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action as a member of Company I, 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, on 26 October 1952 in the vicinity of Chorwon, North Korea. On that date, Lieutenant Cooper was leading a patrol into hostile territory with the mission of making contact with the enemy and taking prisoners. As they neared the objective, the patrol was ambushed by a numerically superior enemy force and immediately subjected to a murderous cross fire. Realizing the seriousness of the situation, he organized the patrol for a withdrawal and started to lead them back to friendly lines through intense enemy mortar and small arms fire. Although painfully wounded during the action, Lieutenant Cooper refused medical attention, and with complete disregard for personal safety, continued to expose himself to enemy fire while giving words of encouragement to his men and directing their withdrawal. As the patrol neared the friendly lines, he stepped on an enemy mine and was mortally wounded. He made the supreme sacrifice in his sincere concern for the welfare of his men and his inspiring and courageous leadership was directly responsible for the patrol reaching friendly lines with a minimum of casualties. The gallantry in action displayed by Lieutenant Cooper reflects great credit upon himself and is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

CORLEY, JOHN THOMAS

John Corley graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1938. One of the most decorated soldiers in history, he earned a Distinguished Service Cross in both World War II and Korea, and earned a total of EIGHT Silver Stars between those two wars. He later served as director of the Infantry School's Ranger Department at Fort Benning, Georgia, and was inducted into the Ranger Hall of Fame in 2003. He retired in 1966 as a Brigadier General.

Sixth Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Silver Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Sixth Award of the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) John Thomas Corley (ASN: 0-21325), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of the 3d Battalion, 24th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, on 11 August 1950, near Wonson, Korea. On that date, Colonel Corley was leading his Battalion in an attack when the advance elements were subjected to devastating small arms and mortar fire. Despite exposure to the deadly barrage, he calmly deployed his men to maximum advantage and directed the forward observer to a favorable position. When one of the radio men was wounded by hostile fire, he advanced to the injured man, administered first aid and carried him back for evacuation. Colonel Corley's courageous leadership and selfless devotion to his men reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Seventh Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in addition to a previously awarded Silver Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Seventh Award of the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) John Thomas Corley (ASN: 0-21325), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of the 3d Battalion, 24th Infantry Regiment, 5th Infantry Division, at Haman, Korea, on 16 September 1950. On that date, Colonel Corley's regiment launched a series of attacks against strong hostile positions. As his exhausted men organized for a final assault, he advanced to the line of departure to take personal command. Despite constant exposure to intense hostile fire, he rallied his men around him, led them in their successful assault and remained with the lead elements until recalled by the Division Commander. Colonel Corley's courageous leadership and selfless devotion to duty were an inspiration to his men and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Army.

Eighth Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Second Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in addition to a previously awarded Silver Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of an Eighth Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) John Thomas Corley (ASN: 0-21325), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of the 24th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, near Pugwon, Korea, on 30 November 1950. On that date, strong hostile forces had penetrated friendly lines on the right flank of Colonel Corley's Regiment. Advancing on foot to clarify the situation, he reorganized adjacent Infantry elements in specifically assigned sectors and then proceeded to an important river crossing to ascertain if it was still in friendly hands. After reconnoitering the area without encountering hostile forces, he dispatched a platoon of tanks to reinforce his forward Battalion and remained at the crossing until assured that all friendly lines were finally re-secured. Colonel Corley's courageous leadership, tactical skill and selfless devotion to duty are in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Army.

COUGHLIN, JOHN GARNETT

John Coughlin graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1932. He retired in 1954 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry), [then Lieutenant Colonel] John Garnett Coughlin (ASN: 0-18898), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 2 September 1950 in the Naktong River Salient, Korea. On 2 September 1950, Colonel Coughlin observed the enemy trying to establish a road block with the intent of cutting off communications between the regiment and one of its battalions. There being no friendly infantry in the vicinity, he assumed command of a tank section and directed the movement of the tanks against the enemy. Colonel Coughlin, realizing that the vision available through the periscope of the leader's hatch was limited, exposed himself to the heavy small arms, grenade and anti-tank fire to direct his tanks, thereby reducing the road block and reestablishing communications with the battalion without infantry support. The gallantry displayed by Colonel Coughlin on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) John Garnett Coughlin (ASN: 0-18898), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 25 to 27 May 1951, in the vicinity of Hyon-ni, Korea. The 2d Infantry Division was responsible for counterattacking and cutting off the escape route of three enemy divisions which had penetrated to the east. The 38th Infantry Regiment was to attack northeastward, separating itself from the rest of the division by approximately twenty miles of impassable terrain. Leading his men after the retreating enemy, Colonel Coughlin found that his advanced elements were temporarily held up by a determined and fanatic enemy rear guard. After climbing the hill under heavy enemy fire to survey the situation, he soon found himself engaged in a firefight with a well dug-in enemy. Rallying his riflemen to the attack, Colonel Coughlin, with complete disregard for his own safety, led them as they stormed the hill and drove the enemy to the north. Later he reached a position in the path of his advance occupied by the enemy who opened fire and threw hand grenades at his party. One of the hand grenades exploded so close as to wound Colonel Coughlin in the hand. So inspired were his troops by the actions of their leader that they moved forward aggressively to seize the enemy position and to close in on Hyon-ni. The next day Colonel Coughlin led his forces into Hyon-ni and sealed the enemy's escape route to the southeast. The gallant conduct, inspiring leadership, and tactical skill displayed by Colonel Coughlin reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

CRAMER, HARRY GRIFFITH [DNB (1957)]

Harry Cramer graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He was killed in a training accident in South Vietnam in 1957. When his name was added to the Vietnam Wall in 1983, he became the first U.S. Military Casualty of the Vietnam War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Harry Griffith Cramer (ASN: 0-28409), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company B, 1st Battalion, 24th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, in Korea. On 28 March 1951, friendly forces launched an attack on strong hostile positions near Haeryong, Korea. When his platoon was halted by devastating fire just short of the crest, Lieutenant Cramer charged the emplacements with fixed bayonet to inflict numerous casualties on the entrenched foe. His bold action so inspired his men that they charged through the position to drive the remaining enemy fight. Lieutenant Cramer's valorous leadership reflects the highest credit on himself and the United States Armed Forces.

*CRARY, WILLIAM BURTON [KIA (KOREA)]

William Crary graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant in the Korean War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) William Burton Crary (ASN: 0-27839), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Company B, 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action on Maekok Ridge, Korea, on 11 August 1950. On 10 August 1950, Company B, in an attack on Cloverleaf Ridge lost its company commander, and command was assumed by Lieutenant Crary. On that evening, orders were received directing that Company B attack and seize Maekok Ridge and hold it at all costs. At 0530 hours, 11 August 1950, Company B under the command of Lieutenant Crary launched an all out attack to seize the ridge. The enemy in this vicinity were well dug in and the whole area was covered by pre-planned artillery and mortar fire. In the face of intense enemy artillery, mortar and small arms fire, Lieutenant Crary, at great risk to himself, directed both heavy mortar fire and 81-mm. mortar fire upon the enemy. It was by his cool and accurate adjustment of these fires that Company B was able to seize its objective with a minimum of delay and loss of personnel. Lieutenant Crary's courageous action on this occasion is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

CRIZER, PAT WILLIAM

Pat Crizer graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1981 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Pat William Crizer (ASN: 0-28578), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company K, 3d Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 5 May 1951, near Sochon, Korea, as Captain Crizer's company was advancing to seize an enemy-held position, it was suddenly brought under heavy fire from enemy weapons. Disregarding the intense action, Captain Crizer began working his way forward to a nearby ridge and directed his men in returning fire on the enemy strongpoints. Despite the grave danger in his exposed position, he remained on the point and continued to encourage his men to move forward and assault the objective. When two squads had moved forward and eliminated much of the enemy fire, Captain Crizer left his position and led the rest of the company in an attack on the enemy positions, securing the objective. Captain Crizer's gallantry, courage, and devotion to duty reflect great credit upon himself and exemplify the highest traditions of the military service.

- Headquarters, 3d Infantry Division, General Orders No. 196 (June 17, 1951)

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Pat William Crizer (ASN: 0-28578), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company K, 3d Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 3 June 1951, near Sason-ni, Korea, Company K was struck by the full fury of a charging enemy attack with the Second Platoon sector receiving the brunt of the lethal assault. After beating back the onrushing enemy troops numerous times, the battered and casualty-riddled platoon gave way and began to fall back to more tenable positions. This action created a gap in the defensive perimeter which greatly weakened the whole line and the other platoons, seeing this, became apprehensive; threatening to fall back and cause the collapse of all opposition to the enemy. Captain Crizer, immediately aware of the desperate nature of the situation, ran through the bullet-swept terrain to the Second Platoon and standing staunchly in the open began calling instructions to the shaken troops urging them to increase their firepower and move forward against the enemy. Noting the many wounded, he ordered them evacuated and when this was done he gathered the remnants of the platoon together leading them to attack the foe. Heedless of bursting grenades which many times knocked him to the ground, he continued to engage the enemy until he realized that he would be forced to withdraw with his exhausted men. He covered their withdrawal and upon returning to the main concentration of friendly troops, he immediately organized a counterattack and led it in a charge against the enemy, forcing the hostile troops to withdraw. Captain Crizer's consummate gallantry and bold leadership reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

CROCKETT, EDWARD PAINTER

Edward Crockett graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1976 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Armor) Edward Painter Crockett (ASN: 0-62497), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as a member of Tank Company, 5th Regimental Combat Team, 24th Infantry Division, near Pisi-Gol, Korea, on 25 April 1951. Advance elements of a large enemy task force assaulted the First Battalion of the 5th Regimental Combat Team and the 555th Field Artillery Battalion just as these units were withdrawing from a blocking position and forming a road column to head south. As the enemy opened up from high ground on both sides of the road, many vehicles were damaged and blocked the road. As friendly casualties mounted, the enemy began to deploy in an enveloping movement to annihilate the entire 5th Regimental Combat Team and several other friendly units. These units were covering for the remainder of the Division, which had already been withdrawn to the south, and were assembling to the west of the enemy attack area. Lieutenant Crockett was ordered to attack south to relieve this pressure on the Infantry Battalion and the Field Artillery Battalion. He executed this maneuver with great skill and daring over the rough terrain he was forced to use due to the vehicles which blocked the road. Despite several enemy attempts to launch a general attack, Lieutenant Crockett, continuously exposed to intense fire as he lead the action from the turret of his tank, succeeded in knocking out several strategic enemy positions. Reaching the southern flank of friendly lines, he succeeded in directing intensely accurate fire on an enemy company which repeatedly tried to break through the lines. This enemy company was completely annihilated. The enemy's psychological advantage, gained through the devastating surprise of his initial attack was eliminated by Lieutenant Crockett's brilliant defensive leadership. Under the protective fire which he directed, the beleaguered units took care of their wounded and completely reorganized while the remainder of the 5th Regimental Combat Team and other units withdrew over an alternate en route to the west. Once again, the enemy made a savage attack in an attempt to destroy the column. With utter disregard for his own safety, Lieutenant Crockett directed his tanks in firing point-blank into the enemy and also in destroying the abandoned vehicles and equipment. Lieutenant Crockett's courageous actions and brilliant leadership enabled his regiment and other friendly units to withdraw safely from almost certain annihilation and inflicted severe casualties on the enemy. These actions reflect the highest credit on himself and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

CRONKHITE, WILLIS DODGE, JR.

Willis Cronkhite graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Willis Dodge Cronkhite, Jr. (ASN: 0-28269), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company F, 2d Battalion, 65th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On the morning of 28 October 1952, Company F, 2d Battalion, commanded by Captain Cronkhite, attacked an enemy held position, "Jackson Heights", in the vicinity of Kangong-Ni, Korea. Captain Cronkhite's company came under intense hostile mortar and artillery fire, causing elements of the squads to become separated and intermingled. With complete disregard for his personal safety, he moved through the hail of fire and reorganized his company. He then continued to direct his company in the attack. As the company neared the crest of the hill, the mortar fire increased and enemy machine guns swept the approaches to the objective. Braving the enemy's concentrated fire, Captain Cronkhite personally led his men forward in the assault. In the ensuing action, Company F completely overran the enemy's positions and seized the objective. Although still harassed by small arms fire, he continued to move among his men, directing their effective reorganization on the position and overseeing the immediate re-supply of ammunition. Captain Cronkhite's outstanding gallantry and devotion to duty reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

CROSBY, STANLEY WARFIELD, JR. [KIA (KOREA)]

Stanley Crosby graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1947. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant in the Korean War.

Synopsis: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Stanley Warfield Crosby, Jr. (ASN: 0-50845), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Company B, 5th Regimental Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea on 10 August 1950. First Lieutenant Crosby volunteered to lead a patrol in action against the enemy and was killed while rushing a machine gun that had killed and wounded several members of his platoon. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Crosby, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

CUMMINGS, BARNARD, JR. [MIA (KOREA) KIA]

Barnard Cummings graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He was missing in action after a mission in Korea little more than a year after graduation.

Synopsis: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Barnard Cummings, Jr. (ASN: 0-59420), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as a Platoon Leader with the 8th Army Ranger Company (Airborne), 8213th Army Unit, in action against the enemy in North Korea, from 24 to 26 November 1950. Assigned to Task Force DOLVIN, First Lieutenant Cummings platoon led the company attack and immediately came under enemy fire. First Lieutenant Cummings quickly led his men from the middle of a frozen rice paddy to a covered position where they could support the advance of the first platoon. Four rounds from an enemy tank knocked out an assault section, one-third of the platoon, as First Lieutenant Cummings moved from man to man, exhorting them to greater efforts in their attempt to destroy the enemy. It was only by his leadership and personal example that he was able to extricate his platoon from its position, and, with the first platoon, which had now joined him, continue to the company objective. The following day the Ranger company, supported by a tank platoon, was again called upon to lead the assault of the Task Force. The tanks transported the company to the tank platoon firing position. Eight hundred yards of open rice paddy lay ahead and immediately the Chinese opened up with heavy small arms and mortar fire. Again, First Lieutenant Cummings was in the forefront of the assault, encouraging his men by his personal heroic example. Hill 205 fell to the Ranger Company around 1500 on 25 November 1950, and the company reorganized and commenced to dig in, in an effort to brace itself against the expected counterattacks. Shortly after they had secured the objective, the friendly troops repulsed a series of five fanatical counterattacks, in which the enemy came to within grenade-throwing distance of the company perimeter. Throughout this action, First Lieutenant

SILVER STAR (KOREAN WAR)

Cummings, with utter fearlessness, constantly exposed himself to enemy fire as he left his position of relative safety to move about among his men, shouting words of encouragement and directing their fire. Despite the fact that the onrushing enemy were almost upon his position, First Lieutenant Cummings refused to withdraw, and when last seen was providing covering fire for his men. The gallantry and selfless devotion to duty displayed by Lieutenant Cummings throughout this action reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

*CUMMINGS, THOMPSON [MIA (KOREA) KIA]

Thompson Cummings graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, Class of 1952. He was listed as Missing In Action following a mission in Korean little more than a year after graduation. His remains have never been recovered.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Thompson Cummings (ASN: 0-66577), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as a Platoon Leader with Company A, 1st Battalion, 223d Infantry Regiment, 40th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in North Korea, on 24 July 1953. While leading a patrol at Heartbreak Ridge, First Lieutenant Cummings and his patrol were fired upon by enemy machine guns, mortars, and small arms. He ordered the patrol to withdraw and, while one automatic rifleman covered the withdrawal, he exposed himself to intense enemy fire. His heroic and resolute actions enabled the patrol to return to friendly positions and thus saved the lives of several men. The great courage and outstanding devotion to duty displayed by First Lieutenant Cummings won for him the admiration of his superiors and subordinates alike, reflecting great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

D

DANIELS, HENRY FORCE

Henry Daniels graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1940. He retired in 1961 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Henry Force Daniels (ASN: 0-23295), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 2d Battalion, 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy during the period 21 September to 13 October 1951 in the vicinity of Suim-myon, Korea. On these dates he was commanding an infantry unit whose mission was to attack and secure Hills 851 and 931, the principal concentrations of enemy strength in the battle of "Heartbreak Ridge". Colonel Daniels assumed command of the unit after it had suffered extremely heavy losses in unsuccessful assaults. Through his determined and aggressive leadership friendly forces were able to break through the final defense on Hill 931 in a night attack of unexcelled ferocity. He lived with his troops throughout the campaign, guiding, coordinating and inspiring them to greater efforts and into final victory. The gallantry and selfless devotion to the welfare of his men displayed by Colonel Daniels on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

DAVIS, CORBIN JAMES

Corbin Davis graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired with disability from war wounds in 1952 as a U.S. Army Captain.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Corbin James Davis (ASN: 0-28570), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters Company, 3d Battalion, 15th Infantry, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 19 November 1950, near Pokhoe-Ryong, Korea, Lieutenant Davis was serving as a staff observer with a reinforced rifle platoon which was on combat patrol. The patrol was pinned down by fire from superior numbers of enemy forces, resulting in the death of the patrol leader and seriously wounding a squad leader and the forward observer of the 4.2-inch mortar platoon. Lieutenant Davis, without regard for his personal safety, personally led the wounded squad leader to a covered position. Constantly exposing himself to enemy observation and fire, Lieutenant Davis assumed command of the platoon and also the duties of the forward observer, placing accurate mortar fire on the enemy who were organizing for a counterattack. This action resulted in the dispersal and disorganization of the enemy. Lieutenant Davis' initiative, fearless leadership, and gallantry reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Captain Corbin James Davis (ASN: 0-28570), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of Company L, 3d Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy near Yongin, Korea. On 29 January 1951, Captain Davis was leading his company in an attack upon a determined enemy strongly entrenched on Hill 381, the dominating terrain feature in the battalion zone of attack. Heavy mortar, small arms, and automatic weapons fire were being placed on his company, causing many casualties. When only a portion of the objective had been secured, the attack faltered due to intense enemy fire and the rapidly dwindling ammunition supply. The numerically superior enemy took advantage of this to launch a counterattack on the left flank of the company. Captain Davis, disregarding his personal safety, moved to the flank and, while facing a fanatical charge, killed five enemy soldiers with his carbine, thereby inspiring his men not only to hold the flank but to attack. Captain Davis then led his men forward in a bayonet charge, inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy and routing them from their well-entrenched positions to secure Hill 381. When ordered to withdraw to positions more favorable for a night defense, he personally evacuated many of the wounded and dead, although under constant heavy fire. He then skillfully established a perimeter defense, ably directing his men until he was wounded by mortar fire which fractured both arms, necessitating his evacuation. The courageous leadership of Captain Davis reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

DAY, STEPHEN ALBION

Stephen Day graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry), [then First Lieutenant] Stephen Albion Day (ASN: 0-27810), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters Company (then Company E), 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 31 August 1950 to 2 September 1950 in the vicinity of Tugok, Korea. During that period the enemy was crossing the Naktong River in overwhelming numbers, and had forced our troops to withdraw. Captain Day constantly moved back and forth through the intense enemy fire to distribute ammunition and encourage his men. While the company was effecting a withdrawal the company officers became casualties, and Captain Day assumed command. He organized a small force to provide covering fire for the remainder of the company, and repeatedly exposed himself to the intense enemy fire to assist in carrying the wounded to positions of safety. When he arrived at the new company command post and found it under attack, he placed the wounded on vehicles for evacuation and led the company in a seven mile march to join the rest of the battalion. The next day, after receiving arms, ammunition and replacements, he led an attack to regain the lost ground. His intrepidity, keen judgment and devotion to duty and to his men reflect the highest credit upon himself are in keeping with the fine traditions of the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

DEGAVRE, CHESTER BRADDOCK

Chester DeGavre graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1933. He retired in 1963 as a U.S. Army Brigadier General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Chester Braddock DeGavre (ASN: 0-19262), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters, 65th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. Colonel DeGavre, Commanding Officer, 65th Infantry Regiment, at approximately 1400 hours, 5 February 1953, was proceeding on a road near Chongyon-ni, Korea, to inspect forward positions when he observed enemy artillery fire falling across a river from his position. He ordered the driver to proceed quickly through the area, but upon crossing the river, he saw an abandoned vehicle and other equipment along the road. Colonel DeGavre instructed his driver to proceed down the road to safety, then he and the radio operator searched the area for casualties. As he examined the empty vehicle, the enemy artillery fire increased in intensity until he was forced to take cover in a dry stream bed. Realizing the gravity of the situation, Colonel DeGavre fearlessly exposed himself to the barrage in order to find the former occupants of the empty vehicle and to clear the area. He located the men in the dry river bed near the crossing, and as the enemy fire decreased in intensity, he directed them out of the shelled area to safety. Colonel DeGavre remained in the exposed position to direct removal of the valuable equipment, and did not seek safety until assured that the area was cleared. By his calm and fearless manner, Colonel DeGavre insured the safety of the personnel and saved valuable equipment from damage in the shelled area. The courage and devotion to duty displayed by Colonel DeGavre on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

DELAMATER, BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, III

Benjamin Delamater graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1940. He retired in 1970 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Benjamin Franklin Delamater, III (ASN: 0-23305), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 1st Battalion, 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, near Kumsong, Korea, on 15 October 1951. While with the forward elements of his battalion near an enemy occupied hill, Colonel Delamater observed a platoon well out in front of all other friendly units that was under heavy enemy small arms and mortar fire. Using his field glasses from his position in the front lines, he noticed that the men appeared to be disorganized and without a leader. With complete disregard for his own safety, he began working his way forward to the group. Enemy machine gunners swept his immediate area with devastating bursts but he continued to advance. An enemy mortar round exploded nearby and its concussion knocked him off his feet. Then his helmet was knocked off by small arms fire. But, undaunted he continued to move forward and, by alternately creeping and crawling, succeeded in reaching the isolated platoon. There he learned that the platoon was a unit from an adjacent battalion, and that their platoon leader had been seriously wounded. Still under heavy enemy mortar and machine gun fire, Colonel Delamater reorganized the group and, assuring himself that no wounded were left behind, led the platoon back to friendly lines. Once back in friendly territory, he skillfully directed mortar and artillery fire on the enemy positions which had fired on him during his rescue mission, destroying many of them. Colonel Delamater's courageous action, outstanding leadership and aggressive initiative reflect the highest credit on himself and the United States Infantry.

DESHAZO, THOMAS EDWARD

Thomas deShazo graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1926. He retired with disability in 1963 as a U.S. Army Major General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Field Artillery) Thomas Edward deShazo (ASN: 0-16479), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer, Division Artillery, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 24 May 1951 in the vicinity of Choltul, Korea. Colonel deShazo was proceeding northward with an armored task force organized by the Division Commander to effect a thirty mile penetration into enemy--held territory to cut off the remnants of three enemy corps which had just been defeated by the 2d Infantry Division. At a point along the narrow, winding road where intense enemy artillery, mortar and automatic weapons fire halted the column near a defile, Colonel deShazo, with complete disregard for his own safety, moved to the head of the column in an unarmed vehicle to lead the advance. Later, in the face of a sharp firefight and intense enemy artillery and mortar fire, he succeeded again in keeping the column moving by organizing the lead elements and encouraging the men to put forth their greatest efforts. The outstanding courage and leadership demonstrated by Colonel deShazo resulted in the successful accomplishment of the mission. The gallant conduct displayed by Colonel deShazo reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

DICKERSON, CHARLES FREDERICK, JR.

Charles Dickerson graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

Synopsis: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Charles Frederick Dickerson, Jr. (ASN: 0-62589), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of an Infantry Company of the 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea in 1950. First Lieutenant Dickerson led his company to safety from a mined area in which they were trapped. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Dickerson, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

DIELENS, AUGUST JOHN, JR.

August Dielens graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1971 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

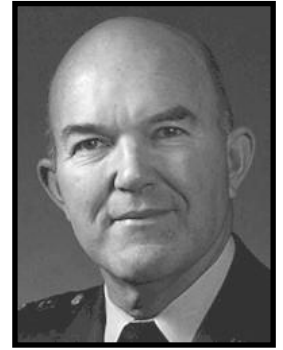

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) August John Dielens, Jr. (ASN: 0-62563), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as a Platoon Leader with Company F, 2d Battalion, 8th Cavalry (Infantry) Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action against the enemy near Yangji, Korea, on 25 January 1951. First Lieutenant Dielens' platoon was protecting one flank of Company F's perimeter against repeated Chinese assault. In one of the continuing series of attacks, the platoon's machine gun position was overrun. First Lieutenant Dielens immediately organized an assault team and led a charge to regain the weapon. Using grenades and bayonets, First Lieutenant Dielens and his men destroyed the enemy force and recaptured the machine gun. The heroic action of First Lieutenant Dielens materially aided the maintaining of the defense perimeter against terrific pressure exerted by a numerically superior enemy. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Dielens, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

DINGEMAN, ROBERT EDWARD

Robert Dingeman graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1975 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Field Artillery) Robert Edward Dingeman (ASN: 0-27380), United States Army, for gallantry in connection with military operations against an opposing armed force while serving with Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 8th Field Artillery Battalion, 25th Infantry Division, in Korea. During the early morning hours of 27 November 1950, Captain Dingeman's Battery was alerted for an imminent hostile attack. Although under the direct observation and fire of the enemy, he made a detailed reconnaissance of a nearby hill to establish an outpost line. When the infiltrating enemy emplaced a machine gun on a commanding ridge, he repeatedly exposed himself to the deadly fire to encourage his men and to direct more effectively the perimeter defense. By skillfully coordinating the action of the supporting infantry with that of his own command, he enabled friendly forces to regain the initiative and drive the foe to flight. Captain Dingeman's inspirational leadership, military ability and staunch devotion to duty are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

DOLVIN, WELBORN GRIFFIN

Welborn Dolvin graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1939. He earned his first of four Silver Stars in World War II as a Battalion Commander, and earned the Distinguished Service Cross and three more Silver Stars in Korea. He was a Chief of Staff during the Vietnam War, culminating service in three wars, and retired in 1975 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant General.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Armor) Welborn Griffin Dolvin (ASN: 0-21980), United States Army, for gallantry in connection with military operations against an opposing armed force while serving with the 89th Medium Tank Battalion, 25th Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy near Chinju, Korea, during the period 25 September to 29 September 1950. On this date, Colonel Dolvin was placed in command of a task force consisting of a tank and infantry team with supporting service units and assigned the mission of crossing the Nam River in the vicinity of Chinju, Korea, and attacking along the axis of advance to Kunsan. On the morning of 25 September 1950, lead elements of the task force moved out and established contact with another task force which was attacking north toward Chinju. When reports indicated that a bridge was damaged, Colonel Dolvin made a personal reconnaissance to locate a crossing site for heavy equipment. He found a site and directed the crossing. He then led the task force in a rapid advance, repeatedly exposing himself to hostile fire to direct elimination of pockets of enemy resistance. By late in the day of 25 September the entire task force had completed the crossing of the Nam River. On the morning of 26 September 1950, Colonel Dolvin again led the task force in a rapid advance toward the primary objective, negotiating numerous enemy mine fields, strongpoints, and natural barriers. Relentlessly pursuing the retreating foe, the task force continued its advance on 27 September and 28 September 1950, capturing many prisoners and large amounts of enemy material. On 29 September 1950 the task force had successfully completed its mission, having covered one hundred and thirty-eight miles in four days. Throughout the period 25 September to 29 September 1950, Colonel Dolvin, although frequently subjected to hostile fire, remained with the lead elements of the task force by his courage, physical stamina, and leadership. The gallantry displayed by Colonel Dolvin reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Third Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Second Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Third Award of the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Armor) Welborn Griffin Dolvin (ASN: 0-21980), United States Army, for gallantry in connection with military operations against an opposing armed force while serving as Commanding Officer of the 89th Medium Tank Battalion, 25th Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy near Ipsok, Korea, from 26 to 27 November 1950. On 25 November Colonel Dolvin directed Task Force DOLVIN in an attack north of Ipsok and drove the enemy forces back some five thousand yards. During this attack, he maintained a tactical command post within five hundred yards of the leading elements, and was continually present with his forward units under direct enemy fire. On the night of 25 - 26 November, the enemy forces were heavily reinforced, and his Task Force became part of Task Force WILSON. Task Force WILSON consolidated positions captured with Task Force DOLVIN, but Colonel Dolvin continued to command the lead units of the combined Task Force. During the night of 26 - 27 November, Task Force WILSON was attacked by elements of the 39th Chinese Communist Army in overwhelming strength. The enemy attack was in sufficient strength to envelop Task Force WILSON and reached as far back as the artillery positions. Two enemy battalions attacked to the front, one battalion slashed at the vital Command Post area, and another battalion attacked the reserve battalion of Task Force WILSON some one thousand yards in the rear of the Command Post. Colonel Dolvin personally conducted the fighting against the front line and against the envelopment of the command Post throughout the night. He maneuvered his elements skillfully, encouraged them by personal example and finally stopped the attack against the Command Post at daylight, at which time it had reached within one hundred yards of the area. Shortly after daylight, Task Force WILSON was ordered to withdraw. In order to accomplish this withdrawal without undue loss of men and equipment, it was necessary for Colonel Dolvin to hold the forward positions for eight hours against heavy enemy pressure in order to sustain. His gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

SILVER STAR (KOREAN WAR)

Fourth Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Third Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Fourth Award of the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Armor) Welborn Griffin Dolvin (ASN: 0-21980), United States Army, for gallantry in connection with military operations against an opposing armed force while serving as Commanding Officer of the 89th Medium Tank Battalion, 25th Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 6 to 11 February 1951. During that period, Lieutenant Colonel Dolvin's Task Force launched a series of determined assaults on strong hostile positions north of Anyang, Korea. On one occasion, when the advance was blocked by a mine field, he advanced through the obstacle, directed its neutralization and led the force forward to renew the attack. Although consistently exposed to heavy enemy fire, he remained with the attack elements and supervised the tactical deployment and fire of the force so effectively that the enemy were driven into a virtual rout. Lieutenant Colonel Dolvin's calm demeanor, aggressive spirit and unrelenting devotion to duty were an inspiration to his men and are in keeping with the high traditions of the United States Army.

DOODY, JOHN JOSEPH

John Doody graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1948. He retired in 1978 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) John Joseph Doody (ASN: 0-57630), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of Company B, 1st Battalion, 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action near Waegwan, Korea, on 19 September 1950. During the assault crossing of the Nakdong River his company was subjected to intense mortar, machine gun and small arms fire. As the boats neared the enemy shore they became intermingled and their occupants disorganized. Utterly disregarding his own safety Captain Doody moved fearlessly among his men directing them to positions on the shore. Following the landing he set up a base of fire with his mortars and led a small group of his men in an assault on two enemy machine guns, destroying both guns and crew. Returning to the beach he organized a large body of his troops and fearlessly led the attack against the strongly entrenched enemy. Pressing the attack he continued to lead his men far into enemy territory inflicting heavy casualties, destroying much equipment and securing a beachhead which permitted the continued crossing of the river by succeeding assault troops. Captain Doody's courageous actions, devotion to duty and inspiring leadership served well to inspire his men in their gallant assault and reflect the greatest credit on himself and the United States Infantry.

DOODY, RICHARD FRANKLIN

Richard Doody graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, Class of 1952. He retired in 1971 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

Synopsis: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Richard Franklin Doody, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with the 35th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea, on 30 May 1953. First Lieutenant Doody sent out a night patrol which came under heavy enemy mortar fire. The patrol was able to return to friendly lines except for one wounded soldier who had been left behind. First Lieutenant Doody went out to recover the wounded man, administering first aid and shielding him against enemy artillery fire with his own body, himself sustaining a shrapnel wounds. Despite his injuries, he dragged his wounded comrade to safety. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Doody, without regard barrage. Immediately he proceeded with his driver through the crucial hostile fire to the scene of the conflict. Upon arriving at the base of the hill, he ordered his driver to seek cover and ignoring the fierce enemy fire, he advanced by foot to the outpost. Upon arriving at the critical position, he disregarded his personal safety, ignored the insistence of his officers that he seek cover, and fearlessly crossed the shrapnel-torn area as he encouraged his men and inspected their positions to insure himself that they could repulse the enemy aggression. The men became so inspired by Colonel Drain's presence, daring actions, and encouraging words that they quickly rallied, delivered a murderous volume of fire upon the foe, and forced them to retreat with great confusion. Colonel Drain's outstanding gallantry, exemplary leadership, and fearlessness reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

DOUGHTIE, CLAUDE HOLT, JR.

Claude Doughtie graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1979 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Second Lieutenant (Field Artillery) Claude Holt Doughtie, Jr. (ASN: 0-62535), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Battery B, 39th Field Artillery Battalion, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 3 October 1951, Company F of the 15th Infantry was given the mission of attacking and securing Hill 400, near Chorwon, Korea. Lieutenant Doughtie, attached as a forward observer with the company, noted that all but one of F Company's officers were wounded in the assault phase of the attack. Realizing the need for additional leadership, he left his comparatively safe position and led the center portion of the company in an assault up the ridge until the objective was secured. Completing this action, Lieutenant Doughtie returned to the rear of the company and led ammunition and re-supply units through enemy mortar and artillery fire to the top of the ridge. By disregarding his own safety and initiating effective leadership at a crucial phase in the assault, he was highly instrumental in the success of the mission. The gallantry and exemplary actions of Lieutenant Doughtie reflect the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Gordon James Duquemin (ASN: 0-50784), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 5th Regimental Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On the night of 25 - 26 August 1950, elements of the companies were attacked by a numerically superior enemy force supported by artillery and mortar fire in the vicinity of Sobuk-san, Korea. After several hours of continuous fighting, forward elements of one company started moving to the rear. Captain Duquemin, proceeding through the concerted fire, stopped the withdrawal and moved the men to the left flank of the hill where he reorganized and deployed them in a counterattack to regain the lost position. The company against started to withdraw. He again halted the movement and reorganized the men into a fighting unit to continue the battle. Captain Duquemin's exemplary courage, leadership and selfless devotion to duty reflect great credit upon himself and uphold the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

Ernest Easterbrook graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1931. He retired in 1967 as a U.S. Army Major General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Ernest Fred Easterbrook (ASN: 0-18537), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On the morning of 17 June 1953, in the vicinity of Chat-Kol, Korea, elements of the Intelligence and Reconnaissance Platoon and Company K were assigned the mission of repairing friendly positions damaged by earlier enemy action. Colonel Easterbrook, Commanding Officer of the 7th Infantry Regiment, was on an inspection tour of the area when enemy mortar and artillery wounded several of the group. Refusing to seek cover, he quickly analyzed the situation and went directly into the impact area. He quickly checked the casualties and insured their rapid evacuation. As the barrage continued, his calm military manner was a source of inspiration to the men. He spoke with the wounded, comforted them and instilled the men with the importance of their mission, causing them to redouble their efforts despite the hazardous conditions under which they toiled. His courageous actions at this time not only served as an inspiration to the group but also contributed materially to the success of the mission and the morale of the men. Colonel Easterbrook's outstanding gallantry and devotion to duty reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

EMERSON, HENRY EVERETT

Henry Emerson graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1947. He retired as a U.S. Army Lieutenant General in 1977.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry), [then First Lieutenant] Henry Everett Emerson (ASN: 0-50868), United States Army, for gallantry in action against the enemy while serving with Company A, 1st Battalion, 5th Regimental Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division, in action in the vicinity of Sobuk-san, Korea, from 23 August to 11 September 1950. When his company commander and all other officers in the company had been killed during an attack near Sobuk Mountain, Captain Emerson assumed command, reorganized the company and coolly reported the situation to the battalion commander. When ordered to continue the attack, he led the depleted unit up the rugged slopes of the towering mountain and secured his objective. After repelling several vicious counterattacks, the company exhausted their ammunition, but Captain Emerson refused to give up his position until he reported the facts and received permission to withdraw. By his forceful leadership and tactical skill, he succeeded breaking contact with the enemy and withdrew to a more secure position. The following day Captain Emerson renewed the attack and seized his objective, which he organized and secured under heavy enemy fire. Thereafter and until 11 September, the enemy made twenty-seven savage, slashing, determined efforts to retake the position but without success. On four of these days Captain Emerson was the only officer present in the company, his platoon leaders being wounded faster than they could be replaced. However, by his determination and personal example of daring and heroism, in laying wire and mine fields, re-supplying ammunition and deploying his steadily dwindling force and their weapons, he so inspired his men that never once did they yield ground to the enemy. He constantly exposed himself to enemy machine-gun, small-arms, mortar, artillery and grenade fire. Several times he was knocked down by the force of explosions from enemy mortars or artillery, but he never lost control of his unit and moved from position to position frequently encouraging his men and directing their fire. His aggressive leadership was a deciding factor in holding the vital position. The gallantry displayed by Captain Emerson reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

SILVER STAR (KOREAN WAR)

ERLER, LEO JAMES

Leo Erler graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of April 1917. He retired in 1955 as a U.S. Air Force Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel Leo James Erler (AFSN: AO-196840), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action while serving with Headquarters, FAR EAST Air Forces, in Korea during the period July through November 1950. Colonel Erler was responsible for the supervision of Air Installations development in Korea and assuring the constant, uninterrupted flow of necessary material to forward air bases. His personal visits to forward airfields and frequent flights in the combat areas enabled him to plan and accomplish the earliest use of selected airfield sites and proved of great value to the United States Air Force. During these actions he was frequently subjected to enemy ground fire. By his exemplary leadership and courageous conduct, Colonel Erler aided materially in the United Nations' campaign against the North Korean enemy, reflecting credit upon himself and upholding traditions of the military service.

He was shot down during the Korean War and was held as a Prisoner of War. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Air Force Major General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel Andrew Julius Evans, Jr. (AFSN: FR-4072/0-23882), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action against an armed enemy as Group Leader of sixteen F-84 type aircraft of the 49th Fighter-Bomber Group, FIFTH Air Force, on 14 March 1953. On that date, Colonel Evans led an attack against heavily defended rail-bridges in northernmost North Korea. Leading the group directly to the target, Colonel Evans set-up his bomb pattern and proceeded to dive onto the target, positively marking it for the others in the group. Pulling out of the bomb run, Colonel Evans skillfully avoided the intense anti-aircraft fire, and proceeded south of the now totally destroyed rail-bridge to further harass the enemy. Sighting numerous boxcars and several vehicles, Colonel Evans called for a strafing attack. This attack continued under his competent direction until fuel consumption necessitated a quick return to the base. During this highly successful mission, the entire rail-bridge was destroyed, sixty-seven boxcars were damaged, one vehicle was destroyed, and four vehicles were damaged. Through his keen leadership and flying ability and exemplary devotion to duty, Colonel Evans was instrumental in seriously hampering the enemy's activity in that area, and reflected great credit upon himself, the FAR EAST Air Forces, and the United States Air Force.

FARLEY, CLARE FRANCIS

At 5 feet, 4 1/2 inches tall, Clare Farley barely made the height requirement for West Point. He graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of June 1943. He retired in 1968 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major (Corps of Engineers) Clare Francis Farley (ASN: 0-25915), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Executive Officer, 2d Engineer Combat Battalion, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 24 to 26 May 1951, in the vicinity of Changnamni and Umyangni, Korea. Major Farley was given the mission of organizing two companies of the 2d Engineer Combat Battalion and an attached light equipment platoon in the vicinity of Hangye, Korea, proceeding to Umyangni, and there constructing floating bridging across the Soyang river to permit continuation of an attack by the X Corps. On 24 May he attempted to reconnoiter the bridge site but was brought under enemy fire and forced to draw back. On 25 May an attempt was made to move the engineer elements to the Soyang River by running the 10 miles of road which the enemy controlled, to the bridge site under cover of darkness. The convoy came under heavy enemy small arms and mortar fire from an estimated enemy regiment in the vicinity of Changnamni and after sustaining heavy casualties was forced to turn back. Undaunted by two successive setbacks, and the lowering morale of his troops because of heavy losses and extreme fatigue, Major Farley organized a smaller group of engineers and succeeded in running another enemy roadblock of small arms fire during the evening of 25 May. The following morning, after going without sleep for 48 hours, Major Farley organized his small engineer force and initiated the construction of the bridge while the site was still under enemy mortar fire. As a result of his continued inspiring leadership through this extended period the bridge across the Soyang river was completed by 1200 hours, 26 May 1951, and the attack of the X Corps continued. The gallantry and fortitude displayed by Major Farley reflect great credit upon himself and uphold the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

and disposition. As he proceeded down the road, his patrol came under intense fire from an estimated enemy company firmly entrenched on a hill. He deployed his men in such a fashion as to bring a maximum amount of fire power to bear on the enemy positions, inflicting heavy casualties and forcing the enemy to withdraw. During the entire action he unhesitatingly exposed himself to the heavy hostile fire, and so inspired his men that they soon routed the numerically superior enemy force. The patrol then continued on to accomplish its mission, and returned with considerable valuable information. The gallantry displayed by Lieutenant Fern on this occasion reflects the highest great upon himself is in keeping with the fine traditions of the military service.

FIFE, THOMAS WILFRED

Thomas Fife graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1969 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Armor), [then Second Lieutenant] Thomas Wilfred Fife (ASN: 0-62388), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company B, 72d Tank Battalion, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 19 September 1950 in the vicinity of Yongsang, Korea. On that date, Lieutenant Fife, was in command of a platoon of tanks charged with the support of Infantry Elements in the defense of the Yongsang perimeter, the enemy attacked his position with superior numbers and a fanatic determination to penetrate through to the Division Main Supply Route. The enemy attack was successful in routing the friendly elements and inflicting casualties to the extent that the organization and combat effectiveness of the positions was completely disrupted. Realizing the seriousness of the situation Lieutenant Fife disregarded the heavy enemy fire and dismounted from the protective armor of his tank to reorganize the foot elements. After reorganization he remained on the ground and successfully reestablished the positions by controlling both the foot elements and his tanks by means of radio communications. During this same date while engaged in a friendly attack against the enemy, Lieutenant Fife again displayed gallantry by refusing evacuation after being wounded. The leadership, loyalty and gallant actions demonstrated on that day by Lieutenant Fife are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

While directing the deployment of his company to block an expected enemy tank attack from the south, Captain Flynn became suddenly aware of enemy tanks entering the northeast section of the city. Immediately turning to the new threat, Captain Flynn, as the leading tanks appeared. Fearlessly moved down to the exposed street and placed his men in new positions. Disregarding his own safety, he organized a bazooka team and in the face of deadly enemy cannon and machine gun fire from two approaching enemy tanks, directed the bazooka fire in knocking out the lead tank. Although seriously wounded by enemy shell fragments, Captain Flynn refused to be evacuated and courageously continued to direct bazooka fire until the second enemy tank was disabled and the enemy attack repulsed. His fearless behavior and extreme devotion to duty enabled his company to hold its positions and resulted in the destruction of considerable enemy equipment and personnel. Captain Flynn's gallantry reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

FORREST, JOHN FRANKLIN

John Forrest graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He retired in 1983 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) John Franklin Forrest, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as a Platoon Leader in an Infantry Company of the 5th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea, on September 14 - 15, 1950. While defending a hill position near Waegwan, Korea, First Lieutenant Forrest's company was suddenly brought under a heavy attack by a numerically superior enemy force that disorganized and scattered his unit and threatened to result in a complete rout. Although wounded, First Lieutenant Forrest refused to be evacuated and moved from his protective cover to better direct the fire of his men. Although suffering intense pain, he directed a skillful defense of his position and led a successful counterattack. His extreme courage and fearless leadership reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) John Franklin Forrest, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as the Platoon Leader in an Infantry Company of the 5th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action against the enemy near Pugu-dong, Korea, on 12 October 1950. First Lieutenant Forrest commanded a lead platoon mounted on tanks that was assigned as the foremost element in a battalion attack formation. When his platoon was engaged by enemy fire, he dismounted his men and fearlessly maneuvered them through 300 yards of enemy territory to reach the dominating enemy positions. Stopping to render emergency medical treatment to several of his men who had been wounded, First Lieutenant Forrest, having penetrated the enemy's main line of resistance, he then courageously gathered his six remaining men and briefed them on his plan of surprise action to rout the enemy. Deploying them widely he led them yelling and screaming into the enemy's midst. This ruse so completely baffled and surprised the enemy into believing they main positions had fallen that they began a general withdrawal. First Lieutenant Forrest's personal courage, outstanding leadership, and daring devotion to duty were directly responsible for routing and driving back a large enemy force, knocking out six anti-tank guns and killing more than 50 enemy. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Forrest, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

FOX, JOHN EDMUND

John Fox graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired with disability in 1971 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry), [then Second Lieutenant] John Edmund Fox (ASN: 0-62392), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company F, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 16 September 1950. in the vicinity of Chobigok, Korea. First Lieutenant Fox was leading his platoon in support of the other platoons of the company in an assault upon hostile positions. Met by heavy enemy automatic weapons and small arms fire the lead platoons were brought to a halt on the ridge of a mountain. Resolutely and quickly grasping the initiative, Lieutenant Fox led his men in front of the skirmish line and, shouting encouragement to his men, directed intense fire upon the enemy strong points. Inspired by his example and daring courage and leadership, his platoon surged forward and rushed the enemy positions, First Lieutenant Fox personally killing three of the enemy and pinning others in their holes, which resulted in their capture. Though painfully wounded in both legs by an enemy grenade, he continued to rally his men to greater effort until the objective had been seized. The gallantry displayed by First Lieutenant Fox reflects the highest great upon himself is in keeping with the fine traditions of the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

FREEMAN, PAUL LAMAR, JR.

Paul Freeman graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1929. He retired in 1967 as a U.S. Army General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Paul Lamar Freeman, Jr. (ASN: 0-17704), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 3 September 1950 in the vicinity of Changnyong, Korea. On that date the 3d Battalion of his regiment had positions astride a road which was serving as the Main Supply Route for enemy forces in that area. The enemy during the preceding several days had been probing our defensive lines by repeated attacks in strength at various positions and had created weak points in the line. By 3 September 1950 it appeared that an enemy breakthrough of critical proportions was imminent along the line held by a rifle company of his regiment. Upon receiving intelligence of this situation, Colonel Freeman immediately went forward to the threatened area. Here he fearlessly and repeatedly exposed himself to the hostile artillery and small arms fire which fell all about him. Moving from position to position he personally reorganized the disheartened troops, who observing their commander's fearless actions, were inspired to greater efforts. Under his superb leadership the inspired troops rallied and stiffened, hurling back the enemy assault. As a result of Colonel Freeman's intrepid leadership and immediate grasp of a critical situation, the enemy was delayed until his regiment could launch a counterattack. The gallantry, high devotion to duty, and exceptional tactical ability displayed by Colonel Freeman reflect great credit upon himself and fully uphold the finest traditions of the military service.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Paul Lamar Freeman, Jr. (ASN: 0-17704), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 27 November 1950 to 30 November 1950, in the vicinity of Kunu-ri, Korea. During that period the division was fighting a bitter withdrawing action to prevent encirclement by numerically superior enemy forces. Colonel Freeman's regiment was given the mission of conducting rear guard actions to cover the withdrawal of the remainder of the division. Throughout the period he placed himself well within range of hostile automatic weapons and mortar fire to insure first hand knowledge of the friendly and enemy situation. On the night of 27 November 1950, Colonel Freeman, with complete disregard for his own safety, personally directed the deployment of the rear guard elements. His presence coupled with his composure under fire served to inspire his men to such heights that they successfully fought off repeated fanatical attacks from enemy forces overwhelmingly superior to them in numbers. Again on 30 November 1950, after all other elements of the division had withdrawn from the Kunu-ri area, and it appeared impossible to extricate his regiment without sustaining almost total loss of personnel and equipment, Colonel Freeman planned and supervised the execution of a daring maneuver which caught the enemy unaware and saved the regiment from certain annihilation. Throughout these operations, Colonel Freeman's coolness under fire and his magnificent example of leadership instilled the confidence in his men necessary for the successful execution of the most difficult of military operations. Colonel Freeman's gallantry and great tactical ability during these engagements were in keeping with the highest traditions of the Armed Forces of the United States.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) William Russell Frost, Jr. (ASN: 0-61205), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company B, 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 21 August 1950 near Hyong-Pung, Korea. On that date a motorized patrol from a friendly unit was ambushed by an enemy force which had infiltrated into a village. Lieutenant Frost's platoon was assigned the mission of rescuing the ambushed patrol. The platoon had accomplished its mission and was returning through the town when it was subjected to enemy automatic weapons fire. Lieutenant Frost, in order to prevent any casualties within his platoon, immediately moved toward the enemy gunners, who were concealed in a building. He approached to within a few feet of the building and threw hand grenades into the room. When the grenades failed to explode, he started to enter the building, but was killed by a burst of enemy automatic weapons fire. The gallantry and inspiring leadership displayed by Lieutenant Frost in sacrificing his life for his men reflect the highest credit upon himself are in keeping with the fine traditions of the military service.

GARLAND, PETER WOODS, JR.

Peter Garland graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1936. He retired with disability in 1958 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Peter Woods Garland, Jr., United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of the 19th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division in action against the enemy at Yangpyung, Korea, between 7 - 9 March 1951. Colonel Garland completely disregarded his own safety while under fire from enemy mortar and artillery fire, in order that he might direct the attack of his regiment against a numerically superior enemy. Front line troops received his encouragement just before the attack and it helped immeasurably to boost their confidence to see their regimental commander sharing their dangers. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Colonel Garland, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

GENUARIO, LOUIS VINCENT

Louis Genuario graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, Class of 1950. He retired with disability in 1966 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Second Lieutenant (Infantry) Louis Vincent Genuario (ASN: 0-62696), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company G, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 12 September 1950 in the vicinity of Am-Sin, Korea. On the afternoon of 12 September 1950, Lieutenant Genuario, a rifle platoon leader, was assigned the mission of utilizing his platoon as a holding force in tactics involving encirclement and ambush of a superior number of enemy troops. When the primary stages of the mission had been accomplished and the initial attack launched, the platoon received the brunt of the enemy's attempt to escape the encirclement. When the success of the mission was threatened due to a weakening of our line, Lieutenant Genuario, with complete disregard for his personal safety, charged the enemy positions with hand grenades and automatic weapons fire. An enemy break-through was averted and approximately 100 enemies were annihilated. His gallant action on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and the Armed Forces of the United States.

the vicinity of Koto-ri, North Korea, on the night of 29 - 30 November 1950. When cut off by the enemy with a composite group of United States Army, United States Marines, British Marines, and Republic of Korea soldiers, Lieutenant Giddings, unable to perform his normal duties due to lack of communications, assisted his company commander and defensive operations against a determined enemy. Lieutenant Giddings exhibited indomitable courage and outstanding leadership by his efforts in repeatedly repulsing enemy attacks. He organized and defended a portion of the perimeter defense which was singled out by the enemy for his strongest attacks. By his personal example, he served as an inspiration to the men around him. He continually exposed himself to enemy fire in order to locate the enemy and intelligently direct the defense of his position. Lieutenant Giddings' courage and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military services of his country.

GLEASON, WILLIAM THOMAS

William Gleason graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1941. He retired in 1971 as a U.S. Army Brigadier General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel William Thomas Gleason (ASN: 0-23956), United States Army, for gallantry in action while Commanding the 1st Battalion, 65th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 16 April 1952, Companies A and B were occupying defensive positions near Majon-ni, Korea, when they were subjected to an intense hail of enemy artillery and mortar fire. In order to give counter fire directions, Colonel Gleason unhesitatingly left his position of comparative safety and moved among his men, shouting words of encouragement and directing friendly fire on suspected enemy observation points. As the enemy barrage increased in intensity the men became disorganized and ceased their firing. Colonel Gleason, completely oblivious to the deadly fire, remained in an exposed position, urging his men to fire on the enemy positions. Inspired by his fearless actions the men assumed the initiative and laid down a withering hail of automatic weapons and small arms fire which drove the enemy from their positions. Colonel Gleason's outstanding gallantry and unwavering determination reflect the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

GOODRICH, WALKER RAITT

Walker Goodrich graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1932. He retired in 1961 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Field Artillery), [then Lieutenant Colonel] Walker Raitt Goodrich (ASN: 0-18815), United States Army, for gallantry and intrepidity in connection with military operations against the enemy in Korea, while serving as S-3, Division Artillery, 2d Infantry Division, on 1 September 1950 in the vicinity of Changnyong, Korea. During this period, the enemy's continuing ground offensive threatened to break through American defensive positions along the Naktong River in the central sector of the Korean Front. At the height of the enemy offensive, Colonel Goodrich went to the front lines to obtain a better picture of the situation. While en route he discovered a large gap in the front lines which contained no friendly forces and through which enemy troops had begun to move. He observed that a short distance to the south of this gap there were friendly tanks and infantry troops. Although under constant enemy fire, he personally led these forces to the vicinity of the breach and directed their efforts in effectively closing the gap. His skillful employment of troops and his superior tactical knowledge of both tank and infantry units were of inestimable value in preventing the enemy from exploiting the break-through in the Naktong River salient. The gallantry and superior leadership displayed on this occasion by Colonel Goodrich reflect great credit upon himself and the Armed Forces of the United States.

GORMAN, PAUL FRANCIS

Paul Gorman graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1985 as a U.S. Army General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Paul Francis Gorman (ASN: 0-62379), United States Army, for gallantry in action while a member of Company A, 1st Battalion, 32d Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division, in action near Sangmokil, North Korea. During the early morning hours of 7 May 1952, Lieutenant Gorman lead a patrol deep into enemy-held territory. The mission of the patrol was to observe enemy activity, secure information of intelligence interest, and capture a prisoner if possible. Advancing stealthily up the slope of a small hill, Lieutenant Gorman, as point man, was observed and received fire from an enemy armed with a "burp" gun. Lieutenant Gorman was wounded in the hand as a result of this initial burst of fire. Immediately, the enemy soldier was joined by approximately fifteen others, and the patrol began to receive a devastating hail of enemy small-arms fire and grenades. In an effort to withdraw and establish a base of fire at more secure positions, a member of the patrol was wounded. Upon reaching positions of comparative safety, Lieutenant Gorman detected that a member of his patrol was missing. Despite his wound, he and the patrol started up the hill to aid their wounded comrade, when they again were met with a hail of fire. During the course of evacuating the first wounded man of the patrol, three other members were wounded. With utter disregard for his safety, Lieutenant Gorman moved forward aggressively. Exposed to the intense enemy fire, he effectively deployed his men and proceeded in the task of evacuating the wounded. During this exchange of fire, Lieutenant Gorman was gain wounded in the leg and face by grenade fragments. Once the casualties were safely evacuated, Lieutenant Gorman directed the orderly withdrawal of his patrol. Though weak from loss of blood from his numerous wounds, he continued to effectively direct the actions of his patrol. Upon reaching the patrol's base point, he directed accurate mortar and artillery fire on the enemy's positions. Not until he was assured that his patrol was secure and the wounded safely evacuated, did he permit himself to be evacuated. The intrepid gallantry displayed by Lieutenant Gorman proved a great inspiration to his men and was directly responsible for the safe return of the patrol. The gallantry displayed by Lieutenant Gorman reflects great credit on himself and is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Rupert Davidson Graves (ASN: 0-15794), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 26 May 1951 in the vicinity of Yongp-o, Korea. As assistant to the Deputy Division Commander and during a visit to the 38th Infantry Regiment, Colonel Graves assumed command of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, after the Battalion Commander had been wounded and evacuated. The Battalion at the time was in fast pursuit of a retreating enemy and was being spearheaded by a tank column. Intense enemy sniper and mortar fire was being received from the high ground on both sides of the road. With disregard for his personal safety, Colonel Graves advanced on foot in the rear of the lead tank in order that he might better direct and control the tank-infantry team. His complete disregard for his personal safety and outstanding leadership were largely instrumental in clearing and securing the area and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

GRAY, STEPHEN EUGENE

Stephen Gray graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1969 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Stephen Eugene Gray (ASN: 0-28683), United States Army, for gallantry in action against an armed enemy on 21 September 1950 in the vicinity of Yongsan, Korea, while serving with Company L, 3d Battalion, 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division. On 20 September 1950 Lieutenant Gray's company had crossed the Nakdong River and had seized commanding terrain on the west bank. On 21 September 1950 the enemy launched an attack in battalion strength against the company's positions. Subjecting the company to intense artillery, mortar, and automatic weapons fire, the enemy succeeded in penetrating the defensive positions and driving the forward elements of the company back on Lieutenant Gray's platoon. As the full fury of the enemy attack became concentrated on Lieutenant Gray's platoon position, he repeatedly exposed himself to the intense enemy fire as he directed the defensive tactics of his unit. With complete disregard for his personal safety, he directed mortar fire on the advancing enemy, adjusting this fire to fall but a few yards in front of his position. Throughout the engagement his heroic conduct under severe hostile fire and his grim determination to hold against overwhelming odds, inspired his men to greater efforts. After approximately 30 minutes of fierce close-in fighting the numerically superior enemy force was repulsed, leaving 22 dead within a few yards of the platoon's position and carrying an estimated 70 wounded with them. The gallantry and inspirational leadership demonstrated on this occasion by Lieutenant Gray reflect great credit upon himself and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit and the United States Army.

GREENE, BYRON DILLINGBACK, JR.

Byron Greene graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry), [then First Lieutenant] Byron Dillingback Greene, Jr. (ASN: 0-28506), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Heavy Mortar Company, (then a member of Headquarters, 3rd Battalion), 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action on 12 January 1951 in the vicinity of Wonju, Korea. On this day the 3rd Battalion was given the mission of attacking and seizing high ground near Wonju. As the attack materialized the lead tank was knocked out by an enemy mine, injuring several members of the crew. Simultaneously a murderous rain of enemy automatic weapons and small arms, fire enveloped the disabled tank. It was imperative that the crew be evacuated and the tank destroyed so the enemy would be unable to use it. Captain Greene, Assistant Operations Officer, volunteered for the task. Arming himself with incendiary grenades and explosives he moved forward through intense enemy mortar, automatic weapons, and small arms fire. Upon reaching the tank he removed the wounded men and returned them to safety. After placing the grenades on and about the tank, he returned through the intense enemy fire and observed the destruction of the tank. These heroic actions not only insured the safe evacuation of the wounded crew but also prevented the enemy from capturing and using valuable communication equipment and weapons against friendly troops. Captain Greene's outstanding-leadership ability and devotion to duty reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

*GREENE, THOMAS PATRICK [KIA (KOREA)]

Thomas Greene graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant in the Korean War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Thomas Patrick Greene (ASN: 0-62556), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company C, 1st Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 10 February 1951, in the vicinity of Sansong-ni, Korea, the Third Platoon of Company C, 1st Battalion, attacking a heavily entrenched hostile force on Hill 520, was pinned down by intense fire from an enemy emplacement. Two riflemen of the platoon, in a slightly forward position, were greatly endangered by the vicious hail of hostile fire and unable to escape to safety. Lieutenant Greene, seeing their hazardous situation,

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Joseph Ingram Gurfein (ASN: 0-23734), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Headquarters Company, 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy during the period 14 September to 13 October 1951 in the vicinity of Suim-myon, Korea. During this period he served as Regimental Executive Officer of the unit, engaged in combat operations against a fanatically determined and numerically superior enemy force. Throughout the bigger struggle for the "Heartbreak Ridge", Colonel Gurfein supervised the administration of supplies from the rear up to the breach of the rifle units. He made frequent trips through the rifle companies, under the intense enemy artillery, mortar, small arms and automatic weapons fire, to ascertain their conditions and morale. He walked every foot of the front lines in daylight, under hostile fire, as an example to the men. Although his duties as Executive Officer did not include such actions, his voluntary and frequent front line reconnaissance was an inspiration to the men of the unit and contributed greatly to the success of their mission. The gallantry and selfless devotion to the welfare of his men displayed by Colonel Gurfein on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

GUTHRIE, JOHN SIMPSON

John Guthrie graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1930. He retired in 1961 as a U.S. Army Major General.

First Award

Synopsis: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) John Simpson Guthrie (ASN: 0-18228), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea, in 1950. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Colonel Guthrie, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) John Simpson Guthrie (ASN: 0-18228), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in Korea. On 3 December 1950, near Huksuri, Korea, Colonel Guthrie, realizing from the fragmentary reports that 2d Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, was attacked by overwhelming odds, estimated to be at least two enemy regiments, combining direct frontal assault with attacks on both flanks, infiltration, and heavy mortar fire, Colonel Guthrie raced fifteen miles through guerilla-ridden countryside between Kogal-Dong and Huksuri, Korea, without regard for his own personal safety, to the battalion position. On learning that the battalion commander was then engaged in extricating several hard-pressed elements of the battalion from their positions in Huksuri, and that the high officer casualty rate had left many units leaderless,

SILVER STAR (KOREAN WAR)

Colonel Guthrie personally and with tireless energy, organized scattered elements of three companies and moved them to commanding ground where they were able to cover the successful withdrawal of the remainder of the battalion combat team. His coolness under fire, commanding presence, and calm, unhurried manner, inspired the exhausted troops, enabling him to check the savage flanking attack and to stabilize the line. Colonel Guthrie's personal leadership and courage in the face of automatic weapons and mortar fire, his professional ability and tireless energy in moving from unit to unit under heavy small arms fire over icy mountain terrain to reestablish morale and unit integrity, were the chief factors in the preservation of the battalion combat team as an effective fighting force. Colonel Guthrie's gallantry, calm and superb leadership, reflects great credit upon himself and upholds the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

HAGLER, CARTER BURDELL [MIA (KOREA) KIA]

Carter Hagler graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He was killed in action six months after graduation while serving as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant during the Korean War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Field Artillery) Carter Burdell Hagler (ASN: 0-62606), United States Army, for gallantry in action against an armed enemy in Korea. As a forward observer of Battery C, 57th Field Artillery Battalion, Seventh Infantry Division, he was attached to Company L, 3rd Battalion, 31st Infantry which was in position near the Chosin Reservoir on the east coast of North Korea. Vastly numerically superior enemy forces threatened to overrun positions held by this battalion and other units of the division. Lieutenant Hagler moved his forward observer section to the highest accessible ground in the area to better direct artillery fire. With complete disregard for his own safety, though exposing himself to heavy enemy fire and observation, Lieutenant Hagler placed himself in an open position from which he could call for artillery fire on the attacking enemy forces. In his effort to hold the high ground, he left the men of his section in the shelter of their covered positions and personally delivered messages to the infantry commander regarding his observation. During the course of battle on 28 November 1950, the telephone line between Lieutenant Hagler and the artillery fire direction center was knocked out by enemy fire. With complete disregard for his own safety, Lieutenant Hagler made his way through enemy lines to the artillery fire direction center and after procuring the needed wire for reestablishing communications, started to lay it back to his position when he was struck down by enemy fire and killed. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Hagler, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

HAIG, ALEXANDER MEIGS, JR.

Alexander Haig graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1947. Following service in both the Korean and Vietnam Wars, he served briefly (5 months) as the 13th Vice Chief of Staff of the Army, and then as White House Chief of Staff to President Nixon, during the height of the Watergate affair from May 1973 until September 1974. He served as the Supreme Allied Commander Europe and Commander in Chief, U.S. European Command, the Commander of NATO forces in Europe, from 1974 to 1979. An assassination attempt on him by the Red Army Faction, also known as Baader-Meinhof-group, was unsuccessful in Mons, Belgium on June 25, 1979. During the attack, a land mine blew up under the bridge on which his car was traveling, narrowly missing his car but wounding three of his bodyguards in a following car. Alexander Haig retired as a U.S. Army (4-Star) General.

HANSON, JACK RICHARD

Jack Hanson graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired with disability in 1953 as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Second Lieutenant (Infantry) Jack Richard Hanson (ASN: 0-62628), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3d Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 16 February 1951, near Kamil-ni, Korea, Company K jumped off in an attack against a well dug-in and expertly camouflaged series of enemy positions on Hill 185. Owing to the withering enemy small arms fire that was blanketing the platoon positions, its advance was halted and its members pinned down. Disregarding the intense enemy fire Lieutenant Hanson began working his way forward to a nearby ridge encouraging his men onward and directing their fire on the enemy strongpoints. He suddenly noticed that on his right flank a member of his unit lay critically wounded and exposed to heavy enemy fire, fifty yards from his position. With complete disregard for his personal safety, Lieutenant Hanson jumped up and heedless of the enemy bullets striking near him, moved to the aid of the stricken rifleman. Placing the wounded man on his shoulder, he carried him to a covered position and administered first aid. He then re-crossed the open area which was now receiving enemy mortar fire in addition to small arms fire. He returned to his original position where he rejoined his platoon and led it in a bayonet assault on the objective. After seizing the objective the company was ordered to withdraw. Lieutenant Hanson refused to leave until all members of his platoon, including the wounded, had safely withdrawn. Lieutenant Hanson's gallantry and devotion to duty reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

*HARDAWAY, THOMAS GRAY [KIA (KOREA)]

Thomas Hardaway graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He was killed in action while serving as a Second Lieutenant in Korea little more than a year after graduation.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to Second Lieutenant (Infantry) Thomas Gray Hardaway (ASN: 0-59232), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company I, 3d Battalion, 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy near Kyong-ju, Korea, on 8 September 1950. During an attack by a group of heavily armed enemy troops that had infiltrated into the company rear area, Lieutenant Hardaway immediately led a squad of his men to face the enemy in an attempt to stop their advance by his concentrated fire power. After deploying his men to assure the maximum effect from their fire, he attacked ahead of his men with grenades. Through his repeated grenade attacks many of the enemy were killed and his squad successfully repulsed the hostile attack. During this gallant action, Lieutenant Hardaway was killed. His gallantry and unhesitant devotion to duty reflect the greatest credit upon himself and the United States Infantry.

HARRIS, HUGH PATE

Hugh Harris graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1931. He retired in 1965 as a U.S. Army General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Hugh Pate Harris (ASN: 0-18518), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of the 224th Infantry Regiment, 40th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea, in 1953. Colonel Harris, with great personal disregard for his own safety, checked every fortification and entrenchment in his sector of the main line of resistance to assure that all possible defensive measures were being taken at a time when it was believed the enemy was preparing to attack. During these inspections, Colonel Harris exposed himself to sustained enemy fire. His courageous example was an inspiration to all of his troops. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Colonel Harris, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

HARRIS, WILLIAM ALLEN

William Harris graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1933. He retired with disability in 1966 as a U.S. Army Major General.

Synopsis: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Field Artillery) William Allen Harris (ASN: 0-18976), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of the 77th Field Artillery Battalion, 1st Cavalry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea, on 23 July 1950. Enemy fire was heavy and enemy personnel had infiltrated the general position area. Lieutenant Colonel Harris directed the unit's withdrawal from an extremely exposed position in coordination with the Infantry with maximum artillery support to the last possible minute. Without regard for his own personal safety he accomplished the withdrawal with a minimum loss of men and material, remaining in the exposed area until all elements of his command had cleared. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Lieutenant Colonel Harris, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

HASTINGS, KESTER LOVEJOY

Kester Hastings graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of November 1918. He was the Army's Quartermaster General from 1954 to 1957, retired in 1957 as a U.S. Army Major General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Brigadier General Kester Lovejoy Hastings (ASN: 0-12219), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Quartermaster, Far East Command, in action against the enemy in Korea, in 1950. General Hastings voluntarily, and with complete disregard for his safety, made daring trips through areas under constant guerrilla attack to obtain an accurate estimate of the situation vital to solving many complex problems that occur in logistical support during such critical periods. His presence in the forward areas under constant threat of enemy air attack and fire inspired personnel of the Quartermaster Corps to greater achievements and was a contributing factor in resolving supply problems, thus aiding united Nations' forces in the subsequent launching of a counteroffensive. General Hastings through his valor and tireless devotion to duty, reflected great credit on himself and upheld the highest traditions of the military service.

HATCH, KENNETH MARTIN

Kenneth Hatch graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1947. He retired in 1970 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Corps of Engineers) Kenneth Martin Hatch (ASN: 0-50640), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as a member of the 72d Engineer Company, 24th Infantry Division. Lieutenant Hatch distinguished himself by courageous action near Waegan, Korea, on 19 September 1950. During the advance on the city his platoon was attached to an infantry battalion. The enemy was pounding the area with artillery which destroyed the only suitable bridge over a swift flowing stream and was pouring a hail of machine gun fire into the attacking troops. Realizing the seriousness of the situation, Lieutenant Hatch unhesitatingly left his position of relative safety and moving through a hail of withering fire made a reconnaissance in order to find a suitable site for the construction of a sandbar bridge. Returning, he assembled his men and equipment and despite the continuous shelling and machine gun fire directed the swift construction of the bridge, thereby permitting the continued advance. Lieutenant Hatch's courageous action, devotion to duty and outstanding leadership reflect the greatest credit upon himself and the United States Infantry.

HATFIELD, MILLS CARSON

Mills Hatfield graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1941. He retired with disability in 1964 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Mills Carson Hatfield (ASN: 0-23741), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea. On 31 July 1952, elements of the 1st Battalion, commanded by Colonel Hatfield, were assigned the mission of assaulting and securing "OP Kelly", near Jojanha-Ri, Korea. While preparing for the attack, they were subjected to an intense barrage of enemy artillery and mortar fire. Despite the lethal hail of enemy fire, Colonel Hatfield remained at a forward position while he directed the friendly attack. Shortly after the friendly force had reached their objective, the entire area was again subjected to a devastating barrage of enemy fire. With complete disregard for his personal safety, Colonel Hatfield moved about the shell-torn area, shouting words of encouragement to his men and directing the preparations for an expected enemy counter-attack. Remaining in a precarious position until the enemy counter attack was successfully repulsed and the outpost secured, he then moved about the devastated area to insure that friendly defenses were adequate. Colonel Hatfield's outstanding gallantry and inspirational leadership were instrumental in the securing of an important position and reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

Roy Hattan graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1929. He retired in 1959 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Roy Eugene Hattan (ASN: 0-17563), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of the 63rd Field Artillery Battalion, 24th Infantry Division, in action on 19 July 1950, at Taejon, Korea. Having assumed command of the 63rd Field Artillery Battalion and equipment, Colonel Hattan, by exhibiting superior leadership reorganized the battalion for an effective perimeter defense of the Taejon Airstrip. Beginning at 0730 hours on 19 July 1950, the battalion and attached units were subjected to intense enemy mortar, artillery and tank fire, which lasted for a period of 10 hours. During that period Colonel Hattan personally controlled operations of the Battalion fire direction center, and despite inadequate communications and extreme adverse conditions, he continued to defend his position. After dark Colonel Hattan skillfully selected escape routes, and directed the withdrawal of all firing batteries into the town of Taejon and so placed them as to afford concealment from enemy observation. The withdrawal was accomplished without loss of men or equipment. Colonel Hattan was the last man to leave the air strip which was still under heavy enemy fire. This act of conspicuous gallantry on the part of Colonel Hattan reflects the highest possible credit on himself and the military service.

HAYWARD, CHARLES WINTHROP

Charles Hayward graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1975 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Second Lieutenant (Armor) Charles Winthrop Hayward (ASN: 0-62495), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Tank Company, 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 26 November 1950 in the vicinity of Kunu-ri, Korea. On that date the battalion to which his tank platoon was attached was ordered to withdraw across the Chongchon River. During the withdrawal the enemy attacked the battalion in overwhelming superior numbers and poured a stream of mortar, automatic weapons, and rocket launcher fire against the withdrawing column. Several tanks were hit and disabled by this devastating enemy fire. During the engagement Lieutenant Hayward directed his platoon in such a skillful manner and with such courage and bravery that the withdrawal supported by his few tanks was executed with a minimum of casualties. After his unit had crossed the river with the foot troops, he led his platoon back across the river. With complete unconcern for his personal safety and disregarding the heavy hostile fire still sweeping the area, he gathered wounded soldiers and placed them on his tank. Although his tank was hit by rocket launcher fire he re-crossed the river, bringing all casualties to safety. The gallantry, skillful leadership, and devotion to his wounded comrades displayed by Lieutenant Hayward reflect great credit upon himself and are in keeping with the fine traditions of the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

HECKEMEYER, BENJAMIN WHITE

Benjamin Heckemeyer graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1935. He retired in 1964 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Benjamin White Heckemeyer (ASN: 0-19930), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 3d Battalion, 5th Regimental Combat Team, 24th Infantry Division, in action near Kumchon, Korea, on 24 September 1950. When his battalion was in the attack against a strong and stubbornly resisting enemy, he made his way from position to position, without regard for his own safety, lending encouragement to his men and assisting in the attack. Through a series of well planned and brilliantly executed attacks he was able to lead his battalion in its successful attainment of its objective. Lieutenant Colonel Heckemeyer's example and unselfish devotion to duty reflect the greatest credit on himself and the United States Infantry.

HENNIG, WILLIAM HENRY

William Hennig graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1928. He retired with disability in 1964 as a U.S. Army Major General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Coast Artillery Corps) William Henry Hennig (ASN: 0-17122), United States Army, for outstanding gallantry in action against the enemy while Commanding the 10th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Group, near Unsan, Korea, between 25 October 1950 and 2 November 1950. During this period, the 10th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Group and attached artillery battalions were deployed around Unsan with the mission of supporting the 1st Republic of Korea Infantry Division, which held an advanced salient to the north of Unsan. On the afternoon of 25 October 1950 this division made its initial contact with the Chinese Communist forces which immediately launched strong enveloping attacks. A night disengagement and withdrawal was under consideration by elements of the division when Colonel Hennig's decision to hold all elements of his command in their exposed positions, and the effectiveness of the defensive fires which he personally directed, assisted the supported units in determining to hold their positions and thus avoid the hazards incident to a night withdrawal under enemy attack. During the entire period the enemy aggressively pressed his attack both day and night, but Colonel Hennig's cool, skillful handling of his units' fires held the numerically superior enemy in check until the night of 1-2 November 1950 when the division was attacked by Overwhelming numbers of the enemy. Colonel Hennig maintained his command post in Unsan and continued directing defensive fires and coordinating displacement of his units in such a way that an orderly withdrawal, with minimum loss of personnel and equipment, was effected while continuing to inflict maximum destruction on the enemy. Colonel Hennig only withdrew his command post from Unsan after all his units had withdrawn to more tenable positions and the command post itself was under enemy fire and threatened with encirclement. Colonel Hennig's persistence, cool courage, and professional skill under extremely hazardous and difficult conditions are in the highest traditions of and reflect utmost credit upon the military service of the United States.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

HILL, JOHN GILLESPIE, JR.

John Hill graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. After serving in Korea where he earned the DSC and Silver Star, he served two tours of duty during the Vietnam War, first as an adviser to the South Vietnamese Army and later as a Brigade Commander in the 5th Mechanized Infantry Division, Assistant Division Commander of the 101st Airborne Division and Commanding General of the U.S. Army Support Command in Cam Ranh Bay. He retired in 1978 as a U.S. Army Major General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Armor) John Gillespie Hill, Jr. (ASN: 0-27997), United States Army, for gallantry in action against the enemy while serving with Company E, 2d

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

Battalion, 7th Cavalry (Infantry) Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action near Yongdogwon-ri, Korea, on 10 March 1951. While Captain Hill's company was attacking the well-fortified Chinese positions on Hill 554, heavy and accurate machine gun fire suddenly swept the slopes and halted the advance. Realizing the great danger to his men unless aggressive action was continued, Captain Hill rushed through the intense fire to the point of his lead platoon. Shouting words of encouragement and displaying outstanding personal bravery, Captain Hill led his men in the attack and final assault. Inspired by his leadership and conspicuous courage, the members of his company charged forward and routed the strongly entrenched Chinese who fled in a disorganized mob, leaving behind many dead and much equipment. Captain Hill's gallantry reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

HILLMAN, ROLFE LOUIS, JR.

Rolfe Hillman graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1972 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Rolfe Louis Hillman, Jr. (ASN: 0-27661), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Heavy Mortar Company, 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 4 September 1950 in the vicinity of Yongsan, Korea. The enemy, attacking in reinforced company strength and supported by anti-tank rifles and heavy machine guns, had forced part of Captain Hillman's company from high ground and were attempting to throw forces astride the main supply route. Organizing his mortar section into an infantry assault force Captain Hillman led them in a daring charge up the slope, despite the intense grazing frontal and flanking fire. His intrepidity and indifference to this heavy enemy fire inspired his troops and by following his example of personal courage they succeeded in driving the enemy from the position. He then directed mortar fire upon the retreating enemy with such devastating effect that their withdrawal was turned into a disorganized rout and forcing them to leave their weapons on the field. His skillful use of his forces and fire power enabled his troops to consolidate the company position, resulted in 30 enemy killed and eliminated a serious threat to our main supply route. The courage and leadership displayed by Captain Hillman on this occasion reflect great credit upon himself and his actions are in keeping with the finest traditions of the military service.

*HORAN, ROBERT MARSHALL [KIA (KOREA)]

Robert Horan graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant in the Korean War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Robert Marshall Horan (ASN: 0-27704), United States Army, for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action while serving with Company B, 1st Battalion, 65th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division. On 17 October 1950, Lieutenant Horan volunteered to lead a motorized patrol from Ch'up'ungnyong-ni, Korea to investigate a report that another company of the regiment was engaged in an intense fire fight with an estimated enemy force of three hundred men, and to render assistance to the besieged company or request any additional support required. En route, at Tommak-tong, Korea, Lieutenant Horan's patrol engaged the enemy, inflicted considerable casualties, and captured two of the enemy. When the enemy had been routed, Lieutenant Horan personally led his patrol in pursuit. Although in this gallant action, undertaken without regard for his personal safety, Lieutenant Horan was mortally wounded by the enemy, his aggressive leadership inspired his men to complete their pursuit and destruction of the enemy. Lieutenant Horan's outstanding initiative and heroism on this occasion are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

HOWE, LOUIS WILLIAM [KIA (KOREA)]

Louis Howe graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army Captain in the Korean War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to Captain (Infantry) Louis William Howe (ASN: 0-26924), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of Company E, 2d Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 31 January 1951, near Yongin, Korea, Company E had the mission of securing Hill 380, an intermediate objective, to provide a springboard for the battalion to launch an attack on the main objective, Hill 425. Captain Howe led his company forward to the vicinity of Hill 380. Nearing the objective, the company met with a tremendous volume of devastating fire from a well-entrenched and camouflaged enemy, pinning it down and completely stalling its advance. Captain Howe, realizing that immediate action was necessary, quickly and courageously, alone and exposed, moved through the enemy fire over the rugged terrain to a point from which he could determine the source of fire. With complete disregard for his safety, he moved about, encouraging his men, and inspiring them with his courageous actions. Having prepared his men for an assault on the enemy position, in the face of devastating fire he made his way forward to the lead squad in order to lead the assault. In so doing, he was struck by enemy fire and instantly killed. The extreme heroism and gallant sacrifice of Captain Howe is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

HUGHES, DAVID RALPH

David Hughes graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) David Ralph Hughes (ASN: 0-62721), United States Army, for gallantry in action against the enemy while serving with Company K, 3d Battalion, 7th Cavalry (Infantry) Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action on 8 February 1951, near Konjiam-ni, Korea. During an attack against firmly established enemy hill positions, Lieutenant Hughes' platoon was held up by extremely severe enemy mortar, automatic weapons and small arms fire. Realizing the urgency of the mission, he single-handedly charged the enemy position, with complete disregard for his own safety and at great risk to his own life. Completely ignoring seven enemy concussion grenades which were thrown directly at him, Lieutenant Hughes fearlessly rushed the enemy positions, firing his rifle. After firing all of his ammunition he continued moving from one enemy position to another, throwing grenades into their emplacements. During this action Lieutenant Hughes killed or wounded five of the enemy. His aggressiveness and complete disregard for his own welfare contributed greatly in his unit's successful completion of their mission. First Lieutenant Hughes' gallantry reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) David Ralph Hughes (ASN: 0-62721), United States Army, for gallantry in action against the enemy while serving with Company K, 3d Battalion, 7th Cavalry (Infantry) Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action on 28 September 1951, near Hyonjo, Korea. On that date, at 2400 hours, an estimated enemy battalion attacked Company K, penetrating the friendly lines at two points. The enemy overran the defensive area, severed all communications, split the company into three different groups and completely disrupted the organization. During the hours of darkness, Lieutenant Hughes, although under continual small arms fire, reorganized the company and commanded it in such a superior manner, that the unit was able to repel and stall the enemy until daylight. Many times during the night, Lieutenant Hughes personally led small groups of men in attacks against hostile strong points, accounting for numerous enemy dead. As a result of his courageous actions, the company defensive perimeter was maintained. Lieutenant Hughes' gallantry reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

HUTCHIN, CLAIRE ELWOOD, JR.

Claire Hutchin graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1938. He earned his first Distinguished Service Cross in Korea on August 31, 1950. Two months later on November 25, 1950, he earned a SECOND Distinguished Service Cross. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Claire Elwood Hutchin, Jr. (ASN: 0-21092), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 1st Battalion, 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 18 August 1950 near Hyong-Pung, Korea. On 18 August 1950, a reconnaissance in force was formed by Company B, 23d Infantry Regiment, whose purpose was to mount a combined tank, infantry and artillery attack on the northern portion of Hill 409. In order to better control this force, he established his forward observation post on a hill immediately behind that of the enemy. As the attack progressed, it became more and more evident that the best vantage point from which to control the entire action was from the battalion observation post. The enemy, having excellent observation, having identified Colonel Hutchin's position as a Commander's Observation Post, caused a heavy barrage of mortar and machine gun fire to be brought upon it. Disregarding this extremely heavy fire, he remained in his exposed position, directing the operation with such coolness that all of his men were inspired by his leadership and calm courage. His action in exposing himself for the purpose of personally leading his men in this attack was unquestionably a major factor in the ultimate success of this operation. Colonel Hutchin's gallant and heroic leadership was an inspiration to all who took part in this action, and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

HYZER, PETER CLARKE

Born Walter Clarke Hyzer, Peter Hyzer graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1937. He retired in 1967 as a U.S. Army Brigadier General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Corps of Engineers) Peter Clarke Hyzer (ASN: 0-20589), United States Army, for gallantry in connection with military operations against an opposing armed force while serving as Commanding Officer of the 3d Engineer Combat Battalion, 24th Infantry Division, on 11 August 1950, along the Naktong River, Korea. Colonel Hyzer, a Korean interpreter, Corporal Johnson, and Private First Class Bolster accompanied a Battalion Patrol to the West bank of the Naktong River and part of the way to its objective, Hill 207. After insuring that the patrol was well on its way and that it was not being followed, Colonel Hyzer decided to return with his group to the East bank of the Naktong River. Upon arriving at the landing site of the West bank of the river Colonel Hyzer's group discovered one of the boat guards lying beside the boat apparently dead and noted enemy movement in the area. By mutual agreement the group decided to swim the river. When they had swum for about ten yards the enemy brought machine gun and small arms fire upon the group. At this point the interpreter decided he could not make it and turned around to return to the West Bank. Colonel Hyzer, realizing the vital information as to the Battalion's disposition and the status known by his interpreter, while under heavy enemy small arms fire and at great personal risk, turned around and went to the assistance of the interpreter in an attempt to bring him to the East bank. About this time, Colonel Hyzer noticed that Private Bolster, having become exhausted, was floundering in the water. Releasing his hold upon the interpreter, Colonel Hyzer swam to the assistance of Private Bolster. The intensity of enemy fire and the struggling of Private Bolster made it impossible for Colonel Hyzer to save this man. Colonel Hyzer then swam to the assistance of Corporal Johnson and noted he was apparently capable of reaching the East shore. Colonel Hyzer then turned to go to the assistance of his interpreter and through increasing enemy fire returned to the spot in the river where he had last seen the Korean. Being unable to locate the interpreter at this time Colonel Hyzer then swam through enemy fire to the East bank of the river. Through Colonel Hyzer's effort and total disregard for his personal safety, the mission of the patrol was accomplished, and the Korean was able to reach a position of safety and prevent a possible source of vital information from falling into enemy hands. This act of conspicuous gallantry on the part of Colonel Hyzer reflects the highest possible credit on himself and the military service.

INMAN, RICHARD GEORGE [MIA (KOREA) KIA]

Richard Inman graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, Class of 1952. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army Second Lieutenant in the Korean War, one year after graduation.

Synopsis: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to Second Lieutenant (Infantry) Richard George Inman (ASN: 0-66536), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with the Heavy Mortar Company, 17th Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy at Pork Chop Hill, North Korea, on 6 July 1953. During night operations, Second Lieutenant Inman and his patrol were cut off by the enemy. On the third attempt to breach through superior enemy forces, he provided protective fire for his men until he was mortally wounded by an enemy grenade. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Second Lieutenant Inman, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

JACKSON, GEORGE DANIEL

George Jackson graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1965 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) George Daniel Jackson, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of Company G, 2d Battalion, 65th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in the vicinity of Manyon-ni, Korea, on 27 October 1952. On this date, Captain Jackson was in command of Company G, approximately two kilometers forward of the Main Line of Resistance. At about 1800 hours, after intense artillery and mortar fire the enemy attacked the outpost. Constantly exposed to enemy fire, Captain Jackson moved among his men, coordinating the defense of the outpost and encouraging them until the enemy assault was stemmed. When one of his troops had his foot blown off by incoming artillery, Captain Jackson, with complete disregard for his own personal safety, went to him under heavy shelling and evacuated him to a protected position. At 2100 hours a tremendous artillery barrage pounded the outpost for thirty minutes with an estimated battalion of enemy attacking through their own artillery fire to storm the outpost. Captain Jackson's courageous actions and coolness under fire inspired and rallied his men. Captain Jackson's outstanding gallantry in combat and his devotion to duty are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, the 65th Infantry Regiment, and the United States Army.

JAGIELLO, WALTER ALBERT

After attending the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis with the Class of 1944, Walter Jagiello transferred to and graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1966 as a U.S. Army Major.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Walter Albert Jagiello (NSN: 0-27584), United States Army, for gallantry in action against an armed enemy while serving with Company L, 3d Battalion, 5th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action on 29 May 1951, near Yongchon, Korea. During the attack on Hill 136, the commanding officer was killed and the forward observer was seriously wounded. Lieutenant Jagiello, realizing the perilous situation, immediately took command and reorganized the friendly troops in the attack, then proceeded to the forward observer's position, where he directed artillery fire into the enemy-held position with effective accuracy. After being relieved from the forward observer's position, Lieutenant Jagiello rejoined the platoon and led his men in a vicious attack against heavily fortified enemy positions. His relentless determination and disregard for his life was such an inspiration to the men, that they completely overran the hostile position, inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy. Lieutenant Jagiello's gallantry reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Walter Albert Jagiello (NSN: 0-27584), United States Army, for gallantry in action against an armed enemy while serving with Company L, 3d Battalion, 5th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action on 6 September 1951, near Chinpa-ri, Korea. When Company L launched an attack on enemy positions in an attempt to relieve pressure on Company K, two platoon leaders were wounded by intense small arms and automatic weapons fire. Lieutenant Jagiello immediately rushed to the distressed platoons and organized them in a vigorous assault against the foe. When a large hostile force was observed preparing to attack his assaulting platoons, he acted as forward observer, directing devastating artillery fire on the enemy troops. As a result of his inspirational leadership the mission was successfully completed and heavy casualties were inflicted on the foe. Lieutenant Jagiello's gallantry reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

JOHNSON, JAMES ALLEN

James Johnson graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1947. He retired in 1980 as a U.S. Army Major General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Corps of Engineers) James Allen Johnson (ASN: 0-50638), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of the 72d Engineer Combat Company, 25th Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 10 August 1950, near Kogan-ni, Korea, when the regimental command post was attacked by a strong hostile force, Lieutenant Johnson was ordered to move his platoon to a nearby enemy-occupied hill and reduced a hostile road block. He directed accurate fire of a 2.36 rocket launcher on the hill and then on the roadblock, causing the enemy to flee. Observing a large group of enemy troops assembling on the opposite side of the hill to attack the command post, he moved to an exposed position to observe and direct mortar fire. During the ensuing battle he was blown off his feet by a concussion grenade but continued to direct fire until the enemy had been completely routed. Lieutenant Johnson's conspicuous courage, grim determination and selfless devotion to duty are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

JOHNSON, ROSS LE ROY

Ross Johnson graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He retired in 1977 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Ross Le Roy Johnson (ASN: 0-59176), United States Army, for gallantry in action against the enemy on 13 September 1950 while serving with Company LO, 5th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action near Shindo, Korea. During two very severe enemy banzai attacks on the forward positions of his company which forced them to withdraw, Lieutenant Johnson, exposing himself to enemy small arms and mortar fire, moved to the forward positions searching for wounded that might have been left behind. Upon returning to his company's new location, he immediately reorganized his company for a new attack. During the ensuing action, Lieutenant Johnson was wounded and the company was again forced to withdraw. Voluntarily, Lieutenant Johnson remained behind to cover their withdrawal and, when forced to move by heavy enemy fire, followed in the rear of the company assisting wounded personnel, even though wounded himself. Lieutenant Johnson's selfless courage and outstanding gallantry in action reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

JOHNSON, SEWALL HARVEY EMLER

Sewall Johnson graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1966 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Sewall Harvey Emler Johnson (ASN: 0-28712), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company M, 3d Battalion, 65th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 25 October 1950, near Muju, Korea, Lieutenant Johnson was a member of a reconnaissance patrol when enemy fire on one of their flanks greatly endangered the success of its mission. Realizing the need for immediate and positive action and ignoring all danger to his personal safety he ran along an exposed road to contact a seventy-five millimeter recoilless rifle section. Upon doing so, he gave a fire order and instructions as to the position from where the section would fire. He then moved to a point away from the selected position, opened fire with his carbine to attract enemy attention, and signaled the gun crew into position. They then neutralized the enemy fire and forced his withdrawal. Lieutenant Johnson's quick tactical decision, the execution of it, and his intrepid actions in drawing enemy fire to himself, enabled the flank of the patrol to be secured and the continuance of its mission. The gallant action reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

JONES, GEORGE SALLEY, III

George Jones graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1975 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) George Salley Jones, III (ASN: 0-27569), United States Army, for action as a member of Headquarters, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 17 March 1953 in the vicinity of Sami-chon, North Korea. During the early morning hours on that date, the enemy launched a concentrated attack and by sheer force of numbers had succeeded in overrunning the positions of one friendly platoon. Moving out under intense enemy fire, Captain Jones occupied an important observation post in order to relay information pertinent to the situation. Realizing the enemy continued to occupy key positions among friendly bunkers and trenches, he volunteered to lead troops in a sweep of the area. When given permission, he personally led two squads of reinforcements through heavy mortar and artillery fire and commenced flushing out the enemy. With the aid of a flame thrower carried up by Captain Jones and under his active participation and direction, the group moved through the fire swept area and completely neutralized many of the dug in Chinese. Throughout this action, Captain Jones displayed complete disregard for his own safety by continually exposing himself in order to better direct the operations, and as a result of his courageous leadership the friendly position was secured. The gallantry in action

JONES, LINCOLN GRIFFIN

Lincoln Jones graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1951. He retired in 1970 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Lincoln Griffin Jones (ASN: 0-64119), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company A, 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 31 July 1952 to 1 August 1952, in the vicinity of Chorwon, North Korea. At that time Lieutenant Jones was in command of an Infantry platoon whose mission was to attack the crest of Hill 266, better known as "Old Baldy". As the platoon moved forward, the enemy launched a devastating barrage of artillery and mortar fire which pinned them down. Lieutenant Jones, with complete disregard for personal safety, voluntarily moved out into the fire-swept area to assume better command of his unit. Charging forward, he unleashed a vicious attack upon the hostile force, inflicting numerous casualties and so inspiring his men that they immediately followed his courageous example. Even though wounded when the savage foe made a counterattack, he courageously moved from man to man shouting instructions and praise until the attack was repelled. The gallantry in action displayed by Lieutenant Jones reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Edwin Joseph graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1967 as a United States Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Field Artillery) Edwin Mortimer Joseph (ASN: 0-28522), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters, 37th Field Artillery Battalion, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 18 May 1951, in the vicinity of Chaun-ni, Korea. Captain Joseph, while in a position he knew to be cut off by the enemy stayed in position firing many artillery missions, and aided his forward observers in their own missions. Though under extremely heavy small arms, automatic weapons, and mortar fire, Captain Joseph went in search of his men to pass on the order to withdraw. Not finding them in their previous location he assisted in removing the wounded from the area at which time he was wounded. His vehicles were immediately brought under machine gunfire and he was forced to abandon them, thus halting his fire missions. At this point, he brought his men through the enemy lines and safely into friendly areas. The inspiring leadership and gallantry in action displayed by Captain Joseph reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Samuel Kail graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1939. He retired with disability in 1969 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry), [then Major] Samuel Goodhue Kail (ASN: 0-22072), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2d Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 3 December 1950 at Huksu-ri, Korea, an estimated force of two enemy regiments attacked the 2d Battalion over-running the defense positions. The battalion was forced to withdraw due to the overwhelmingly numerically superior enemy pressure. During the withdrawal Colonel Kail, heedless of his personal safety while under withering small arms, automatic weapons, and mortar fire, continually exposed himself in order to reorganize his men and direct their successful withdrawal. He accomplished this by walking up and down fire swept positions calmly giving orders and assisting his men. Colonel Kail's cool, daring leadership instilled confidence in his men. His intrepid heroism on this occasion is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

KELLUM, WILLIAM HAROLD [(POW-KIA)]

William Kellum graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He was captured in January 1951 and held as a Prisoner of War. He died in captivity while serving as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant about six months after he was captured.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) William Harold Kellum (ASN: 0-62736), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Company G, 2d Battalion, 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea, on 3 January 1951. First Lieutenant Kellum assigned the mission of maintaining a combat outpost approximately 3,000 yards in front of the main line of resistance. At the break of day, he could observe the enemy almost completely around his position. Realizing the threat to his security, he immediately began placing his men to meet the new threat. First Lieutenant Kellum ran from position to position, continually exposing himself to the enemy fire, in order to encourage his men and direct the fire fight. When last seen, he was running toward the right flank of his platoon to direct that group of men who were then heavily engaged with the enemy. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Kellum, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

KENNEDY, EDWIN LYLE

Edwin Kennedy graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1979 as a U.S. Army Brigadier General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Edwin Lyle Kennedy (ASN: 0-62590), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Company C, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea. On 29 November 1950, near Majon-Ni, Korea, Lieutenant Kennedy's unit came under heavy enemy fire on a narrow mountainous road known as "Ambush Alley". His unit sustained approximately 30 to 40 casualties. When Lieutenant Kennedy was given the order to withdraw he volunteered to remain behind to assist in evacuating the dead and wounded. In spite of the intense enemy rifle and automatic weapons fire, Lieutenant Kennedy, with complete disregard for his own personal safety, organized the men to collect the casualties and personally assisted them in loading the casualties on vehicles. The initiative, gallantry and leadership displayed by Lieutenant Kennedy reflects great credit upon himself and upholds the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Edwin Lyle Kennedy (ASN: 0-62590), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Company C, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea. On 12 December 1950, near Chigyeong, Korea, Company C's platoons were located on prominent terrain features approximately two miles apart. While returning from the company command post, to his platoon, Lieutenant Kennedy came upon twelve enemy soldiers observing his platoon. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, he fearlessly opened fire at a range of thirty yards, killing one of the enemy, wounding another, and scattering the remainder. The enemy attempted to surround Lieutenant Kennedy. At this critical point his carbine ceased to function. As one of the enemy soldiers rushed him from the rear, Lieutenant Kennedy promptly clubbed the man to death with his carbine. Immediately grabbing the enemy's automatic weapon, he sprayed the remaining enemy soldiers with heavy fire, causing them to flee. The exceptional and outstanding courage displayed by Lieutenant Kennedy reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

KERR, EDWIN BARTLETT

Edwin Kerr graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired with disability in 1963 as a U.S. Army Major.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Edwin Bartlett Kerr (ASN: 0-27796), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of Company E, 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 30 August 1951 in the vicinity of Tumil-li, Korea. On this date during an assault to secure a strategic enemy-held hill, Company E met heavy enemy resistance. Captain Kerr, company commander, repeatedly exposed himself to intense hostile fire in order to better deploy his men in their attack. With complete disregard for his personal safety, he advanced to the most forward element of his unit, directing the attack and assisting in caring for the wounded. During the encounter, due to the loss of its crew, Captain Kerr assumed the position of a machine gunner and delivered accurate and effective fire upon the enemy, inflicting numerous casualties. His courageous

*KIRKPATRICK, LESLIE WHITTINGTON [KIA (KOREA)]

Leslie Kirkpatrick graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant in the Korean War, little more than a year after graduation.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Leslie Whittington Kirkpatrick (ASN: 0-59140), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Company E, 2d Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy near Anju, Korea, on 5 November 1950. First Lieutenant Kirkpatrick's company was attacked from the front, left flank and rear, by an enemy force estimated at battalion strength. He immediately proceeded to build a firing line with his ammunition bearers to protect his crew-served weapons from the enemy assault. In spite of severe losses the enemy continued his fanatic advance. When he saw that the enemy hordes would not be stopped, First Lieutenant Kirkpatrick gave the desperate order to fire the mortars straight into the air, bringing their fire down on his own positions. When the sole remaining gunner fell wounded, First Lieutenant Kirkpatrick ran to the mortar positions to load the piece; the enemy overran the position and First Lieutenant Kirkpatrick was killed. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Kirkpatrick, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

KORCHEK, ROBERT LOUIS

Robert Korchek graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, Class of 1952. He retired in 1974 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Second Lieutenant (Infantry) Robert Louis Korchek (ASN: 0-66520), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company F, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. During the early morning hours of 15 June 1953 in the vicinity of Chat-Kol, Korea, Company F, 2d Battalion, of which Lieutenant Korchek was a platoon leader, had the mission of counterattacking and regaining control of positions overrun by the enemy in earlier action. He was attempting to clear the trenches of enemy soldiers when a flare revealed an opening in the trench. Lieutenant Korchek immediately led two of his men through the trench despite the fact that the enemy soldiers were throwing grenades and firing repeatedly at him and his men. He led the men toward the numerically superior force, firing his carbine, then throwing grenades, and finally using his bayonet against the foe. After destroying the hostile group he jumped out of the trench and directed friendly fire at the remainder of the enemy in the vicinity. As a result of his actions, the hostile force was repulsed from the sector until a larger friendly force took over the position of Lieutenant Korchek's platoon. Lieutenant Korchek's outstanding gallantry and devotion to duty reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

LANGREN, DONALD RICHARD

Donald Langren graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He resigned in 1954 as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Second Lieutenant (Field Artillery) Donald Richard Langren (ASN: 0-60484), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Battery C, 10th Field Artillery, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 6 December 1950, near Su-dong, Korea, Lieutenant Langren was an Artillery Forward Observer with a reinforced infantry platoon which was sent to relieve an ambushed Marine Corps convoy. At the scene of the ambush the platoon received intense fire from enemy machine guns and small arms. An official photographer was wounded in the leg, and Lieutenant Langren dragged him to a ditch and bandaged his wound although there was little cover from the enemy. In the face of the heavy fire he then conducted artillery fire on the surrounding ridges from beneath his vehicle where he had taken his microphone because the intense enemy fire denied him the use of his radio otherwise. When the position of the relief elements was deemed untenable by the officer in charge of the platoon, Lieutenant Langren, although only an attached artillery observer, coolly assumed control. He not only continued to direct artillery fire but effectively directed the use of the platoon's weapons while organizing the turning around of the vehicles. Under his supervision, a complete and successful withdrawal was effected including the evacuation of two wounded Marines. Lieutenant Langren's outstanding, fearless leadership, resourcefulness, and gallantry reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

LEE, JAMES MADISON

James Lee graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1985 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) James Madison Lee (ASN: 0-62578), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3d Battalion, 5th Regimental Combat Team, 24th Infantry Division (then a member of Company L, 5th Regimental Combat Team, 24th Infantry Division), near Tari-dong, Korea, on 3 August 1951. His platoon, acting as the assault element in an attack on enemy positions, was pinned down by intense bursts from an enemy machine gun nest. Realizing that his men were unable to move out of danger, Lieutenant Lee, Platoon Leader, unhesitatingly moved toward the critical emplacement. Exposing himself fearlessly to the murderous fire, he took an unprotected position and fired his pistol with devastating accuracy into the enemy emplacement, effectively pinning down its occupants and enabling his men to advance unopposed and destroy the strongpoint. With this key obstacle removed, the platoon was then able to capture the objective. Lieutenant Lee's courageous action, exemplary leadership and selfless performance of duty reflect the highest credit on himself and the United States Infantry.

LEWIS, WILLIAM WARNER, JR.

William Lewis graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1976 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry), [then First Lieutenant] William Warner Lewis, Jr. (ASN: 0-28433), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company G (then Company E), 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 18 and 19 September 1952 in the vicinity of Chorwon, North Korea. On the night of 18 September 1952, Company E was moving forward in the attack on Hill 266, a strategic, strongly held enemy position more commonly known as "OLD BALDY". As the lead platoon advanced toward the objective they suddenly became entrapped in a vicious ambush which threatened to break up the friendly unit's attack. Undaunted by the heavy enemy small arms and mortar fire, Captain Lewis, with complete disregard for personal safety, moved forward to the ambush area and began reorganizing his unit. Although painfully wounded in this action, he remained with his men and successfully led them from the ambush. Returning to the Main Line of Resistance, the friendly unit regrouped and obtained fresh supplies of ammunition and on the afternoon of 19 September 1952, they were led by Captain Lewis in a concentrated attack on the objective. As they met the initial resistance, Captain Lewis, subjecting himself to deadly enemy fire, went from man to man, assuring himself that they were prepared for anything that might occur. In the assault, his relentless determination was responsible for getting the men to greater efforts in the midst of savage enemy fire. Just when the attack would appear to be waning, his inspirational guidance would keep the men moving on. Upon reaching the crest of the hill, the small group remained there in defensive positions for approximately two hours, continually under a vehement hail of enemy mortar, artillery, and small arms fire. Captain Lewis' aggressive action inflicted numerous enemy casualties and made easier a subsequent successful capture of the objective the next morning. The gallantry and selfless devotion to duty exhibited by Captain Lewis on this occasion reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

LICHTENBERG, ALAN ARTHUR

Alan Lichtenberg graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, Class of 1951. He resigned in 1955 as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Second Lieutenant (Corps of Engineers) Alan Arthur Lichtenberg (ASN: 0-63892), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company A, 10th Engineer Combat Battalion, 3d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea. On 28 July 1952, Lieutenant Lichtenberg volunteered to accompany a relief party which was to attempt to reestablish physical contact with a friendly outpost near Koyangdae, Korea, that had become isolated by the flooding of the Imjin River. As the party endeavored to swim up the river, in order to skirt a bordering mine field, one of the volunteers was drowned in the raging current in spite of the heroic attempts on the part of Lieutenant Lichtenberg to save him. Realizing that this route would be impassable, Lieutenant Lichtenberg unhesitatingly volunteered to assist in clearing a safe lane through the mine field. Cautiously they probed a path through the mined area, and though subjected to enemy artillery and mortar fire, they determinedly continued clearing a path through the mine field and marking it with torn bits of clothing. After some 200 yards of probing they reached the other side of the mine field; thereby establishing a route over which the observation post could be supplied and wounded evacuated. Lieutenant Lichtenberg's outstanding gallantry and untiring devotion to duty reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

SILVER STAR (KOREAN WAR)

while leading a flight of four F-86s near the Chong Chon River in North Korea, Captain Lilley went to the aid of friendly fighter aircraft under attack from enemy MiG aircraft. Sighting one of the enemy MiGs pulling up from a firing pass, Captain Lilley, flying at maximum speed, closed to fire. Suddenly the enemy's aircraft stalled, making imminent a crash with the on-rushing F-86. Reacting instantly, Captain Lilley, in one motion, fired an accurate lethal burst and skillfully maneuvered past the right wing of the MiG, successfully avoiding a collision. At the moment he pulled past the MiG, it exploded, rocking Captain Lilley's aircraft violently and sending it temporarily out of control; but with superb airmanship, he regained control and rejoined his flight. A later check disclosed that Captain Lilley had expended only one hundred and eighty rounds of ammunition in downing this, his fifth enemy aircraft. Through his high personal courage in going to the aid of friendly fighters and his keen airmanship, marksmanship and devotion to duty, Captain Lilley upheld the highest traditions of the military service and reflected great credit upon himself, the FAR EAST Air Forces, and the United States Air Force.

LILLY, EDMUND JONES, III [MIA (KOREA) KIA]

Edmund Lilly graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army Second Lieutenant in Korea, only three months after graduation. His remains were recovered and returned home in 2003.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to Second Lieutenant (Infantry) Edmund Jones Lilly, III (ASN: 0-62657), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company B, 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 31 August 1950 to 3 September 1950, in the vicinity of Yongsan, Korea. On that date, as a rifle platoon leader, Lieutenant Lilly and his platoon were defending the high ground along the Naktong River when an overwhelming horde of fanatical enemy launched their greatest assault against the positions held by our forces. The initial enemy attack came at 2300 on 31 August 1950. During the intense automatic weapons fire and grenade explosions Lieutenant Lilly walked among his men encouraging them to greater efforts in their valiant defense against insurmountable odds. Realizing his position was untenable, he gathered the remaining men about him and moved them to a piece of commanding ground over-looking the river. This small heroic group was soon completely surrounded by the enemy. Ammunition and water were exhausted and supplies had to be air dropped. The enemy launched vicious attacks against his platoon night and day for three days but could not force this valiant group so ably led by Lieutenant Lilly from their position. Days later when the position was finally re-taken by friendly forces, the enemy dead were littered and piled two and three deep in front of the platoon's position. Lieutenant Lilly and all of his men had been killed by the relentless enemy pressure but through his refusal to give ground before tremendous odds he permitted the 9th Infantry Regiment the precious hours necessary to regroup and form a new defense line. Lieutenant Lilly's gallantry and leadership reflect great credit upon himself and uphold the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

LOUGHEED, MELVILL JOHN

Melvill Lougheed graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, Class of 1950. He resigned in 1954 as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Melvill J. Lougheed (ASN: 62743), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company A, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On the morning of 23 April 1952, Lieutenant Lougheed was a member of a rescue patrol of Company A whose mission was to attack the enemy-held outpost, "Nori", in the vicinity of Majon-Ni, Korea, and recover the bodies of two fellow soldiers. As the group proceeded, they encountered an intense concentration of mortar fire but succeeded in evacuating one of the bodies that lay on the reverse slope. Lieutenant Lougheed then maneuvered his men to the left slope, placing them advantageously for an assault on "Nori" where the second body lay. As the friendly troops advanced toward the objective, a vicious raking fire was laid upon them by hostile forces. Lieutenant Lougheed exposed himself to this fire to lead the assault against the entrenched enemy on the crest of the hill. With words of encouragement he pressed his troops forward and only when the friendly forces suffered a serious casualty and their ammunition supply was expended, did Lieutenant Lougheed give the order to withdraw. He supervised the withdrawal with such calmness and confidence that he effected an orderly withdrawal through heavy artillery and mortar fire with a minimum of casualties. Lieutenant Lougheed's conspicuous gallantry and outstanding devotion to duty reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

LOVE, ROBERT WORRELL

Robert Love graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1938. He retired in 1968 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Corps of Engineers) Robert Worrell Love (ASN: 0-21062), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 2d Engineer Combat Battalion, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 9 October 1951 in the vicinity of Saegonbae, Korea. On this date, two companies of Colonel Love's battalion were working on the main route of entrance to Mundon-ni, in an effort to break loose a tank force in order to get behind the enemy's defense. Colonel Love voluntarily went through both company's work sites, encouraging the men and supervising the operations. On his visit to the forward elements, the unit was subjected to moderate to intense enemy mortar and artillery fire. In spite of the fact, Colonel Love remained with the men, lending morale support and giving technical assistance where needed. His courageous leadership and calm manner while under enemy fire instilled confidence and inspiration in his men that they successfully completed their mission despite the furious efforts of the enemy. The gallantry in action and devotion to duty displayed by Lieutenant Colonel Love on this occasion reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

*LUTTERLOH, SAMUEL AYER [POW (KOREA) KIA-KK]

Samuel Lutterloh graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1951. He was missing in action while serving as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant in the Korean War, little more than a year after graduation. His remains have never been recovered.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant Samuel Ayer Lutterloh (ASN: 0-64100), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company K, 3d Battalion, 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 14 August 1952 in the vicinity of Chorwon, Korea. On that date, Lieutenant Lutterloh, a Platoon Leader, organized a patrol to rescue wounded members of a raiding party which had been operating in front of the Company K sector. The area which Lieutenant Lutterloh entered with his patrol, was heavily mined and continuously subjected to heavy artillery and mortar fire. He made repeated trips into this area, each time guiding back walking wounded and dispatching litter bearers with the seriously wounded. He was directly responsible for the saving of many lives and the prevention of capture of many American soldiers. The gallantry in action displayed by Lieutenant Lutterloh reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

LYNCH, JOHN MATTHEW

John Lynch graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1936. He retired in 1955 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) John Matthew Lynch (ASN: 0-20377), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 29 August 1951 in the vicinity of Yanggu, Korea. On this date the 9th Infantry Regiment was engaged in a desperate struggle with a numerically superior enemy force, defending vital terrain. The 2d Battalion was receiving a devastating hail of enemy fire which threatened the attacking forces. Colonel Lynch, regimental commander, realizing the seriousness of the situation, made a reconnaissance tour of the combat area to determine the necessity of holding the position. Advancing to the farthest outposts of each company, he braved the continuous enemy fire in order to gain complete knowledge of the situation. Displaying a confident manner which coupled with his close contact inspired the officers and men of the battalion. The first hand knowledge gained by Colonel Lynch's repeated reconnaissance tours ultimately resulted in the capture of the enemy positions. The gallantry and outstanding leadership displayed by Colonel Lynch reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Third Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Second Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Third Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) John Matthew Lynch (ASN: 0-20377), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy from 6 through 8 October 1951 in the vicinity of Yanggu, Korea. During this period the infantry regiment had the mission of attacking and securing strongly fortified positions defended by a determined and fanatical enemy force. Throughout the operation, friendly units were under heavy enemy mortar, automatic weapons and small arms fire. In spite of this action and displaying utter disregard for his own safety, Colonel Lynch, time and again, advanced through the heavy enemy fire to a vantage point in order to better observe the action and direct the operations of his unit. Under his brilliant leadership the infantry regiment succeeded in its mission, securing the enemy positions and inflicting numerous casualties upon the enemy while suffering a minimum of friendly casualties. His dauntless courage and brilliant direction of the operation were directly responsible for the regiment's success. The gallant actions of Colonel Lynch were highly inspirational to those about him and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Fourth Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Third Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Fourth Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) John Matthew Lynch (ASN: 0-20377), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 10 October 1951 in the vicinity of Mundung-ni, Korea. On this date the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry Regiment, had encountered heavy resistance from hostile forces which inflicted numerous casualties upon friendly troops and halted the advance of the leading elements. Although point blank mortar fire from commanding hostile positions proceeded to hamper the command post, Colonel Lynch immediately joined the battalion staff. In order to more fully view the situation, he braved the hostile fire and openly walked around the shelled area obtaining vital information and offering words of encouragement to his men. Despite the fact that enemy sniper fire continuously endangered his life, Colonel Lynch refused to leave the hill and remained until the hostile strongholds had been secured. His inspiring leadership and confident manner were the prime factors in rallying the men to hold against great odds. The gallantry in action and devotion to duty displayed by Colonel Lynch on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

MACKERT, JOHN RODWAY

John Mackert graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He retired in 1970 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) John Rodway Mackert (ASN: 0-59146), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2d Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division (then a member of Company F, 2d Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division), near Ori-Tong, Korea, on 5 November 1951. His platoon had the mission of moving up a valley, between enemy-held hills, on a combat patrol. Having reached the destination without incident, Lieutenant Mackert, Platoon Leader, was leading his men back to friendly lines when the group was suddenly subjected to an intense concentrated enemy mortar barrage. As the riflemen tried to escape from the explosions, the enemy pinned them down with murderous machine gun crossfire. The numerically superior enemy force then launched a savage attack. But under Lieutenant Mackert's skillful leadership, the friendly troops repelled the charge and began to withdraw. The enemy pressed harder, however, and attempted to outflank his unit, making it virtually impossible for it to disengage. With complete disregard for his own safety, Lieutenant Mackert ordered his men to withdraw and remained to provide covering fire. Taking an exposed position, he fired with devastating accuracy into the enemy hordes, wounding many and forcing the others to seek cover. He then rejoined his men, who had escaped from the trap only to be stopped by an enemy force which had moved to their rear. Lieutenant Mackert fearlessly attacked the key hostile machine gun position, killing all three gunners. Meanwhile, all his men fought their way through except for one wounded soldier. Oblivious to the enemy fire, he picked the man up and carried him to safety. Lieutenant Mackert's courageous action, exemplary leadership and selfless performance of duty reflect the highest credit on himself and the United States Infantry.

MAHOWALD, ROBERT ANTHONY

Robert Mahowald graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1947. He resigned in 1956 as a U.S. Army National Guard Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Robert Anthony Mahowald (ASN: 0-50796), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 35th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division in Korea. On 20 September 1950, a heavy barrage of artillery delayed one company in a battalion attack toward Chungam-ni, Korea. To prevent further delay and possible disastrous losses, Captain Mahowald moved forward 1,000 yards through the intense hostile fire, contacted the company commander and assisted in an alternate attack. As enemy resistance increased, a mine sweeping detail was pinned down, thereby delaying movement of supporting tanks. Again Captain Mahowald braved severe enemy action to reach the lead tank, reorganized the mine sweeping detail which, inspired by his example of determination and courage, moved out so that the attack could be pursued to successful conclusion. Captain Mahowald's gallant leadership and exceptional military ability are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Armor) Cloyce Leland Mangas (ASN: 0-62343), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company A, 64th Heavy Tank Battalion, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 3 May 1951, in the vicinity of Uijongbu, Korea, the lead platoon of an armored column received small arms and mortar fire from the low hills extending across the valley. Quickly analyzing the situation, Lieutenant Mangas voluntarily led his tank platoon in an assault on the hill without the benefit of infantry support. While standing exposed in the turret of his tank, he instructed and encouraged the members of the unit. When the approach to the objective was impeded by two tank traps which were under constant enemy fire, Lieutenant Mangas skillfully maneuvered the tanks over the first obstacle by filling in the ditch with discarded oil drums and other material. Discovering that the depth of the second trap prevented any possible crossing, he made a personal reconnaissance and found a suitable by-pass, enabling the unit to continue its advance. Lieutenant Mangas' gallantry, initiative, and selfless devotion to duty materially contributed to the ultimate success of the mission and reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

MATEJOV, STEPHEN ANDREW

Stephen Matejov graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Coast Artillery Corps) Stephen Andrew Matejov, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with the Battery A, 15th Anti-Aircraft Artillery (Automatic Weapons) Battalion (Self Propelled), 7th Infantry Division, in action near Sogu-ri, Korea, on 17 November 1950. On this date, the platoon which Lieutenant Matejov commanded was providing close support for the 1st Battalion, 17th Infantry Regiment. He led a section of his platoon at the head of a column which was advancing north against the enemy. At about 0950 hours, the point was fired upon from positions on both sides of the road. This intense fire came from automatic weapons and small arms. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, Lieutenant Matejov immediately left the relative security of his M-19 and proceeded under heavy fire to a forward position from which he was better able to spot the sources of the enemy fire. He remained in his exposed position for a period of one and a half hours spotting enemy targets and placing his 40-mm. and .50 caliber fire thereon. His coolness and heroism under fire enabled his platoon to mass its fires on numerous enemy targets, and the destruction thereof allowed the column to continue its northward attack with dispatch. First Lieutenant Matejov's gallant actions and selfless devotion to duty, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army.

MATHER, LINWOOD BERTRAM

Linwood Mather graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1975 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Armor) Linwood Bertram Mather (ASN: 0-62449), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company B, 64th Heavy Tank Battalion, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 7 April 1951, in the vicinity of Sinpoki, Korea, while a tank-infantry team was advancing upon enemy positions, the lead tank, in which Lieutenant Mather was riding, suddenly came under a hail of enemy small arms fire. Not having sufficient time to give instructions to his platoon over the radio, Lieutenant Mather stood exposed in the tank's turret and, using arm and hand signals, deployed his platoon in an encircling movement. When the proximity of the hostile forces prevented an effective usage of the tank's gun, Lieutenant Mather hurled hand grenades and fired his pistol at the enemy. The other tanks immediately joined in the engagement and soon the enemy soldiers began to surrender. While the infantrymen were rounding up the prisoners, heavy fire was received from well-concealed enemy positions in the adjacent hills. Lieutenant Mather dismounted and, leading his platoon forward in an assault, effectively neutralized the enemy emplacements. The daring bravery and gallantry displayed by Lieutenant Mather reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

MATHIS, ROBERT COUTH

Robert Mathis graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1948. As a fighter pilot he flew combat missions in both the Korean and Vietnam Wars, earning a Silver Star in Korea and the DFC in each of the two wars. From 1980 to 1982 he served as the 18th Vice Chief of Staff of the Air Force. He retired in 1982 as a U.S. Air Force 4-Star General.

Synopsis: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star (Army Award) to First Lieutenant Robert Couth Mathis (AFSN: 17787A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action against the enemy while serving as Pilot of a Fighter Airplane with the 51st Fighter-Interceptor Group, FIFTH Air Force, in aerial operations in Korea, on the night of 26 November 1950. While serving as a volunteer in a ground assignment as a Forward Air Controller with the South Korean army, his forward position was overrun by members of the Chinese army. First Lieutenant Mathis was shot and slightly wounded but evaded capture by escaping on a retreating American tank. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Mathis, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Air Force.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

McADOO, RICHARD FREEMAN

Richard McAdoo graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1947. He retired in 1974 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Corps of Engineers), [then First Lieutenant] Richard Freeman McAdoo (ASN: 0-50609), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company A, 65th Engineer Combat Battalion, 25th Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 26 July 1950, near Yongdong, Korea, the regimental combat team to which Captain McAdoo's company was attached was threatened by strong enemy action on the flank in addition to heavy frontal attack. Hearing of this, Captain McAdoo without orders, proceeded seven miles over hazardous routes to contact the regimental combat team commander and make personal reconnaissance of the flank where his unit could be used. Returning to the company, he led it forward and established it on the flank where the hostile threat was eliminated. By his bold initiative and exemplary courage and military ability, Captain McAdoo rendered invaluable assistance to the hard-pressed infantry team. His actions reflected great credit upon himself and upheld the highest traditions of the United States Army.

During the fighting near Huachon, Colonel McCaffrey, after ordering his 2d Battalion to secure an enemy-held hill, left his observation post and moved under heavy enemy artillery fire to reach the battalion commander where he gave advice on the attack. Colonel McCaffrey advanced with fighting elements, personally directing artillery fire, until the hill was secured, and then established his observation post on the new hill in view of the enemy. He was credited with being materially responsible for the success of the mission. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Colonel McCaffrey, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

MCCHRYSTAL, HERBERT JOSEPH, JR.

Herbert McChrystal graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1974 as a U.S. Army Major General.

First Award

Synopsis: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918 (amended by an act of July 25, 1963), takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Herbert Joseph McChrystal, Jr. (ASN: 0-27327), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of Company F, 2d Battalion, 14th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy near Unggok, Korea, in on 10 June 1953. On that date the enemy was delivering intense mortar, grenade, and small arms fire against friendly positions. Although the enemy had excellent observation, Captain McChrystal's company engaged the enemy in a closer fire fight as they advanced up the enemy-held hill. Captain McChrystal repeatedly exposed himself to the enemy fire as he controlled the forward advance of his point man. When his men went to the rescue of a wounded man lying within fifteen yards of the enemy trench, Captain McChrystal showed no regard for his personal safety while assisting in the rescue of the man. He stormed toward the enemy trench delivering hand grenades and small arms fire on the entire positions and subsequently directed the evacuation of the wounded man. His men were able to inflict heavy casualties upon the enemy. Due to Captain McChrystal's superior ability to think and act under combat, the mission was successfully accomplished. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Captain McChrystal, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

MCDANIEL, WILLIAM THOMAS [POW (KOREA) KIA]

William McDaniel graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1941. He was a decorated veteran of service in World War II, before serving in Korea. He was captured while serving with the 34th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, and was murdered in captivity as a Prisoner of War, on October 20, 1950 at Suncheon, North Korea while resisting enemy brutality.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major (Infantry) William Thomas McDaniel (ASN: 0-12650/0-24088), United States Army, for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action while serving as a member of Headquarters Company, 34th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action on 20 July 1950, at Taejon, Korea. After a Battery of 155 millimeter howitzers had been overrun by the enemy and the weapons turned on our own troops, Major McDaniel was ordered to neutralize the position. He gathered a group of volunteers from headquarters personnel and led the attack on the battery position. Despite intense small arms and mortar fire, Major McDaniel succeeded in retaking the howitzers. Going beyond his instructions, he brought up prime movers, coupled the guns and, through a hail of hostile fire, led the convoy out to a position of safety. By his inspirational

MC ELROY, EDWARD REXFORD [KIA (KOREA)]

Edward McElroy graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant in the Korean War.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Field Artillery) Edward Rexford McElroy (ASN: 0-27634), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters Company, 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 18 January 1951 in the vicinity of Wonju, Korea. Lieutenant McElroy was returning from a patrol in the Wonju area with fourteen men and was en route south on the Sillim-ni - Wonju Road. At about 1410 hours, the patrol came under intense small arms and automatic weapons fire from an enemy force of approximately 30 occupying high ground northeast of the road. The patrol immediately deployed to the sides of the road, splitting into two groups, and Lieutenant McElroy assumed command of the rear group. With complete disregard for his personal safety, he exposed himself in order to direct his men into firing positions and place fire upon the enemy while his men sought more covered positions. When he was attacked by two enemy who subjected him to close-range submachine gun fire, he killed both of them and calmly continued to direct the fire and movements of his group. His coolness, decisiveness and courage under fire were responsible for the successful conduct of his group and enabled the patrol to repel the hostile assault with heavy losses. His gallantry on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and is in keeping with the fine traditions of the military service.

MCGRAW, DONALD CHARLES

Donald McGraw graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1948. He retired with disability in 1959 as a U.S. Army Major.

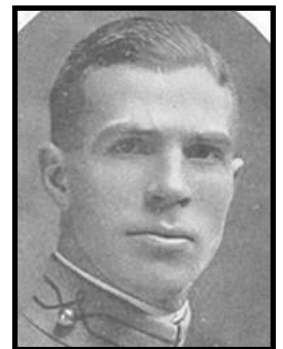

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major (Infantry) Donald Charles McGraw, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of the 3d Battalion, 35th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy near Tangwon-ni, Korea, on 7 - 8 September 1951. When the enemy launched its fierce assault under a covering artillery barrage, Major McGraw continually exposed himself to withering automatic weapons, mortar, and grenade fire to direct the defensive maneuvers and encourage his men to repulse the enemy attacks and retain the commanding position. After sending out a patrol to recover the dead and wounded, he attempted to regain friendly lines, although nearly encircled by the infiltrating enemy. Leading the men through hostile blocks and ambushes, he was successful in contacting friendly elements with minimum casualties. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Major McGraw, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

MEAD, ARMISTEAD DAVIS

Armistead Mead graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1924. He retired with disability in 1961 as a U.S. Army Major General.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Brigadier General Armistead Davis Mead (ASN: 0-15767), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Assistant Division Commanding General of the 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 25 April 1951, near Tongchon-ni, Korea, General Mead assumed the mission of controlling the rear guard action fought by the 3d Infantry Division during its withdrawal from the Imjin River. Under his skillful and personal direction, the vital road junction on the axis of the withdrawal was protected and held until all friendly forces had withdrawn. Flying at low altitudes over the enemy position in a helicopter, General Mead was subjected to severe enemy automatic weapons and small arms fire, but with complete disregard for his personal safety, made repeated flights in order to ascertain the composition and disposition of the hostile forces. His constant vigilance, skillful deployment and unselfish devotion to duty were prime factors in the success of this action. The gallantry and outstanding leadership displayed by General Mead were an inspiration to his men and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

MERGENS, GEORGE CONRAD

George Mergens graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1923. He retired in 1954 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) George Conrad Mergens (ASN: 0-15300), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 19 and 23 July 1952 in the vicinity of Chorwon, Korea. On 19 July 1952 Colonel Mergens' Regiment was engaged in vicious fighting to hold Hill 266, better known as "Old Baldy". During the counterattack launched by the 3d Battalion and after the Battalion Commander was wounded, Colonel Mergens reorganized one platoon of Company K under intense mortar fire which it had received before reaching the Line of Departure. He then accompanied the platoon to the jump off positions for its attack on "Baldy". Colonel Mergens continually exposed himself to danger to urge the men forward. Again on 23 July during the Chinese counterattack, Colonel Mergens remained with his forward command group in an advanced position. During the next 24 hours the enemy subjected his position and adjacent friendly troops to one of the most devastating artillery concentrations of the war. In his position as Regimental Commander, Colonel Mergens was conspicuous by his courageous conduct and utter disregard for his own safety. These acts of gallantry displayed by Colonel Mergens reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

SILVER STAR (KOREAN WAR)

MESSINGER, EDWIN JOHN [DNB (1965)]

Edwin Messinger graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1931. He earned his first Distinguished Service Cross in Korea on February 22 - March 11, 1951. Four months later on May 17 - 24, 1951, he earned a SECOND Distinguished Service Cross, along with multiple other awards. He died of cancer in 1965 while serving as a U.S. Army Lieutenant General.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Edwin John Messinger (ASN: 0-18503), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Executive Officer, 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 6 September 1950 in the vicinity of Changnyong, Korea. On that date the 23d Infantry Regiment launched a series of limited objective attacks in order to gain better positions. The entire operations was under the personal direction of Colonel Messinger. The advance of the regiment was bitterly contested by the enemy who was well-entrenched on commanding ground. In spite of intense enemy fire Colonel Messinger, with complete disregard for his personal safety, moved from one sector to another in order to supervise each phase of the attack. Time and again his presence in the forward positions inspired his troops to greater efforts. His skillful leadership in coordinating the assault elements resulted in a successful and brilliant operation and contributed immeasurably to the success of his regiment in this battle. The gallantry, tactical ability, and superior leadership demonstrated on this occasion by Colonel Messinger reflect great credit upon himself and are in keeping with the fine traditions of the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

MESZAR, FRANK

Frank Meszar graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1940. He retired in 1970 as a U.S. Army Brigadier General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major (Infantry) Frank Meszar (ASN: 0-23211), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Executive Officer of the 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 2 September 1950, near Changnyong, Korea. On the morning of that date, the Regimental Command Post was suddenly attacked by an overwhelming enemy force. Using automatic weapons, the enemy succeeded in pinning down the security unit, which was providing perimeter defense, and the Command Post was subjected to heavy small arms and automatic weapons fire. Major Meszar, then Regimental S-3, immediately organized the administrative personnel within the Command Post into a fighting unit, and by exposing himself to the extremely heavy enemy fire, personally led them to positions from which they were able to provide supporting fire for the security forces. When the enemy continued to advance he called for a nearby tank unit to provide additional supporting fire, and with total disregard for his personal safety he led two tanks into position and directed their fire upon the enemy. His inspiring leadership was a decisive factor in halting the enemy fire and in permitting the orderly withdrawal of personnel of the Command Post. The gallantry displayed by Major Meszar on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

METTS, ALBERT CASWELL, JR.

Albert Metts graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of June 1943. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major (Infantry) Albert Caswell Metts, Jr. (ASN: 0-26091), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters, 3d Battalion, 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 18 May 1951, in the vicinity of Chaunni, Korea. On that date the battalion was deployed in defensive positions on the right flank of the 2d Infantry Division when the enemy launched a determined attack. During the initial phase of the enemy offensive a large group infiltrated the friendly lines and prepared to attack the Battalion Command Post. Major Metts, Operations Officer, quickly organized all available personnel and skillfully deployed them in strategic positions, while constantly moving about the perimeter, encouraging his men and supplementing their fire with his own weapons. He noticed one of the enemy in the act of throwing a hand grenade into the operations tent. Without regard for his personal safety he single-handedly rushed toward the foe and killed him instantly, thereby saving the lives of several of his comrades. Later in the day the battalion's position became untenable as the enemy had succeeded in surrounding the area. Major Metts ordered all his men to prepare to withdraw. Keeping complete control of their movements, he led them to safety through the enemy lines. As soon as the unit broke contact with the enemy, Major Metts established a new defense line that was able to withstand the enemy assault. The heroic leadership and dauntless courage of Major Metts enabled the battalion to retain its tactical unity and contributed materially to halting the enemy offensive. The gallantry displayed by Major Metts reflects great credit upon himself and upholds the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

SILVER STAR (KOREAN WAR)

METZGER, JOHN HAYES

J. Hayes Metzger graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He retired in 1976 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) John Hayes Metzger (ASN: 0-59340), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of Company C, 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 1 August 1952 in the vicinity of Chorwon, North Korea. On that date, Lieutenant Metzger's company was engaged in an attack on a ridge-line leading to Hill 266, "Old Baldy". Upon receiving a radio message from the Battalion Commander informing him that his left flank was unable to make physical contact due to enemy machine gun emplacements between the two units, Lieutenant Metzger and members of his command voluntarily moved out under direct enemy fire in an attempt to reach them. Although being painfully wounded, he refused medical attention and fought desperately, killing ten of the enemy before reaching the supporting unit. Lieutenant Metzger remained in this position directing the friendly unit's fire until given a direct order by his Battalion Commander to evacuate himself for medical attention. Through his courageous actions the company was able to gain contact with the adjacent unit and successfully secure the strategic objective. Lieutenant Metzger's outstanding gallantry and devotion to duty reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

MEYER, HENRY JOHN DICK

Henry Meyer graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1919. He retired with disability in 1957 as a U.S. Army Brigadier General.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Brigadier General Henry John Dick Meyer (ASN: 0-12290), United States Army, for gallantry in action against the enemy as Commanding General, Division Artillery, 24th Infantry Division, in action during the period 16 to 20 September 1950, in Korea. During the advance on Waegwan, the Naktong River crossing and the ensuing pursuit of the enemy, Brigadier General Meyer was continuously present with both infantry and his own artillery unit commanders in the forward area. With complete disregard for his own safety he frequently exposed himself to intense enemy artillery, machine gun and small arms fire in order to better direct the employment of his command and to provide the maximum artillery support for the attack. His gallant actions were an inspiration to his command, greatly influenced the success of this most important operation and reflect the greatest credit on himself and the United States Army.

MICHAELIS, JOHN HERSEY

John Michaelis graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1936. He retired in 1972 as a U.S. Army General.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) John Hersey Michaelis (ASN: 0-20328), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 27th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. From 1 to 4 January, 1951, at Seoul, Korea, Colonel Michaelis' regiment was blocking the advance of numerically superior hostile forces while the Division displaced to new positions. Reconnoitering well in advance of the hostile assaults, he skillfully prepared a series of formidable blocking positions which enabled his men to effect rapid, orderly withdrawals from one emplacement to another, while inflicting staggering losses on the onrushing enemy and completely disrupting their plans to invest the Division. Throughout the entire engagement, despite exposure to intense hostile fire, the close proximity of infiltrating enemy and the most adverse climate conditions, he remained with the front line elements, encouraging his men to maximum effort. His gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

*MILAM, JAMES THOMAS [KIA (KOREA)]

James Milam graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1944. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army Captain in the Korean War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to Captain (Infantry) James Thomas Milam, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of Company E, 7th Cavalry (Infantry) Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 5 September 1950 near Waegwan, Korea. Two infantry companies under Captain Milam's command were attacking a heavily defended enemy position. Enemy tank and small arms fire from an adjacent hill pinned down the majority of the leading company and scattered the rest. Captain Milam reorganized the scattered remnants and consolidating them with the supporting company, moved into position to place effective fire on the enemy. His outstanding leadership was so successful that the lead company was able to withdraw with a minimum of casualties. He then remained behind and covered withdrawal of the support company. As Captain Milam was leaving the area, the last to withdraw, he was killed. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Captain Milam, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

MILBURN, FRANK WILLIAM

Frank Milburn graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1914. He retired in 1952 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant General.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Lieutenant General Frank William Milburn (ASN: 0-3738), United States Army, for gallantry in action in Korea. During the period of 6 September 1950 through 28 September 1950, General Milburn commanded the I Corps in an attack against an assaulting, aggressive enemy. The attack involved shifting from defense to offense with depleted troops that had been beaten back repeatedly by an enemy superior in numbers. General Milburn planned and launched the attack, broke the enemy offensive and main line of resistance and crossed the Naktong river. The attack unfolded over difficult terrain including mountains and the Naktong river against heavy opposition. During this period General Milburn was forward with the frontline units directing and encouraging them to seize assigned objectives without delay. His presence, enthusiasm, leadership and fearlessness inspired his command to victorious assault. With skill and shrewd tactics General Milburn led his command to enviable victory. His gallantry, heroism and valor reflected credit on himself, his command and the military service.

Fourth Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Third Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Fourth Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Frank Thomas Mildren (ASN: 0-21992), United States Army, for gallantry in action while Commanding the 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 26 July 1951 in the vicinity of Solsal-Lyong, Korea. On that date a battalion of his regiment was attacking a vitally fortified and well entrenched enemy force. As the attacking elements advanced they came under direct enemy small arms, automatic weapons, and artillery fire. With casualties mounting and the unit about to disintegrate, Colonel Mildren roused the men to disregard the opposition and personally organized the various elements into a cohesive force. He then launched a new and well coordinated assault which succeeded in overrunning the hostile positions and carried the battalion well into the main line of resistance. The gallantry and superb leadership demonstrated by Colonel Mildren on this occasion reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Fifth Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Fourth Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Fifth Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Frank Thomas Mildren (ASN: 0-21992), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 9 October 1951 in the vicinity of Sanggon-bae, Korea. On this date the 2d Battalion of the regiment was attacking Hill 800 to secure vital enemy-held positions. As the unit advanced it was halted by intense automatic weapons, small arms and artillery fire from a numerically superior enemy force. Realizing that the situation was critical, Colonel Mildren left his observation post and voluntarily advanced to an exposed position which was under direct hostile observation and fire of self propelled artillery. With utter disregard for his personal safety, he remained in this position and directed effective artillery, mortar, tank, and 75-mm. recoilless rifle fire against the well-entrenched hostile force. During the fierce fight, Colonel Mildren directed the fire with such accuracy that the enemy started to withdraw. Inspired by his example of bravery, the men of the battalion advanced in the attack confidently and aggressively, and with devastating effectiveness destroyed or dispersed the enemy and secured their objective. The gallantry in action and aggressive leadership displayed by Colonel Mildren on this occasion reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

MILEY, JOHN DAVID

John Miley graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired with disability in 1954 as a U.S. Army Captain.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) John David Miley (ASN: 0-28586), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of Company G, 2d Battalion, 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, 11th Airborne Division, in the vicinity of Parun-ni, Korea, on 25 March 1951. On that date, the weather was cold and wet, with a steady rain denying the company the use of tactical air support as it moved forward to assault a hill held by a well-entrenched enemy force. As the men proceeded toward their objective over the slippery terrain, they were suddenly subjected to a heavy volume of enemy small-arms and automatic-weapons fire. Unhesitatingly, Captain Miley moved to the head of his company and urged his men forward. Inspired by his personal example of courage in the face of the devastating enemy fire, the friendly forces successfully overran the hostile positions, driving the enemy down the reverse slope of the hill. However, by the time the objective had been secured, many of the company's weapons had been rendered inoperative by the inclement weather and the enemy, sensing this, immediately launched a fierce counterattack. Rapidly and skillfully deploying his men in a defensive perimeter, Captain Miley moved among them, directing their fire and encouraging them. Using the weapons that were still operating and hand grenades, the company successfully repulsed the fanatical attacks of the enemy, finally forcing the numerically superior hostile force to withdraw with many casualties. The gallantry and inspiring leadership displayed by Captain Miley throughout this action reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

MILIA, CARMELO PLACIDO

Carmelo Milia graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Armor) Carmelo Placido Milia (ASN: 0-62462), United States Army, for gallantry in connection with military operations against an opposing armed force while serving with Company A, 64th Medium Tank Battalion, 3d Infantry Division, in Korea. On 18 September 1951, two assault platoons of the reinforced tank battalion were engaged in a clean up mission near Hat-O-Dong, Korea, when three tanks of the leading platoon were suddenly disabled by mines and subjected to anti-tank fire. As the enemy continued firing from positions in the surrounding hills, the supporting infantry was dispersed in the open terrain. Lieutenant Milia, Fourth Platoon tank leader, was assigned the task of seizing a low hill, which would enable friendly troops to cover evacuation of the wounded and repair of the disabled tanks with fire protection. Disregarding the hail of hostile fire, he dismounted from his tank and moved about fearlessly organizing the nearest infantrymen into an assault team. Shouting encouragement to the men, he led them toward the objective which they secured and held until the tank force was ready to move. Although the group sustained casualties while assaulting the hill, Lieutenant Milia, by valorous and resolute leadership, retained control of the unit amid the intense hostile fire. The gallantry and inspiring leadership displayed by Lieutenant Milia reflect high credit upon himself and the military service.

MILLENER, GEORGE ALVIN, JR.

George Millener was a non-graduating Member of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He retired with disability in 1975 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) George Alvin Millener, Jr. (ASN: 0-61600), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Company B, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea. On 21 November 1950, near Majon-Ni, Korea, Lieutenant Millener was in command of a reinforced motorized platoon patrol proceeding to Tongyong, Korea. The patrol encountered a road block consisting of an overturned burned truck. Lieutenant Millener sent one squad forward to remove the road block. At this instant, heavy enemy fire was received from the left flank, and left rear of the column. Lieutenant Millener was wounded in his hand and leg in the initial outburst of fire. Unhesitatingly, and with utter disregard for his own personal safety, he moved to successive positions along the road, organizing his platoon. Although at all times exposed to consistent, intense enemy fire, he calmly stood on the road, directing the drivers into their vehicles and getting them turned around. Under covering fire directed by Lieutenant Millener, some vehicles with wounded aboard were able to withdraw to their battalion area. The gallantry, leadership and initiative displayed by Lieutenant Millener reflects great credit upon himself and upholds the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Ned Dalton Moore (ASN: 0-18212), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 19th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action near Hasan-Dong, Korea, on 19 September 1950. During the movement of his regiment to its assembly area for the crossing of the Nakdong River Colonel Moore preceded his assault elements in order to make a detailed reconnaissance of the area. Although the intensity of the enemy's fire increased as more and more elements of the regiment moved into position and severe casualties inflicted in his immediate area he remained in his exposed position to better observe and direct the river crossing. His personal presence in this critical area, combined with his calm quiet and optimistic manner proved a source of reassurance for his troops and materially assisted in the speedy and orderly execution of the assault crossing of the river. Colonel Moore's fearless example, superior leadership and devotion to duty reflect the greatest credit on himself and the United States Infantry.

river bed to support the attacking infantry. In the middle of the impact area, he found the route blocked by a truck loaded with gasoline. After directing his men to seek cover, he climbed into the truck and drove it through bursting shells to clear the route. His bold action enabled his platoon and its supporting tanks to proceed to the safety of a defilade. First Lieutenant Morrison's valorous initiative and selfless devotion to duty, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army.

MORROW, JARED WILLIAM [KIA (KOREA)]

Jared Morrow graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He was killed in action while swerving as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant during the Korean War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Jared William Morrow (ASN: 0-27566), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 1 September 1950 in the vicinity of Yongsan, Korea. On that date Company E, 9th Infantry Regiment was under attack by a numerically superior enemy force attempting to surround the company. Lieutenant Morrow, Aide-de-Camp to the Commanding General, voluntarily and with complete disregard for his personal safety, joined the friendly unit to aid in repelling the enemy force. Under his gallant leadership and courageous example the men of the company were able to repulse several enemy attacks, thereby preventing the hostile force from encircling the friendly unit and cutting it off from other units. During the ensuing action Lieutenant Morrow was wounded in the leg, and lost his life from loss of blood and shock while being evacuated. The gallantry and outstanding leadership displayed by Lieutenant Morrow on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

N

NAIRN, WILLIAM WALLACE, III

William Nairn graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1947. He retired in 1977 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry), [then First Lieutenant] William Wallace Nairn, III (ASN: 0-50720), United States Army, for gallantry in connection with military operations against an opposing armed force while serving with Company E, 2d Battalion, 27th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division. On 26 July 1950, near Sangn-yong, Korea, Captain Nairn was ordered to move his company up a narrow river bed to block the advance of enemy forces. He quickly organized a team of tanks and infantry and led them forward to recapture an enemy-held village. Proceeding beyond the town where numerically superior enemy forces held a strategic position, his company inflicted an estimated two hundred casualties upon the enemy before they were able to reinforce their position. When enemy reinforcements arrived and threatened to outflank his company, Captain Nairn withdrew his company so skillfully that a minimum of casualties were sustained despite withering fire from both flanks. His inspired leadership and gallant actions are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

- Headquarters, 25th Infantry Division, General Orders No. 80 (August 25, 1950)

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry), [then First Lieutenant] William Wallace Nairn, III (ASN: 0-50720), United States Army, for gallantry in connection with military operations against an opposing armed force while serving with Company E, 2d Battalion, 27th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division. When the line of departure had been secured for a battalion attack in the vicinity of Masan, Korea, on 2 August 1950 and Captain Nairn was moving his company along a road to the rear area, he was notified that the enemy had set up a road block and had immobilized a small friendly force with machine gun fire. Captain Nairn deployed two platoons to flank the enemy force which held a key hill, and moved the other platoon into position to trap the enemy as they withdrew. In the resulting action the enemy was deprived of the road which had served as a supply route and suffered heavy casualties. As the enemy retreated, they were reinforced to strength of an estimated battalion and counterattacked, isolating each of the three platoons. Captain Nairn devised a route of withdrawal for one platoon and moved through intense enemy fire to lead the other two platoons through the mountains to safety. Captain Nairn's resourcefulness, inspired leadership and selfless devotion to duty are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

NELSON, DANIEL JACK

Daniel Nelson graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1975 as a U.S. Air Force Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major Daniel Jack Nelson (AFSN: 16968A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action against an armed enemy of the United States as a Pilot of an FR-86 Sabrejet modified Fighter-Bomber of the 15th Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron, 67th Tactical Reconnaissance Group, FIFTH Air Force, on 18 February 1953. On that date, Major Nelson volunteered to fly an RF-86 aircraft on an extremely hazardous mission in support of a highly classified project of vital importance to the United Nations operations. Leading three F-86 aircraft, and with a flight of four aircraft as escort, Major Nelson penetrated deep into enemy territory to obtain photographic coverage of his assigned targets. While Major Nelson's flight was in the target area, it was attacked by a total of sixty-four MiG-15 aircraft. In the ensuing battles, four of the enemy aircraft were destroyed. At all times during the flight, Major Nelson displayed only concern for the successful accomplishment of the mission. Despite repeated attacks from enemy aircraft, Major Nelson, demonstrating exceptionally keen airmanship, procured photographic intelligence information of inestimable value to the United Nations forces. Through his outstanding professional skill and devotion to duty beyond the normal call, Major Nelson reflected great credit upon himself, the FIFTH Air Force, and the United States Air Force.

NEWCOMB, CHARLES WILLIAMS

Charles Newcomb graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1970 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Charles Williams Newcomb, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with an Infantry Company of the 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy near Waegwan, Korea, on 19 September 1950. First Lieutenant Newcomb, as a platoon leader, organized his men and attempted to cross the Naktong River by boat to attack the enemy on the farther bank. Their craft was overturned in midstream by enemy fire and First Lieutenant Newcomb led the men through neck-deep water in an attack against the enemy-held shore. After gaining a beachhead there, he led a volunteer group back into the river to rescue some wounded men stranded off a sandbar. He returned to his platoon and successfully overran and captured the enemy positions. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Newcomb, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

NORMAN, WILLIAM CLINTON

William Norman graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He retired in 1979 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) William Clinton Norman (ASN: 0-59296), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with the 31st Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy near Mundung-ni, Korea. On 26 January 1952, Lieutenant Norman volunteered as patrol leader for a platoon size combat patrol from Company G, 31st Infantry Regiment. The objective of the patrol was to neutralize an enemy held platoon size bunker that had offered stubborn and determined resistance, and to capture prisoners for interrogation. Advancing to the vicinity of the enemy emplacement, Lieutenant Norman directed the placement of an automatic rifle team to cover the entrance of the bunker. In an effort to draw the enemy out of their secure position, Lieutenant Norman exposed himself to heavy grenade fire of the enemy by proceeding to their location through a communications trench. Upon reaching the bunker, he hurled rocks at the door of the bunker in hopes the distraction would dislodge the occupants, however, he was met by a shower of hand grenades. Realizing the determination of the enemy, Lieutenant Norman directed the employment of a flame thrower to burn the enemy out of their fortification. Due to a mechanical failure attributed to the extreme cold, the flame thrower failed to operate properly. Without hesitation Lieutenant Norman took over the weapon himself and remedied the malfunction. He then moved completely exposed to hostile fire, to within ten yards of the bunker and employed the flame thrower to its greatest effectiveness. While thus exposed, Lieutenant Norman was wounded by an enemy hand grenade, but continued to employ the weapon until the fuel supply was completely exhausted. The intrepid actions of Lieutenant Norman undoubtedly saved the lives of many of his comrades and was instrumental in the complete destruction of the enemy emplacement. The gallantry displayed by Lieutenant Norman reflects great credit on himself and is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

NUTTING, WALLACE HALL

Wallace Nutting graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1985 as a U.S. Army 4-Star General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Armor) Wallace Hall Nutting (ASN: 0-62468), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company C, 72d Tank Battalion, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 18 May 1951, in the vicinity of Chaun-ni, Korea. Lieutenant Nutting, observing a battalion of enemy troops coming down a draw to attack the flank of friendly positions, immediately charged his platoon of tanks into the enemy forces. During this charge Lieutenant Nutting was standing on the out-side of his tank in order to permit better observation and control of his platoon. He remained in this exposed position after he had been wounded by enemy shrapnel, and continued to lead and encourage his men to such an extent that his platoon destroyed 350 of the enemy in this action. When two of his tanks were put out of action Lieutenant Nutting dismounted from his tank, disregarding the enemy small arms fire, and personally supervised the transfer of the crews to serviceable tanks. Lieutenant Nutting then noticed some friendly wounded soldiers nearby and again went unhesitatingly into the enemy fire to remove the wounded to the safety of the tanks. Lieutenant Nutting's gallantry was an inspiration to his men and reflects great credit upon himself and upholds the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

SILVER STAR (KOREAN WAR)

OVERTON, DOLPHIN DUNNAHA, III

Dolphin Overton graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949, after serving in the Navy. During the Korean War he became an ACE when he destroyed 7 enemy aircraft in aerial combat plus 1 damaged, in a span of only 4 days, from January 21 to January 24, 1953. His Distinguished Service Cross was a belated award, presented along with THREE (in addition to one already received) Silver Stars in 2009.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant Dolphin Dunnaha Overton, III (AFSN: 0-18504A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action against an armed enemy of the United States as Pilot of an F-86 Sabrejet Fighter-Bomber of the 16th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, 51st Fighter-Interceptor Group, FIFTH Air Force, over North Korea, 15 June 1952. On this date, Lieutenant Overton led a group-bombing raid to destroy specific targets on Pyongyang Airport East that remained after a previous group bombing effort. The accuracy of the attack was critical since prisoners of war were embedded in key sites in the target area. To assure the maximum safety of the prisoners of war, napalm and strafing runs were employed, making the attacking aircraft low and slow, vulnerable targets to the dense ground fire. The airport was heavily defended by forty-eight anti-aircraft guns and more than 100 automatic weapons, making it one of the worst "flak traps" in Korea. Against these improbable odds, Lieutenant Overton led his group-bombing raid in an almost perfect attack, resulting in 100 percent coverage and 98 percent effectiveness. No prisoner of war buildings were hit, nor did any aircraft sustain major damage. The results of the mission were cited as excellent and gratifying, and proved the ability of the FAR EAST Air Forces jet and propeller planes to carry out a variety of destructive missions. By his gallantry and devotion to duty, Lieutenant Overton has reflected great credit upon himself and the United States Air Force.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to First Lieutenant Dolphin Dunnaha Overton, III (AFSN: 0-18504A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action against an armed enemy of the United States as Pilot of an F-86 Sabrejet Fighter-Bomber of the 16th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, 51st Fighter-Interceptor Group, FIFTH Air Force, over Sakchu, North Korea, 4 July 1952. On this date, Lieutenant Overton led a group of 37 F-84s in a raid to strafe and deliver 7,000 gallons of napalm to the North Korean Military Academy, located across the Yalu River from Antung. Approximately 1,200 MiG-15s were based there. In spite of the fierce enemy opposition (200 attacking MiG-15s—the most numerous of the Korean War) and extremely heavy anti-aircraft fire, Lieutenant Overton and his group dealt a devastating blow to the Academy. During the preflight mission briefing, Lieutenant Overton emphasized there was no way to avoid radar detection, there would be MiG-15s encountered, and there would be no room for a feint to confuse their target destination. His pep talk described that they had to hit the target, not drop their ordnance at the report of

SILVER STAR (KOREAN WAR)

MiG-15s as previous bombing groups had done. He further advised that if attacked they would form Lufbery Circles, hold their ordnance, then go into the target zone and drop their ordnance. Each plane as it left the target area would hit the deck and proceed to the mouth of the Yalu River where it would group with the other planes and form another Lufbery Circle until the attacking MiG-15s ceased. During the mission, Lieutenant Overton led by example and maintained the integrity of his force. When the MiG-15s attacked the flights, the flights performed as briefed and no F-84s were lost and all ordnance was expended on target. The raid was selected to show the effectiveness of fighter-bombers under the nose of MiG-15s after B-29s had suffered unacceptable losses. So significant was Lieutenant Overton's mission that when the United Nations sent a number of aircraft to attack the hydroelectric plants on the Yalu River, no MiG-15s rose to protect them and resulted in the Russian Commander being relieved of command. The success of this mission exemplified what could be done by good leadership during the height of intense chaos in combat, and written by both sides as being one of the major raids of the Korean War that helped convince North Korea of their non-assurance of winning the war and returning to diplomatic peace talks. By his gallantry and devotion to duty, Lieutenant Overton has reflected great credit upon himself and the United States Air Force.

Third Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Second Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Third Award of the Silver Star to Captain [then First Lieutenant] Dolphin Dunnaha Overton, III (AFSN: 0-18504A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action against an armed enemy of the United States as Pilot of an F-86 Fighter-Bomber of the 16th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, 51st Fighter-Interceptor Group, FIFTH Air Force, near Insan-Dong, Korea, on 21 January 1953. Flying number two position in a flight of four F-86 aircraft, Captain Overton sighted four MiG-15s. He attacked one of them scoring hits on the wing and tail section. The enemy aircraft was observed going straight down. Minutes later, Captain Overton sighted five MiGs. He attacked one hitting the wing roots, fuselage, and tail section. The enemy aircraft made a turn left and was last observed in a steep dive with fuel streaming from the right wing. By his gallantry and devotion to duty in the dedication to duty of his service to his country, Captain Overton has reflected great credit upon himself and the United States Air Force.

Fourth Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Third Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Fourth Award of the Silver Star to First Lieutenant Dolphin Dunnaha Overton, III (AFSN: 0-18504A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action against an armed enemy of the United States as Pilot of an F-86 Sabrejet Fighter-Bomber of the 16th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, 51st Fighter-Interceptor Group, FIFTH Air Force. During his second combat tour, in a 4-day period of 21 to 24 January 1953, Lieutenant Overton led the 51st Flying Interceptor Wing in the confirmed shoot-down of four enemy MiG-15s. On 25 January 1953, while flying his aircraft near Uiju, Korea, Lieutenant Overton shot down his fifth enemy MiG-15. This accomplishment set a record in his becoming a jet ACE in the shortest period of time, becoming the 24th of the 38 ACEs of the Korean War. The professional competence, aerial skill, and devotion to duty displayed by Lieutenant Overton in the dedication of his service to his country reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Air Force.

PADEN, JEROME JAY [KIA (KOREA)]

Jerome Paden graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army Second Lieutenant during the Korean War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) [then Second Lieutenant] Jerome Jay Paden (ASN: 0-59363), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Battery A, 61st Field Artillery Battalion, 1st Cavalry Division, in action against the enemy on 19 September 1950, near Waegwan, Korea. Lieutenant Paden was in charge of a forward observation party providing close artillery support to an infantry battalion engaged in an attack on a heavily-fortified enemy hill position. After skillfully adjusting artillery fire which enabled the infantry units to eliminate strong points, Lieutenant Paden voluntarily accompanied a platoon in the final assault, at great risk to his own life. He repeatedly exposed himself to heavy enemy artillery, mortar, and small arms fire in order to afford friendly units maximum fire support. Lieutenant Paden continued to successfully adjust fire which made possible the success of the assigned mission, until he was seriously wounded. Lieutenant Paden's gallantry and devotion to duty reflect great credit upon himself and on the military service.

PANKE, ROBERT EDWARD

Robert Panke graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1941. He retired in 1968 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Field Artillery) Robert Edward Panke (ASN: 0-23831), United States Army, for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action while serving as a member of Headquarters, 57th Field Artillery Battalion, 7th Infantry Division, in action near Sokkogae, Korea. On 21 March 1953, friendly artillery bunkers had been damaged and the hill on which Colonel Panke's battalion was located was receiving heavy enemy artillery fire. Realizing the importance of first hand knowledge of the situation, Colonel Panke exposed himself to the enemy fire in order to make a physical reconnaissance of the artillery observation posts. At one of the outposts, Colonel Panke aided the observer to call in effective fire on the enemy. On his way to another outpost, Colonel Panke ignored the incoming shells in the trench area and made a full appraisal of the damage to the bunkers before returning to a position of comparative safety. Colonel Panke's consistent disregard for existing danger, outstanding contribution to the tactical situation, and evident eagerness for a complete analysis of the existing situation were an inspiration to all the officers and men who witnessed his actions. The gallantry displayed by Colonel Panke reflects great credit to himself and is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

PARTRIDGE, EARLE EVERARD

General Partridge was an enlisted man serving on the ground with the Army Engineers during World War I, and participated in both the St. Mihiel and Argonne Offensives. Returning to civilian life, he attended Norwich University for one year before entering West Point, graduating with the Class of 1924 as an Air Service officer. He was a test pilot in the 1930s, then served in World War II with the 12th, 15th, and 8th Air Force. After the war he transferred to the U.S. Air Force when it became a separate branch of service in 1947 and served in his third war in Korea. He retired in 1959 as a U.S. Air Force 4-Star General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major General Earle Everard Partridge (AFSN: 0-15502/33A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in connection with military operations against an opposing armed force while serving as Commanding General of the FIFTH Air Force, in Korea. Major General Partridge distinguished himself by conspicuous gallantry in action in the Korean campaign during the period 19 through 20 October 1950. On 19 October General Partridge made a reconnaissance flight over P'yongyang and, in spite of heavy ground fire aimed at his unarmed aircraft, directed air attacks which enabled forward units of the First Cavalry Division, U. S. Army, and the First Division, Republic of Korea, to hold their positions against the enemy. On 20 October, accompanied by his Army counterpart, Lieutenant General Walton H. Walker, commanding General of the Eighth Army, he flew an unarmed aircraft at low altitudes over the Sukch'on and Sonch'on areas, reconnoitering well behind enemy lines in preparation for the parachute drop of the 187th Regimental Combat Team. He remained to observe the activities of Air Force units participating in the attack. He also reconnoitered in the Chinnamp'o area where his aircraft was hit by automatic weapons and small arms fire. On 20 October, General Partridge made one of the first landings at the P'yongyang airport in order to make certain that this airport was sufficiently secure to permit the landing thereat of the Commander-in-Chief, United Nations Command. During the flights of 19 and 20 October, General Partridge's aircraft was also subject to attack by enemy aircraft known to be based at Sinuiju. The knowledge gained from these missions was invaluable in making tactical decisions and contributed largely to United Nations successes in North Korea. General Partridge's aggressiveness and courage in these instances have been outstanding sources of inspiration to the personnel of this command. They are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit on General Partridge and the United States Air Force.

PATTON, GEORGE SMITH

The son of the famous WWII general and double-DSC recipient, George Smith Patton was in his last year at West Point (Class of 1946) when his father, George S. Patton Jr., was killed in a traffic accident in Germany in December 1945. He was born George S. Patton IV but legally changed his name by dropping the Roman numeral. Serving in the Korean War, he earned his first Silver Star, and in Vietnam he earned TWO Distinguished Service Crosses and a second Silver Star. He was shot down at least three times during his three tours of Vietnam War duty. He retired in 1980 as a U.S. Army Major General, having at one point commanded the 2d Armored Division that his father had commanded in World War II, the only time in history a father and son have commanded the same division.

PECK, ALLEN LEEDS [POW (WWII)]

Allen Peck graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1936. He was captured after the fall of the Philippine Islands, and spent more than three years as a Prisoner of War of the Japanese. He retired in 1966 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Allen Leeds Peck (ASN: 0-20327), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 2d Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 31 January 1951, near Yongin, Korea, the 2d Battalion had the mission of taking Hill 425, which was the dominating terrain feature in the regimental sector. Colonel Peck, having been with the forward attacking elements the previous day, had acquired first hand visual knowledge of the approaches to Hill 425. At 0500 hours Colonel Peck had his attacking elements cross the line of departure. This movement during darkness completely surprised the enemy but, notwithstanding this element of surprise, the firmly entrenched, determined enemy fought back viciously and with tenacity to hold the ground they occupied. A tremendous volume of automatic fire sprayed our forces and simultaneously a terrific barrage of artillery fire landed among the attacking units, temporarily stalling the attack. Colonel Peck took immediate steps to remedy the situation. He reorganized his attacking elements and had them continue the attack. With complete disregard for his personal safety he continuously exposed himself to enemy small arms and incessant mortar fire in order to coordinate the supporting fires of his own and an adjacent battalion, as well as to adjust and direct supporting artillery fire. As a result of Colonel Peck's courageous and exemplary leadership, the objective was secured and the enemy force routed with many casualties. The professional skill, courage, and coolness under fire, and inspirational gallantry displayed by Colonel Peck reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

PENCE, ARTHUR WILLIAM, JR.

Arthur Pence graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1972 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Arthur William Pence, Jr. (ASN: 0-28440), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company A, 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 1 August 1952 in the vicinity of Chorwon, North Korea. On that date Captain Pence was serving as commanding officer of a rifle company assigned the mission of securing and holding Hill 266, commonly known as "Old Baldy". As Captain Pence's company reached the point for attack it was suddenly subjected to an intense enemy artillery and mortar barrage, followed by a devastating hail of small arms fire, which forced the company to temporarily halt its attack. Realizing the seriousness of the situation and being fully aware of the risks involved, Captain Pence left his place of comparative safety and crossed the fire swept terrain, placing himself in a centralized position in order to be in a location more suitable for issuing orders to his unit. When the friendly unit became temporarily disorganized due to the intense hostile fire, Captain Pence again crossed the bare terrain, constantly exposing himself to the enemy observation in order to better reorganize the company. The actions of Captain Pence in moving from man to man encouraging them to hold on, supervising the evacuation of the numerous friendly casualties and personally participating in the fighting with any weapon available, enabled the company to resume the attack and secure the objective. The gallantry in action and superb leadership displayed by Captain Pence on this occasion reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

PEPLOE, GEORGE BATEMAN

George Peploe graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1925. He retired in 1956 as a U.S. Army Major General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) George Bateman Peploe (ASN: 0-16246), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of the 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action on 1 September 1950, near Mojon-Ni, Korea. On 1 September 1950, elements of the 38th Infantry Regiment were attacking the enemy in the vicinity of Mojon-Ni, Korea. When the attacking units were temporarily halted and pinned down by an intense amount of enemy mortar, machine gun, small arms, and sniper fire, Colonel Peploe advanced to the lead elements of the pinned down attack. With complete disregard for his personal safety, and continually being exposed to intense enemy fire, he personally spurred the troops on to resume the attack. Under his fearless personal example, cool leadership and direction, the attack was able to advance far beyond its original objective. Through his inspiring leadership, tactical ability, and unremitting devotion to duty, Colonel Peploe fully upheld the finest traditions of the military service.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) George Bateman Peploe (ASN: 0-16246), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 2 to 10 September 1950 in the vicinity of Changnyong, Korea. On 31 August 1950 the enemy launched a general offensive with the objective of breaking through out lines and severing the vital Pusan-Taegu main supply route. The enemy's main effort was directed at the other two regiments of the Division. Colonel Peploe's reserve battalion was committed to assist them, leaving him with only two battalions to defend the Division's right flank on a 12-mile front. He then withdrew his regiment to defensive positions better suited to defend the flank. Throughout this period Colonel Peploe was over in the front lines at threatened points, inspiring his troops by his fearless actions and his unconcern for personal safety. Under his brilliant leadership his outnumbered regiment held fast for four days against incessant and overwhelming enemy attacks. When the enemy drive had been halted he led his regiment in a series of limited objective attacks, which seized commanding ground from which the Division subsequently launched a successful offensive across the Naktong River. The gallantry and inspirational leadership displayed by Colonel Peploe reflect great credit upon himself and are in keeping with the fine traditions of the military service.

Third Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Second Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Third Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) George Bateman Peploe (ASN: 0-16246), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 21 and 22 September 1950. in the vicinity of Chagye, Korea. On 21 September 1950 he was advancing with a tank supported company of his unit, whose mission was to attack and secure a vital pass through which the regiment had to advance in order to reach its objective. The company received such intense enemy small arms, automatic weapons and anti-tank fire that the attacking troops began to waver. Colonel Peplow, with complete disregard for his own safety, dashed forward through the heavy enemy fire and skillfully directed a flanking movement on the enemy positions. His personal example of courage and fearlessness inspired his men to rush the enemy and overcome the hostile resistance, thus permitting the regiment to continue its advance to the objective of the day. On 22 September 1950 he was once more with the lead elements of his regiment directing the destruction of an enemy roadblock consisting of four anti-tank guns and a 76-mm. cannon. He organized a tank supported assault on the stubbornly defended enemy emplacement and his example of courage and determination were decisive factors in the successful accomplishment of his unit's mission. The gallantry and inspirational leadership displayed by Colonel Peplow on these two occasions reflect the greatest credit upon himself and the military service.

PERRY, WILLIAM OLIVER, JR.

William Oliver graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1965 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

Synopsis: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) William Oliver Perry, Jr., United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as S-3 of the 2d Battalion, 5th Regimental Combat Team, 24th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea, on 24 April 1951. On that date, as the 24th Infantry Division fell back south along the main supply route, it was ambushed by Chinese who had infiltrated from the mountains to the east and set up a roadblock, seven miles south of the parallel. Two Infantry battalion and one artillery battalion of the 5th Regimental Combat Team were cut off. Captain Perry drove up and down the column in his jeep, through small arms and machinegun fire, firing at the enemy with a .45 caliber pistol in each hand, seeking out the friendly company commanders to issue instructions. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Captain Perry, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

PICK, LEWIS ANDREW, JR.

Lewis Pick graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, Class of 1950. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Colonel

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Field Artillery) Lewis Andrew Pick, Jr. (ASN: 0-62571), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of the 39th Field Artillery Battalion, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 12 February 1951, near Chom Chon, Korea, Lieutenant Pick, an artillery forward observer on a patrol with Company K, 3d Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, was pinned down by intense small arms and automatic weapons fire directed at the patrol by a strong hostile force entrenched on a commanding ridge to his right flank. Although exposed to the heavy enemy fire, Lieutenant Pick moved forward to a position from which he directed extremely effective artillery fire on the enemy, neutralizing many of its emplacements and enabling friendly troops to move forward under cover of the barrage. When the barrage was lifted, Lieutenant Pick courageously joined in the attack against the enemy-held fortification, personally accounting for three enemy dead. Because of the intensity of the enemy fire, many members of the patrol were momentarily pinned down but, inspired by Lieutenant Pick's words of encouragement, they followed him in the assault and successfully routed the enemy from its position. Lieutenant Pick's outstanding courage and gallantry reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

POSTON, EDMUND DAVID [KIA (KOREA)]

Edmund Poston graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army Captain during the Korean War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to Captain (Infantry) Edmund David Poston (ASN: 0-27775), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of Company A, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 15 March 1951 in the vicinity of Yulsil-li, Korea. Company A's objective on that date was to seize Hill 719. As the lead platoon advanced to the lower slopes of the hill, the enemy holding the high ground brought it under intense fire. Captain Poston unhesitatingly left his position in the rear of the company and made a reconnaissance of the situation. Leading another one of his platoons in a flanking movement he successfully drove the enemy from their positions. After securing a ridge leading to the objective, Captain Poston moved with the lead platoon, encouraging the men to greater effort, and engaged the enemy in a fierce firefight which resulted in many casualties to the enemy. His fearlessness and courage under the heavy enemy fire were determining factors in routing the enemy and seizing the objective. The gallantry displayed by Captain Poston reflect the highest credit upon himself are in keeping with the fine traditions of the military service.

PRESCOTT, DANIEL CHAPMAN

Daniel Prescott graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1975 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Daniel Chapman Prescott (0-27837), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a Pilot with Headquarters Company, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 9 December 1950, when the 1st Marine Division was surrounded and isolated by a numerically superior enemy force in the vicinity of Kotori, Korea, Captain Prescott unhesitatingly volunteered to aid in the evacuation of the wounded. Piloting a liaison type aircraft, he flew two missions over mountainous terrain and landed on an extremely short airstrip which was constantly subjected to intense enemy fire. As a result of his exemplary bravery, two seriously wounded infantrymen were evacuated to safety where they received adequate medical attention. Captain Prescott's gallantry and aggressiveness reflects great credit upon himself and are in keeping with the esteemed traditions of the military service.

QUINN, EDWARD BARNEY

Edward Quinn graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He resigned in 1960 as a U.S. Army Captain.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Armor) Edward Barney Quinn (ASN: 0-62377), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company A, 72d Tank Battalion, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 7 to 14 September 1950 in the vicinity of Songjin-Ni, Korea. During this period Lieutenant Quinn, a platoon leader, led five tank-infantry patrols deep into enemy-held territory. On these patrols strong enemy resistance was frequently encountered and his unit was subjected to heavy mortar and small arms fire. On several occasions, while supporting rifle elements were attacking, he dismounted from his tank under heavy enemy small arms and mortar fire in order to coordinate the fires of his tanks with that of the infantry. Through the complete disregard for his personal safety in exposing himself to enemy fire when the situation required aggressive leadership, Lieutenant Quinn was largely responsible for the success of these patrols. His actions throughout this period were indicative of a high degree of devotion to duty and were an inspiration to all members of his platoon. The gallantry displayed on these occasions by Lieutenant Quinn reflects great credit upon himself and fully upholds the finest traditions of the military service.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Armor) Edward Barney Quinn (ASN: 0-62377), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Service Company, (then Company A), 72d Tank Battalion, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 31 August 1950 in the vicinity of Yongsan, Korea. On that date a friendly platoon was completely surrounded by a large enemy force. Lieutenant Quinn immediately volunteered to go to the aid of the trapped platoon with his tank and crew. Although subjected to intense enemy small arms, mortar, anti-tank, and artillery fire, he drove his tank directly through the enemy encirclement until he reached the embattled platoon. Delivering effective and devastating fire from his tank weapons, he escorted the surrounded platoon to a position where it could again establish a solid line. The initiative, courage, and gallantry displayed by Lieutenant Quinn reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

REHM, DONALD HOWARD

Donald Rehm graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1966 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) Donald Howard Rehm (ASN: 0-27807), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company (then Commanding Officer of Company E, 2d Battalion), 19th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, near Soun-ni- Korea, on 26 October 1951. His unit had the mission of defending a hill which was of vital importance to the security of the battalion. The enemy, with an estimated force of two companies, launched a savage attack against his unit's positions. Just before daybreak the determined enemy, after constantly hammering at the friendly troops, made a breakthrough. Due to a shortage of ammunition the forward elements of the company began a short withdrawal to more defensible positions. Captain Rehm, realizing the seriousness of the situation, unhesitatingly sprang from his bunker and with utter disregard for his own safety carried the needed ammunition and grenades. He made his way to the scene of the heaviest fighting. The men, inspired by the presence of their Commanding Officer, soon reorganized into an effective fighting force. He led them in a counterattack and soon forced the foe into a retreat of panicky confusion. Captain Rehm's gallant action, exemplary leadership and selfless performance of duty contributed immeasurably to the success of his unit's defense and reflect the highest credit upon himself and the United States Infantry.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

ROBINSON, ROBERT WEBB [KIA (KOREA)]

Robert Robinson graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army Second Lieutenant in the Korean War, only a few months after graduation.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to Second Lieutenant (Infantry) Robert Webb Robinson (ASN: 0-62609), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company B, 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against the enemy on 4 September 1950 in the vicinity of Yong-san, Korea. On this date Company B was attacking well defended enemy hill positions near the Naktong River. As the assaulting elements, led by Lieutenant Robinson, neared the objective, intense hostile automatic weapons and small arms fire forced them back. During the withdrawal, Lieutenant Robinson remained behind and repeatedly exposed himself to the enemy fire while assisting the wounded to safety. When the unit reorganized and launched another assault, he again faced the relentless fire of the enemy. Because many in his platoon were Koreans and unable to understand all instructions, it was necessary for him to place each man in position regardless of the danger to himself. In a desperate attempt to secure the objective he advanced forward into the face of hostile fire and killed the occupants of a machine gun emplacement. Now free to continue, friendly troops overran all opposition to complete the mission. The gallantry in action and devotion to duty displayed by Lieutenant Robinson reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

ROSEN, NORMAN ROBERT

Norman Rosen graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1947. He retired in 1972 as a U.S. Army Colonel in 1972.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Corps of Engineers) Norman Robert Rosen (ASN: 0-50600), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Company D, 10th Engineer Combat Battalion, 3d Infantry Division, in Korea. On 28 November 1950, near Hagaru-ri, Korea, during an enemy attack on his platoon's position, First Lieutenant Rosen repeatedly exposed himself to enemy fire to throw hand grenades and point out targets for his platoon. After a forced withdrawal to new positions, Lieutenant Rosen discovered that his radio operator had been wounded and remained in the evacuated position. Under a heavy concentration of enemy fire, First Lieutenant Rosen succeeded in reaching the wounded man and returning him to safety. His heroic actions and display of aggressive leadership were an inspiration to his men that stiffened their resistance to the enemy. The gallantry displayed by First Lieutenant Rosen reflects great credit upon himself and upon the military service.

Kojangni, North Korea, Korea, on 6 November 1950. First Lieutenant Ross distinguished himself when his motorized patrol was subjected to intense automatic weapons fire. Organizing his force for an attack, he repeatedly exposed himself to the deadly barrage in a vain attempt to drive the numerically superior enemy from their commanding emplacements. Ordering his men to displace, he remained with the rear guard elements to conduct a series of delaying actions and to ensure the evacuation of all the wounded. While in the performance of his mission, he was mortally wounded. First Lieutenant Ross' valorous leadership, indomitable spirit, and unrelenting devotion to duty and to his men enhance the high traditions of the United States Armed Forces.

ROUNTREE, BILLY JOE

Billy Rountree graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He retired with disability in 1954 as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry), [then Second Lieutenant] Billy Joe Rountree (ASN: 0-59327), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company G, 2d Battalion, 24th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea. An infantry company attacking to secure a key hill in the vicinity of Haman, Korea, on 13 August 1950, received withering fire from a hostile force firmly entrenched in commanding positions. When the inexperienced troops became demoralized under the continuing barrage, Lieutenant Rountree advanced to a most exposed position to reorganize the scattered elements of the company. Expertly directing the actions of his men, he neutralized the enemy's effectiveness, thereby facilitating the evacuation of the wounded. Lieutenant Rountree's notable courage, exemplary leadership and unrelenting devotion to duty are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Synopsis: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry), [then First Lieutenant] Kenneth Edward Ruddy, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as a Platoon Leader in Company D, 1st Battalion, 27th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea on 21 August 1950. Captain Ruddy was in command of a patrol near Singi, Korea. An enemy force, after indicating that it wanted to surrender, suddenly opened fire, and First Lieutenant Ruddy directed effective counterfire and led the patrol back to safety. Learning that a soldier from another unit was missing in the area, First Lieutenant Ruddy returned by jeep to the scene of the engagement in an unsuccessful effort to find the missing man. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Captain Ruddy, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

RUFF, CLARENCE GERALD

Clarence Ruff graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, Class of 1952. He retired in 1971 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel

Synopsis: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Clarence G. Ruff, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with the 10th Engineer Combat Battalion, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea, on 12 June 1953. While under heavy enemy fire, First Lieutenant Ruff rallied his platoon to take a key tactical position from the enemy and gallantly held the position, repelling repetitive attacks throughout the evening and into the next day. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Ruff, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

RUYFFELAERE, RAYMOND FRANCIS

Raymond Ruyffelaere graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of January 1943. He retired in 1973 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major (Infantry), [then Captain] Raymond Francis Ruyffelaere (ASN: 0-25814), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2d Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. During the night of 13 June and early morning hours of 14 June 1953, in the vicinity of Chat-kol, Korea, the right flank of Company F was attacked by a numerically superior enemy force. Despite the heavy defensive fire, the attacking force penetrated the main line of resistance and the Battalion reserve company was ordered into action. Aware that the company commander's knowledge of the area to be occupied had been acquired through map reconnaissance only, Major Ruyffelaere voluntarily guided the unit into position. Following this, he observed that supporting mortar elements were inactive and immediately rushed to their position. Disregarding the constant enemy artillery and mortar barrages, Major Ruyffelaere aggressively re-employed the mortar sections and directed their fire upon the advancing enemy. Returning to the main line of resistance, he was informed of a serious ammunition shortage among elements in combat on the right flank. Climbing from the trench, he courageously initiated and supervised a supply line which rapidly relayed the critically-needed ammunition from a left flank supply point to the hard-fighting defenders. Major Ruyffelaere valiantly remained atop the parapet throughout this operation despite the intense enemy supporting fire. His inspirational leadership and ability to analyze critical situations accurately and rapidly were instrumental in the ensuing defeat of the enemy assault. Major Ruyffelaere's outstanding gallantry and devotion to duty reflect great credit upon himself and the military service. RYAN, JOHN EDWARD John Ryan graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He resigned in 1954 as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Coast Artillery Corps) John Edward Ryan (ASN: 0-59365), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Battery B, 26th Antiaircraft Artillery (Automatic Weapons) Battalion (Self-Propelled), 24th Infantry Division, near Paegyangni, Korea, on 8 November 1951. A platoon of M-16 half-track weapons was dispatched to provide fire support for infantry elements attacking an enemy-held objective. Lieutenant Ryan, Battery Executive Officer, arrived at the forward patrol base to check administrative details and learned that enemy mortar fire had disabled two vehicles, wounding several men. He immediately advanced into the combat area and assumed command of the platoon. Previous attempts to rescue a seriously wounded man, trapped in one of the crippled vehicles, had been unsuccessful because of the extremely intense concentration of enemy fire blanketing the area. Lieutenant Ryan, with complete disregard for his own safety, commandeered a vehicle and personally recovered the wounded man. He was wounded in the act but resolutely returned twice more to retrieve the damaged half-tracks. He then reorganized the crew members on the two remaining half-tracks and skillfully placed them in position to support the infantrymen in their task force operation. Lieutenant Ryan's courageous action, bold initiative and outstanding performance of tasks far beyond the call of duty contributed immeasurably to the success of his unit's mission and reflect the highest credit on himself and the United States Artillery.

SAMSEY, PHILIP BRUCE

Philip Samsey graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1972 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Armor), [then Second Lieutenant] Philip Bruce Samsey (ASN: 0-62397), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Tank Company (Medium), 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 28 November 1950 near Majon-ni, Korea, Lieutenant Samsey with his tank platoon was attached to Company A for an attack on the village of Tochson-ni. Company A came under intense heavy enemy fire during the attack which temporarily held up their advance. Lieutenant Samsey, exposing himself from the turret of his tank, with complete disregard for his own personal safety, directed the deployment of his platoon to assist the assault of the rifle platoons on the objective. Lieutenant Samsey, in the command tank, repeatedly exposed himself from the turret, which made him an outstanding target, to effect the accurate fire of all weapons of his platoon upon the enemy positions. He himself frequently fired his tank mounted fifty caliber machine gun on targets of opportunity. The initiative, leadership, and heroic actions of Lieutenant Samsey materially aided in the successful accomplishment of the mission. This display of gallantry by Lieutenant Samsey reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Robert Cannon Sanders (ASN: 0-59272), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company B, 1st Battalion, 65th Infantry, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 27 April 1951, near Uijongbu, Korea, a furious bayonet charge opened a gap in the enemy troops which had surrounded Company B, 1st Battalion, on Hill 476. When Lieutenant Sanders was ordered to move his platoon through the breach in the enemy lines, he directed his platoon sergeant to lead the unit, while he remained behind to cover the withdrawal. After his troops had made their way out of the encirclement, Lieutenant Sanders, under vicious enemy fire, began to follow the route of withdrawal, when he discovered a seriously wounded soldier who could not walk. Unable to obtain a litter, Lieutenant Sanders lifted the man and carried him through the embattled area to where first aid could be administered. The gallantry and selfless concern for the safety of a fellow soldier displayed by Lieutenant Sanders reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

On 7 September 1950 when the forward observer of the 81-mm. platoon was wounded by enemy fire, Captain Sawyer, the mortar platoon leader, voluntarily assumed the duties of forward observer. Under extremely heavy enemy fire, he adjusted mortar fire to the front of the rifle company to which he was attacked. All that night and the next day he remained as forward observer and, under increasingly heavy hostile fire, continued to call for and adjust extremely accurate fire upon the attacking enemy troops. On 9 September 1950, when the rifle company launched an attack, his selection of enemy targets, and the resultant fire which he brought upon them, greatly assisted the company in accomplishing its mission. The gallant conduct of Captain Sawyer on this occasion was a commanding ground. When the preparatory artillery barrage was lifted, he voluntarily joined the infantry commander at the front of the company as it moved forward for the assault. Taking the place of a wounded platoon leader he repeatedly exposed himself to devastating small arms and automatic weapons fire to rally his men and direct their movement toward the blazing crest. Although painfully wounded by a bursting grenade, he closed on a machine gun emplacement and eliminated the crew with small arms fire and a hand grenade. After the enemy had been driven to flight, he remained to reorganize a perimeter defense before he allowed himself to be evacuated for medical aid. Lieutenant Shankle's exemplary courage, aggressive leadership and inspirational devotion to duty were in keeping with the historic traditions of the United States Army.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) James Henry Scholtz (ASN: 0-59349), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with an Infantry Company of the 5th Cavalry (Infantry) Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action against the enemy near Waegwan, Korea on 4 September 1950. While battling enemy North Koreans for critical high ground, with great risk to his own life, First Lieutenant Scholtz exposed himself to the deadly enemy mortar and anti-tank barrages to encourage his men and better direct their fire upon enemy concentrations. When one of his machinegunners was severely wounded, First Lieutenant Scholtz unhesitatingly manned the gun and courageously continued to fire upon the advancing fanatical horde. This intrepid leader, although manning a weapon himself, continued to direct the efforts of his platoon and to fire the machine gun and a rocket launcher, whichever seemed most effective at the time, until he himself was seriously wounded. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Scholtz, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

SHARP, JERE WORTH

Jere Sharp graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1985 as a U.S. Army Major General.

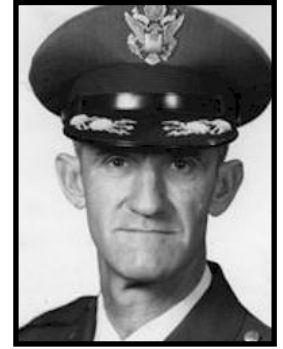

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Jere Worth Sharp (ASN: 0-62316), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company F, 2d Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 31 January 1951, near Kumgangjang, Korea, Company F had the mission of securing Hill 425 which was the regimental objective and the commanding terrain feature controlling the entire sector. The platoon, commanded by Lieutenant Sharp was receiving extremely heavy automatic, small arms, and artillery fire, making the approaches untenable. The determined, numerically superior enemy forces were firmly entrenched and had excellent fields of fire. Lieutenant Sharp, realizing the remainder of the company would be unable to advance against this fire, and seeing that friendly fire was not diminishing the fire of the enemy, ordered a bayonet assault against the enemy. With determination and courage, he led his men forward in this assault. Shortly thereafter he was wounded by shrapnel, but although exposed to enemy fire, he refused to be evacuated, and remained lying on the ground shouting words of encouragement to his men in their assault. This spirit of determination and aggressiveness inspired his men to continue the assault, resulting in destroying and routing the enemy. The extraordinary heroism, aggressiveness, and exemplary leadership displayed by Lieutenant Sharp reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

SHAWE, HAMILTON BRUCE, JR. [POW (KOREA)]

Hamilton Shawe graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1971 as a U.S. Air Force Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant Hamilton Bruce Shawe, Jr. (AFSN: 1739A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action against an enemy of the United States, while serving as a Pilot of a Reconnaissance Aircraft of the 8th Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron, 543d Tactical Support Group, FIFTH Air Force, in Korea, on 1 October 1950. First Lieutenant Shawe displayed an exceptional degree of flying skill, courage and competence. Alone in an unarmed reconnaissance aircraft, he flew 425 miles to his target, the port of Wonsan in Korea. Upon reaching his objective he made repeated photographic runs at a dangerously low altitude over the strongly defended beach and port area. In spite of his aircraft being repeatedly hit by enemy ground fire, Lieutenant Shawe continued making passes until his mission of nine runs was completed. Information gained from the excellent photographs taken by Lieutenant Shawe proved invaluable to the United Nations forces in their subsequent planning for the landing at Wonsan. Lieutenant Shawe's conspicuous gallantry and outstanding skill were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, the FAR EAST Air Forces and the United States Air Force.

SHERRARD, ROBERT GIBSON, JR.

Robert Sherrard graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1935. He retired in 1962 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Robert Gibson Sherrard, Jr. (ASN: 0-19922), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 3d Battalion, 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 16 September 1950 in the vicinity of Changnyong, Korea. Colonel Sherrard's battalion was attacking with the mission of securing commanding ground along the Naktong River Line. The enemy was well-entrenched and was subjecting the battalion observation post to intense mortar and self-propelled gun fire which forced our troops to take cover. In order to observe and coordinate the movements of his companies, Colonel Sherrard exposed himself to this heavy fire, and relayed orders to his company commanders which greatly facilitated the accomplishment of their missions. By his indifference to his personal safety, he obtained information which enabled the attacking companies to bring mortar and machine gun fire upon the enemy, inflicting upon them severe casualties and throwing the entire defense into confusion. His gallant behavior in the face of the enemy was a determining factor in the success of the attack and the seizure of the high ground which permitted the consolidation of the battalion objective. The high devotion to duty, tactical ability, and gallantry displayed by Colonel Sherrard on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and are in keeping with the highest ideals of the military service.

SHUGG, ROLAND PAGET

Roland Shugg graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1916. He retired in 1952 as a U.S. Army Brigadier General.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Brigadier General Roland Paget Shugg (ASN: 0-4476), United States Army, for while serving as Commanding Officer, Division Artillery, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. During the period 7 December 1950 to 24 December 1950, General Shugg, as Division Artillery Commander of the 3d Infantry Division, skillfully employed his artillery battalion in support of the covering force for the withdrawal of the 1st Marine Division and elements of the 7th Infantry Division from the Chosin Reservoir-Hagaru-Ri (Korea) areas, and subsequently in support of the covering force, against a numerically superior Chinese Communist force, for the withdrawal and evacuation of X Corps units from the Hamhung-Hungnam (Korea) beachhead. General Shugg exhibited his aggressive leadership by making frequent visits to his units, often exposing himself to heavy enemy fire, in order to coordinate most effectively the fire of his artillery units in support of the infantry. General Shugg's untiring efforts, gallantry, and leadership capacity contributed materially to the successful completion of these withdrawals, and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

SIMPSON, WILLIAM CRATON SCREVEN

William Simpson graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1976 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) William Craton Screven Simpson, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of Company I, 3d Battalion 17th Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea, on 9 March 1951. During the attack on Hill 1040, the company commanded by Captain Simpson met heavy mortar, machine gun, and small arms fire, and was pinned down unable to advance farther. Captain Simpson, disregarding his own personal safety, walked back and forth across the ridge encouraging and deploying his men, while the enemy raked the ground he walked on. This fine show of bravery and leadership rallied his men so that they exerted themselves into a final push which enabled them to capture their objective. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Captain Simpson, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

SKELDON, JAMES HOWARD

James Skeldon graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1937. He earned his FIRST Distinguished Service Cross in Korea on September 1 - 28, 1950. Two months later he earned a SECOND Distinguished Service Cross for his actions on November 29 and 30, 1950. He retired in 1970 as a U.S. Army Major General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) James Howard Skeldon (ASN: 0-20831), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 2d Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 22 September 1950 in the vicinity of Nakdong-Ni, Korea. On this date the enemy, who had infiltrated our front lines, were attempting to establish a roadblock and place forces astride the main supply route. With all of his combat troops committed to other missions he hastily organized his Headquarters personnel into a combat force and attacked the numerically superior and well-entrenched enemy. He personally led this force, spurring his troops on by his courageous example. When the enemy temporarily stopped the attack and the success of the mission seemed doubtful, he deliberately exposed himself to the intense enemy fire. Shouting encouragement to his men he advanced into the face of the intense small arms fire which swept the area. Hurling grenades and directing bursts of fire upon the enemy, he so inspired his troops that they rallied and in a final charge overran the enemy and drove them from their position. The gallantry and inspirational leadership demonstrated on this occasion by Colonel Skeldon reflect great credit upon himself and are in keeping with the highest ideals of the military service.

SLACK, CLARENCE VIRGIL, JR. [MIA (KOREA) KIA]

Clarence Slack graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He was Missing in Action and presumed killed while serving as a U.S. Air Force First Lieutenant in the Korean War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant Clarence Virgil Slack, Jr. (AFSN: 16946A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action while serving with the 36th Fighter-Bomber Squadron, 8th Fighter-Bomber Group, FIFTH Air Force, in action on 14 March 1951 while flying a combat mission in support of United Nations forces in Korea. Lieutenant Slack was leading an element of a four ship flight of F-80 type aircraft on an armed reconnaissance of the railroad between Pyongyang and Sinuiju, Korea. His element was flying top cover for the lead element which was reconnoitering the railroad at low altitude. In the vicinity of the Sunan railroad yards, intense anti-aircraft fire was encountered and was concentrated upon the Flight Leader and his wing man. Lieutenant Slack quickly sighted the gun emplacements and with complete disregard for his own safety, began a dueling attack with the enemy gun positions. By drawing the concentrated fire upon himself, he enabled the lead element to evade the devastating ground fire. In the course of his attack, Lieutenant Slack's aircraft was hit and was seen to crash in the immediate area. Lieutenant Slack's alertness, heroic action, and determination to destroy the enemy were in keeping with the highest traditions of the service, and reflected great credit upon himself, the FAR EAST Air Forces, and the United States Air Force.

SLOANE, CHARLES CLIFFORD, JR.

Charles Sloane graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1926. He retired in 1956 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Charles Clifford Sloane, Jr. (ASN: 0-16456), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 5 September 1950 to 10 September 1950 in the vicinity of Yongsan, Korea. At this time overwhelming enemy forces had penetrated our defenses along the Naktong River and were forcing our troops to withdraw. Colonel Sloan immediately reorganized his scattered forces and personally led them in a determined counterattack. His conduct under fire was a source of tremendous inspiration to all of his men and was a major factor in their ultimate success in stopping the enemy in the very streets of Yongsan. Fighting shoulder to shoulder with another unit, they continued to push back the enemy until they regained their former positions. Throughout this period Colonel Sloane remained with the forward elements of his regiment, and constantly exposed himself to intense enemy fire in order to insure the peak of efficiency of his men. The intrepidity and high devotion of leadership displayed on this occasion by Colonel Sloane reflect the highest credit upon himself are in keeping with the fine traditions of the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Charles Clifford Sloane, Jr. (ASN: 0-16456), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 30 November 1950 in the vicinity of Kunu-ri, Korea. The enemy had succeeded in establishing a series of roadblocks approximately five miles in depth astride our main supply route through which the entire Division had to fight its way. The 9th Infantry Regiment was committed in an effort to neutralize the enemy's positions and allow elements of the Division to withdraw to safety. Heavy casualties inflicted by the numerically superior enemy had so depleted the regiment that it was necessary to form the battalions into provisional companies. The leading assault elements were subjected to intense hostile automatic weapons and small arms fire which halted their advance. Colonel Sloane immediately deployed the rear elements and then established his observation post in a position exposed to the deadly enemy fire. Although his position was subjected to intense enemy fire, he remained exposed in order to better facilitate the direction of the operation. After bitter fighting, the leading elements were able to advance a short distance and Colonel Sloane pushed forward establishing his observation post in a ditch near where the fighting was fiercest. While his regiment was engaging the enemy, elements of the Division were moving through the blocked area in motorized columns. When it became apparent that the leading column had been stopped by enemy fire, and was impeding the progress of other units, Colonel Sloane proceeded on foot to the head of the columns. Through his forward movement he directed the removal of obstacles such as destroyed vehicles and equipment which were clogging the road. The presence of Colonel Sloane in forward positions during this bitter engagement and his obvious unconcern for his personal safety were a source of great inspiration to his troops and were greatly instrumental to the successful penetration of the roadblock, and the withdrawal of the Division elements to safety. The gallant and aggressive leadership displayed on this occasion by Colonel Sloane reflect the highest credit upon himself are in keeping with the fine traditions of the military service.

Third Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Second Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Third Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Charles Clifford Sloane, Jr. (ASN: 0-16456), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 25 and 26 September 1950 in the vicinity of Samga, Korea. On those dates, the 9th Infantry Regiment was assigned the mission of seizing the town of Samga, a vital road junction. Shortly after friendly forces moved into the attack, they were halted by heavy enemy fire from commanding terrain. At that time, Colonel Sloane moved forward in a jeep until it came under a hail of hostile fire. Abandoning the vehicle, he continued on foot, running the gauntlet of deadly hostile fire, to the commanding tank of the lead elements. Shouting words of encouragement, he urged the tanks and surrounding infantry units forward into the attack, and directed accurate and devastating tank fire on enemy targets. Despite the intense hostile mortar, automatic-weapons, and small-arms fire, he was constantly present with the lead tank, directing the activities of his regiment. Continually inspiring his troops by repeated examples of bravery and determined leadership, Colonel Sloane was directly responsible for the successful penetration of the enemy defenses. The aggressiveness and dauntless courage displayed by Colonel Sloane are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

SMITH, CHARLES BRADFORD

Charles Smith graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1939. He retired in 1965 as a U.S. Army Brigadier General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Charles Bradford Smith (ASN: 0-22113), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 1st Battalion, 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action at Haeju, Korea, on 17 October 1950. His battalion had encircled the city, cutting off the escape route of hundreds of the enemy, who dispersed throughout the city as packets of resistance and individual snipers. Determined to prevent these troops from organizing effective delaying action he aggressively led his battalion's assault elements into the city. With complete disregard for his own safety, he continually exposed himself to intense small arms fire, directing his troops in eliminating the enemy force. Colonel Smith's gallant actions were an inspiration to his command and reflect the greatest credit on himself and the United States Infantry.

SMITH, CHARLES RUFUS, JR.

Charles Smith graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1974 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Charles Rufus Smith, Jr. (ASN: 0-62891), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company A, 1st Battalion, 35th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. An infantry column proceeding towards Chinju, Korea, on 22 September 1950, encountered a strong hostile force which immobilized the point of the advance guard and inflicted numerous casualties on other elements of the company. Due to the nature of the terrain it was necessary to place the mortars in position along a road under direct enemy observation and fire. Moving to an exposed position, Lieutenant Smith directed effective mortar fire on the hostile force enabling one platoon to withdraw. Then, directing his crew to change ammunition, he provided a while phosphorous screen which permitted the casualties to be evacuated and another platoon to displace. As his weapons platoon withdrew he located a load of ammunition which had been abandoned. Directing a tank to the site, he coupled the trailer to the tank under a hail of small arms fire and supervised removal of the ammunition to a less-exposed area. Lieutenant Smith's conspicuous courage,

SMITH, FOSTER LEE

Foster Smith graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1944. In the Korean War he was credited with shooting down 4.5 enemy MiG aircraft. He retired in 1975 as a U.S. Army Major General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major Foster Lee Smith (AFSN: 0-15882A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action against an armed enemy of the United Nations as Pilot of an F-86 Sabrejet Fighter-Bomber of the 334th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, 4th Fighter-Interceptor Group, FIFTH Air Force, on 24 June 1953. On that date, Major Smith led an escort of F-86's on a photo reconnaissance escort mission deep into enemy territory along the Yalu River. As the force approached the third target through a heavy flak barrage, six MiG's attacked from above. Major Smith initiated a vicious counter attack on the lead MiG which was firing on an unarmed RF-80. Although under intense fire from the MiG's behind him, Major Smith pressed the violent attack causing the MiG to break off. Further accurate bursts of fire caused the enemy aircraft to dive earthward flaming heavily. Major Smith then attacked another MiG in the enemy formation, and in the deadly fight which ensued, closed to 200 feet range and sent accurate bursts of fire into the MiG, which crashed and exploded. The courage and intrepidity demonstrated by Major Smith on this mission resulted in the destruction of two enemy MiG-15s and was instrumental in the successful completion of a mission vital to the war effort. Through his outstanding airmanship, courage and exemplary devotion to duty, Major Smith reflected the highest credit upon himself and the military service. Great credit upon himself, the FAR EAST Air Forces, and the United States Air Force.

SMITH, STANTON THOMAS, JR.

Stanton Smith graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1940. He retired in 1968 as a U.S. Air Force Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel Stanton Thomas Smith, Jr. (AFSN: 0-23266), United States Air Force, for conspicuous gallantry in action while serving as Pilot of an F-80 Shooting Star Fighter-Bomber, and as Commanding Officer of the 49th Fighter-Bomber Group, FIFTH Air Force, in action in Korea, on 25 July 1950. Colonel Smith volunteered to lead a flight of F-80 type aircraft of the 49th Fighter-Bomber Group on a hazardous night intruder mission from an airbase in Japan against an enemy strong point in Korea. With only standard fighter aircraft instruments Colonel Smith led his flight through below marginal weather direct to the target area at Taejon, Korea, where he aggressively attacked the surprised enemy's supply center and troop concentrations. Determined to exploit this advantage to the fullest, Colonel Smith pressed repeated attacks against the enemy despite increasingly accurate automatic weapons fire, withdrawing only when his ammunition was totally expended. Again demonstrating superior airmanship, this officer led his flight through mountainous terrain direct to its home base of operations. This highly successful mission, the first night combat mission by jet type aircraft in the history of the Air Force, was accomplished at great risk and disregard for personal safety. The outstanding courage, determination and devotion to duty displayed by Colonel Smith on this occasion reflect the highest credit upon himself and the United States Air Force.

SILVER STAR (KOREAN WAR)

SMITH, WILLIAM YOUNG

William Smith graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1948. He flew combat missions in the Korean War earning a Silver Star and Distinguished Flying Cross, and returned to Combat in Vietnam. He retired in 1983 as a U.S. Air Force 4-Star General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain William Young Smith (AFSN: 17775A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action against an enemy of the United Nations as Pilot of an F-84 Thunderjet Fighter Bomber and as Element Leader of a flight of four (4) F-84 type aircraft of 49th Fighter-Bomber Group, FIFTH Air Force, in action on an interdiction mission at Chongju, Korea, on 2 February 1952. As Captain Smith led his element on a dive bomb attack through intense anti-aircraft fire on an important rail line, a large anti-aircraft shell ripped through the fuselage of his aircraft, severing his right foot at the ankle. Despite shock and loss of blood, Captain Smith successfully completed his attack and made a wheels-up, deadstick landing behind enemy lines. Although intense pain from his injury made all movements extremely difficult, he crawled thirty yards to a boulder and evaded enemy troops for approximately one hour until he was rescued and returned to enemy territory. Captain Smith's outstanding airmanship and coolness during this hazardous incident reflected great credit upon himself, the FAR EAST Air Forces, and the United States Air Force.

SMITHERS, SAMUEL WAYNE, JR.

Samuel Smithers graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1977 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry), [then Second Lieutenant] Samuel Wayne Smithers, Jr. (ASN: 0-62579), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company A, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 28 November 1950, near Majon-ni, Korea, Lieutenant Smithers prepared and led his platoon against the enemy which were well dug-in on a ridge. Although under constant intense enemy rifle and machine gun fire, he repeatedly exposed himself while checking and encouraging his men before the assault, and when the time came, with no regard for his personal safety, he led his platoon in a bayonet charge. By his fearless leadership the enemy was routed and the objective seized. The heroism under fire displayed by Lieutenant Smithers exemplifies the highest qualities of leadership and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

SNEE, JAMES WILLIAM

James Snee graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1934. He retired in 1964 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Armor) James William Snee (ASN: 0-19516), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters, 24th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy during the Waegwan-Taejon Offensive, 18 to 29 September 1950. As Acting Chief of Staff, G-3, Lieutenant Colonel Snee staffed and coordinated the Division Commander's attack plans against a tenacious enemy. Not content with merely writing operations instructions he personally visited the scene of action whenever difficulties appeared. The assault across the Nakton River was accomplished against great odds and bitter enemy opposition. Being present at the scene of fighting, he was able to advise the Division Commander of alternate plans of action which were adopted and successfully executed. Once beyond this obstacle, he visited the spearhead units on many occasions traveling over mine-infested roads; whenever a delay occurred he promptly ascertained the cause and often was instrumental in overcoming such obstructions. On many occasions he flew behind the enemy lines to determine what their next course of action would be and often succeeded in destroying enemy positions with supporting arms prior to the arrival of our spearhead ground units. In all instances he acted fearlessly and with utter disregard for his own life. Such gallantry reflects great credit upon Lieutenant Colonel Snee and the military service.

*SPRAKER, HARRY WILLIAM, JR. [KIA (KOREA)]

Harry Spraker was a non-graduating graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, Class of 1949. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant in the Korean War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Harry William Spraker, Jr. (ASN: 0-61580), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company A, 1st Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 4 February 1951, near Chomchog, Korea, Company A was advancing against a strongly defended, well camouflaged enemy position when one of the platoons was suddenly subjected to a barrage of artillery fire, which inflicted numerous casualties. Lieutenant Spraker was mortally wounded during the bombardment, but he refused medical aid, dragged himself to a position where he could direct the reorganization of his dazed and casualty-ridden unit. He also helped in administering hasty first aid to his men. His actions raised the morale of the men in his platoon and enabled them to repulse an enemy counter attack. Lieutenant Spraker's extreme gallantry, courage, and devotion to duty reflect great credit upon himself and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

ST. CLAIR, HOWARD BERTOLET

Howard St. Clair graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1939. He retired with disability in 1973 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Howard Bertolet St. Clair (ASN: 0-22017), United States Army, for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action while serving with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, First Battalion, 65th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division. On 21 November 1950, in the vicinity of Halmjong, Korea, Company B was probing the enemy when attacked by two to three hundred enemy troops. During the attack many difficulties accrued, and Lieutenant Colonel St. Clair personally proceeded to the isolated company in order to determine the extent of the difficulties. With utter disregard for his own safety, he placed himself in a forward position under intense small arms fire and observed the surrounding conditions. Then he quickly reorganized the company which enabled another attack by the enemy to be repulsed. Lieutenant Colonel St. Clair's outstanding devotion to duty, leadership, and courage were inspiring to his command. His gallantry under fire exemplifies the highest traditions of the military service.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Howard Bertolet St. Clair (ASN: 0-22017), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 65th Infantry, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 25 April 1951, the first of a 3-day enemy counteroffensive, the 1st Battalion was attacked from the rear by a large hostile force, near Uijongbu, Korea, which had infiltrated the reserve company's position under cover of a dense fog and then attempted to crash through the battalion perimeter. Personally organizing the support company, Colonel St. Clair crossed bullet-swept terrain many times to do so and then, aware that the continuing enemy pressure made a withdrawal expedient, he directed effective covering fire, under the protection of which the battalion fell back to a previously designated blocking position. In this location, the unit was again struck by the pursuing enemy forces and in order to direct a successful defense, Colonel St. Clair repeatedly moved about on an exposed ridge, kept under fire by 5 hostile machine guns, to observe the action and control the counterfire. After fighting a fierce engagement, the battalion, skillfully led by Colonel St. Clair, once more necessarily withdrew to a new line of defense. Here again sustaining a hostile attack of regimental strength, the unit held off and threw back the assault with staggering losses as Colonel St. Clair moved fearlessly about the embattled perimeter urging his battle weary troops to stand firm. The personal gallantry and brilliant application of fire and maneuver reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

SILVER STAR (KOREAN WAR)

STEELE, HOWARD MERRITT, JR.

Howard Steele graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1951. He retired in 1981 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Second Lieutenant (Infantry) Howard Merritt Steele, Jr., United States Army, for gallantry in connection with military operations against an opposing armed force while serving with Company C, 17th Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division, in action near Surang-ni, Korea. On 6 October 1952, while Lieutenant Steele was directing his platoon in defending an outpost position, the enemy directed an intense artillery and mortar barrage on the friendly outpost and launched a fanatical attack, which forced the platoon to withdraw. Directing his men to set up a skirmish line, approximately seventy-five yards to the rear, Lieutenant Steele remained in the Communications Trench, alternately firing machine guns at either end of the trench and maintaining a continuous fire upon the enemy. Upon effectively holding the enemy off until his men had established defensive positions, Lieutenant Steele returned to the skirmish line, bringing two friendly casualties with him. The courageous leadership and staunch determination of Lieutenant Steele greatly inspired his men and contributed materially to successfully repelling the numerically superior enemy force. The gallantry displayed by Lieutenant Steele reflects great credit on himself and is in keeping with the highest traditions of military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

STEINBERG, WILLIAM ANDREW

William Steinberg graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1978 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) William Andrew Steinberg (ASN: 0-62641), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters, 1st Battalion, (then Company A), 9th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 14 September 1950 in the vicinity of Yongsan, Korea. Elements of Company A, with supporting anti-aircraft firing vehicles, was attempting to clear out a bypassed enemy pocket. The patrol cautiously searched the area where the enemy was supposed to be but could make no contact with him. While the patrol was advancing to a village nearby, it was ambushed by a well-concealed and well-armed enemy. The initial volley of fire from the enemy confused the patrol and caused heavy casualties within it. Lieutenant Steinberg immediately reorganized the platoon, designated targets, and ordered counter-fire upon the enemy positions. As his platoon was predominately South Korean soldiers, it was necessary for him to go from man to man, giving instructions by the use of hand signals. When the platoon was forced to withdraw, he again instructed each man as to the route of withdrawal. Noticing that a wounded man had been left behind, Lieutenant Steinberg moved without hesitation into the direct line of enemy fire and carried the wounded man to safety. Only after the platoon had reached safety did Lieutenant Steinberg reveal that he had received a serious wound. The gallant conduct and inspiring leadership displayed by Lieutenant Steinberg reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

STEPHENS, RICHARD WARBURTON

Richard Stephens graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1924. He retired in 1958 as a U.S. Army Major General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Richard Warburton Stephens (ASN: 0-15569), United States Army, for gallantry in action against the enemy as Commanding Officer of the 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action near Waegwan, Korea, on 18 and 19 September 1950. When instructions were received for his regiment to cross the Naktong River and break through the Pusan perimeter, Colonel Stephens personally led the reconnaissance party to the vicinity of the proposed river crossing site. Continuously exposed to concentrated enemy fire and observation, he voluntarily went forward alone to a vantage point from which he could better observe the proposed river crossing area. From his visual observation the attack was planned and launched during the early morning hours. Again with complete disregard for his own safety he established his command post at the river crossing. Although under heavy enemy artillery, machine gun and small arms fire, he moved among his men giving last minute instructions and encouragement where necessary. His courage and superior leadership influenced materially the success of the river crossing by his command. His gallant actions and unhesitant devotion to duty reflect the greatest credit upon himself and the United States Infantry.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Richard Warburton Stephens (ASN: 0-15569), United States Army, for extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy as Commanding Officer of the 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action in the vicinity of Kyongju, Korea, during the period 28 August 1950 to 7 September 1950. When Colonel Stephens was assigned the mission of halting the North Korean Army's drive down Korea's east coast, which threatened Pusan, the United Nations' last remaining seaport in Korea, he immediately made a personal reconnaissance of the front line areas, braving enemy mortar and sniper fire, to confer with the Republic of Korea front line Commanders. After making an estimate of the situation, Colonel Stephens made a decision to commit battalion sized combat teams to strengthen the weak United Nations line and to contain any enemy breakthrough which might develop by aggressive counter-attacks. Throughout this period, Colonel Stephens, exhibiting unsurpassed professional knowledge and ability, made accurate, rapid estimates of each situation confronted, and moved his troops rapidly from area to area, wherever the enemy pressure was the greatest. By his great knowledge of the enemy's tactics and his maneuvering of troops, he succeeded in blunting and then hurling back the vastly numerically superior enemy's advance, through a series of successful aggressive counter-attacks. A battalion sized combat team engaged the enemy force and hurled them back in a disorganized retreat at Angang-ni, Pohang-dong, and Kyongju. Throughout the period he went long hours without sleep or food, moving from area to area, always where the fighting was the most fierce. On one occasion, when a strong enemy force struck at the United Nations lines, he moved forward and with complete disregard for personal safety, moved up and down the front line, completely exposed to the enemy fire, directing his troops to continue to place an extremely heavy volume of fire on the attacking enemy. His extreme calmness under enemy fire served as an outstanding example to the men of his command and inspired them to the highest possible degree of determination and efficiency. His superb leadership, during this critical period, was directly responsible for halting the enemy's advance and establishing a firm United Nations' Defense line in the sector. Colonel Stephens' heroic action, above and beyond the call of duty, reflects great credit on himself and is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Harry Sternburg graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1948. He resigned in 1954 as a U.S. Army Captain.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Field Artillery) Harry John Sternburg (ASN: 0-57209), United States Army, for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action while serving with Heavy Mortar Company, 65th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division. On 19 February 1951, near Kodong-ni, Korea, Lieutenant Sternburg was forward observer in support of a company which was attacking Hill 88. The leading platoon was pinned down by a murderous hail of fire from a pillbox. Being unable to direct mortar fire on the pillbox because of the proximity of friendly troops, Lieutenant Sternburg, with complete disregard for his own personal safety and while under intense small arms, mortar, and artillery fire, crawled to a point within thirty yards of the pillbox and threw hand grenades into the enemy positions. Having failed to knock out the pillbox, Lieutenant Sternburg crawled to the rear, re-supplied himself with grenades, and again returned to hurl them into the pillbox until it had been completely neutralized. The inspiring actions of Lieutenant Sternburg resulted in the success of the assault on the hill, and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

STEWART, GEORGE CRAIG

George Stewart graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1923. He retired in 1954 as a U.S. Army Major General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Brigadier General George Craig Stewart (ASN: 0-15349), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Assistant Division Commander, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 16 March 1951 at Pungam-ni, Korea. On that date General Stewart accompanied the tank-supported lead elements of two infantry battalions in their advance against stubborn resistance to the town of Pungam-ni, their objective for the day. Mounted on a tank of the tank-infantry team and breaking out from a mountain pass after sweeping the enemy from the surrounding hills, General Stewart daringly and with utter disregard for his safety led the advance guard through the heavily mined area and was one of the first to reach the objective. Witnessing this display of audacious leadership on the part of their Assistant Division Commander, the two battalions threw all caution aside and aggressively forged ahead to their objective. General Stewart thereupon once more led the troops in a drive through the town to establish positions to the northwest. With darkness approaching and intense hostile small arms as well as mortar fire falling in the objective area, he personally directed the movement of the tanks in a search of the area by tank fire which resulted in promptly silencing the opposition. Fully exposed to the enemy fire, yet calmly moving about in order best to observe all activity, General Stewart was a decisive factor in the rapid and effective organization of a perimeter defense for the ensuing night. The inspiring example of bold and undaunted leadership and the gallantry in action demonstrated by General Stewart on this occasion reflect utmost credit upon himself and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the Armed Forces of the United States.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Brigadier General George Craig Stewart (ASN: 0-15349), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Assistant Division Commander, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 17 May to 27 May 1951, in the vicinity of Hongchon and Hyon-ni, Korea. In the early morning hours of 17 May near hill 1051, north of Yongnae-ri, Korea, the enemy attacked in overwhelming numbers, breaking through our lines and forming a dangerous gap in the main line of resistance. As the Commanding General's representative in the area, General Stewart immediately directed the Commanding Officer of Task Force Zebra to commit his reserve Battalion and seal off the penetration. Counterattacking at his direction, the enemy was hurled back with terrific losses, thus restoring the situation. During the entire enemy offensive and the 2d Division's counter offensive, General Stewart remained constantly with the front line elements. On 26 and 27 May 1951, General Stewart fearlessly exposed himself to the intense enemy fire in order to encourage the infantry attacking Hyon-ni, Korea. Riding the lead tank until the tank was stopped by intense fire, he proceeded to move forward among the infantry soldiers. His voluntary presence with the attacking units was a source of great inspiration to the officers and men, and his calm efficiency under fire resulted in aggressive action by the infantry thus driving the enemy out of their positions. The gallantry displayed by General Stewart reflects great credit upon himself and upholds the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Richard Giles Stilwell (ASN: 0-21085), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On the night of 9 December 1952, Colonel Stilwell, Commanding Officer of the 15th Infantry

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

Regiment, was informed that a patrol of Company C had suffered numerous casualties upon encountering an enemy ambush in the vicinity of Mundae, Korea. Immediately leaving his position of comparative safety, he passed through treacherous unmarked mine fields to meet members of the ambushed patrol as they were returning to the command post with their wounded. There, under hostile mortar and artillery fire, he spoke to the haggard men and obtained information concerning the enemy aggression. With the needed information, he hurried back to the company area and dispatched a second patrol to recover those killed in action and their equipment. With complete disregard for his personal safety, Colonel Stilwell accompanied the friendly unit through the intense hostile fire to the outpost, remaining there until radio and wire communications were assured. Returning alone through the hazardous mined area, he reorganized the demoralized company into a smooth functioning organization. When the patrol returned, he again defied the hostile fire as he crossed the treacherous terrain to greet and instruct the men. Colonel Stilwell's outstanding gallantry and inspiring leadership was instrumental in the recovery of the patrol's mortally wounded and much of its lost equipment and reflects the highest credit upon himself and the military service.

STORCK, LOUIS JOHN [KIA (KOREA)]

Louis Storck graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1951. He was killed in action while serving as a First Lieutenant in the Korean War. His father by the same name graduated from the Academy in 1923 and was killed in action during World War II, earning a posthumous Silver Star.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Corps of Engineers) Louis John Storck (ASN: 0-63912), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company B, 2d Engineer Combat Battalion, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 6 October 1952 in the vicinity of Pangsok-tong, Korea. On that date Lieutenant Storck and three of his men were engaged in probing for mines around the outposts in front of Hill 281, while under heavy enemy mortar and artillery fire. At dusk the enemy launched their initial attack in an effort to cut off the outpost from the Main Line of Resistance. Lieutenant Storck, with complete disregard for personal safety, and acting far above and beyond the requirements of his mission, remained on the outpost occupied by French troops to attempt a defense of it from an enemy attack to the rear. Though outnumbered by overwhelming odds, he and one of his men continued to keep up fire against the enemy, finally engaging them in fierce hand to hand fighting before the initial assault was repulsed. During the night the position was overrun by the enemy, cutting them off from the main line of resistance. With the four men remaining on the outpost, Lieutenant Storck led an attempt to fight back through the enemy to friendly lines and although both he and his comrades were wounded, they continued until meeting the enemy who were retreating from Hill 281. In the encounter that ensued, Lieutenant Storck was mortally wounded. Lieutenant Storck's outstanding act of gallantry and consummate devotion to duty and comrades reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

STREIFF, RICHARD WENDELL

Richard Streiff graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1976 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Armor) Richard Wendell Streiff (ASN: 0-28060), United States Army, for gallantry in action against the enemy while serving with Company B, 70th Tank Battalion (Heavy), attached to the 1st Cavalry Division, on 3 to 6 September 1950, near Tabudong, Korea. When the enemy, in its all out drive on the vital city of Taegu, surrounded and isolated his platoon behind enemy lines, Lieutenant Streiff displayed extreme devotion to duty and inspirational leadership in effecting its return to safety. Though his first attempt was thwarted he efficiently re-organized his platoon and skillfully coordinating air and artillery support, once again began to break through the road blocks and heavy fortified enemy positions. Fearlessly disregarding his own safety Lieutenant Streiff rode with his tank hatch open to more effectively observe and deliver fire on the enemy strong points. In this position and while constantly exposed to point blank heavy weapons and small arms fire he so efficiently directed the combat operations of his platoon that they destroyed eight anti-tank guns, five machine guns, and forty enemy troops and were successful in returning to their own lines with a minimum of casualties. Lieutenant Streiff's skillful leadership, courageous action and ability to think fast under enemy fire was responsible for the saving of many lives, critically needed ordnance material and provided an inspirational example to our forces. His gallant action reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Captain (Armor), [then First Lieutenant] Richard Wendell Streiff (ASN: 0-28060), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Company B, 70th Tank Battalion (Heavy), attached to the 1st Cavalry Division, in action against the enemy in Korea, in November 1950. While Captain Streiff was directing his tank through an obstacle roadblock, a friendly infantryman who was riding the tank was inadvertently trapped between the turret and the roof of a building. Realizing that to move forward would undoubtedly result in the death of the soldiers, he quickly halted the tank and assisted in freeing the infantryman from his precarious position. Displaying exemplary leadership and aggressiveness, Captain Streiff refused to take the comparative safety of "buttoning up" in his tank, but rode with his head and shoulders exposed to the hostile fire in order to more efficiently direct his tank. After successfully knocking out three hostile roadblocks and approaching the fourth, he encountered an extremely heavy volley of small arms and grenade fire. A "Molotov Cocktail" hurled by the hostile troops hit his tank, spreading fire over the turret. With complete disregard for personal safety, he climbed out of his tank commander's hatch to extinguish the blaze. While in this position he noticed several wounded men on the ground. After assisting in loading them safely upon the tank, Captain Streiff effectively directed fire on targets of opportunity and coordinated the maneuvering his tank

STRONG, GORDON MALIN [KIA (KOREA)]

Gordon Strong graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1947. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant during the Korean War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Gordon Malin Strong (ASN: 0-50835), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company E, 2d Battalion, 5th Infantry, 25th Infantry Division, on 7 August 1950 near Chindong-ni, Korea. When his platoon was overrun by a numerically superior hostile force, Lieutenant Strong quickly gathered a depleted squad and moved to the flank of the hard pressed unit. Despite intense small arms, automatic weapons fire and hand grenades, he led a direct assault into the enemy forces, thereby creating a diversion which permitted his platoon time to reorganize and defend its position. In the bold, determined attack, Lieutenant Strong was mortally wounded. Lieutenant Strong's gallant leadership and tactical ingenuity are in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Army.

TEETERS, BERNARD GEORGE

Bernard Teeters graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1939. He retired in 1967 as a U.S. Army Colonel

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Bernard George Teeters (ASN: 0-22081), United States Army, for gallantry in action Commanding Officer of the 1st Battalion, 35th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. When on 31 August 1950, the battalion near Haman, Korea, was attacked by numerically superior hostile forces supported by tanks, Lieutenant Colonel Teeters calmly directed defensive operations and moved about the positions, heedless of the deadly concentrations of enemy artillery fire. His presence in the forward positions of the battalion sector so inspired his men that they successfully repelled the attack and inflicted such severe casualties that the enemy was forced to withdraw. Lieutenant Colonel Teeters' courageous leadership, calm determination and notable professional skill reflect great credit upon himself and uphold the highest traditions of the United States Army.

THOMPSON, ROBERT INMAN

Robert Thompson graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He resigned in 1955 as a U.S. Army Captain

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Robert Inman Thompson (ASN: 0-27750), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of Company F, 2d Battalion, 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action near Angang-ni, Korea, on 5 September 1950. During a withdrawal the 2d Battalion was attacked by a large enemy force which had established a strong road block along the route of withdrawal. The battalion subjected to intense artillery mortar and automatic weapons fire was terribly disorganized. Ordered to attack and destroy the enemy, Lieutenant Thompson rallied his company and led the assault. Immediately subjected to the full fury of the enemy's automatic and small arms fire the attack was slowed. Totally disregarding his own safety, he exposed himself to the withering fire encouraging his own company to press the attack. Leading his troops, he engaged the enemy in close range fire, inflicting numerous casualties and the men, inspired by his fearless example overran the position. Lieutenant Thompson's gallant actions and devotion to duty resulted in the destruction of the enemy force and reflect the greatest credit on himself and the United States Infantry.

THROCKMORTON, JOHN LATHROP

John Throckmorton graduated from the Culver Military Academy in 1931 and from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1935. He retired with disability in 1973 as a U.S. Army 4-Star General. His son, Throckmorton (USMA 1960) earned a Silver Star in the Vietnam War.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) John Lathrop Throckmorton (ASN: 0-19732), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 2d Battalion, 5th Regimental Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. On 9 August 1950, when the 2d Battalion was engaged in a night attack near Pongam-ni, Korea, infiltrating enemy forces isolated several units and threatened the advance of the battalion. Lieutenant Colonel Throckmorton, the Battalion Commander, went forward under concerted hostile fire, reorganized the isolated units and established a firm defensive line. When increased enemy activity made the position untenable, Lieutenant Colonel Throckmorton established and directed a series of rear guard actions which enabled the battalion to withdraw in an orderly manner with a minimum of casualties. Lieutenant Colonel Throckmorton's conspicuous courage, outstanding leadership and tactical skill reflect great credit upon himself and uphold the highest traditions of the United States Army.

TOOMEY, JOSEPH DANIEL [POW (KOREA) MIA-KK]

Joseph Toomey graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He was captured during the Korean War and interned as a Prisoner of War. He was not among those returned at the wars end, and is listed as Missing in Action. His remains have never been recovered.

Synopsis: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Joseph Daniel Toomey (ASN: 0-59248), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as a Platoon Leader with Company I, 3d Battalion, 5th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action against the enemy near Waegwan, Korea, on 25 August 1950. First Lieutenant Toomey led his platoon to the Imjin River, and with a sergeant was the first to make the crossing, but the rest of the platoon was struggling in the swift current. First Lieutenant Toomey signaled for them to hurry, and while waiting was struck in the head by an enemy grenade, which did not explode but did cause severe bleeding. After the 3d Platoon had crossed the river, he started back across the river to the aid station for treatment. While re-crossing the river he encountered three soldiers bogged down under heavy fire and rescued them. He also carried a wounded soldier 300 yards to relative safety, all while under enemy fire. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by First Lieutenant Toomey, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

TOWNSEND, JAMES BRIERTON, JR.

James Townsend graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1974 as a U.S. Air Force Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major James Brierton Townsend, Jr. (AFSN: 0-16831A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action against an enemy of the United Nations as a Pilot of an unarmed RB-26 Reconnaissance Aircraft of the 12th Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron, Night Photo, FIFTH Air Force, on 10 May 1952. On that date Major Townsend was assigned the photographic coverage of rail cuts on the heavily fortified Sinanju-Sinuiju rail line in North Korea. Encountering intense and accurate anti-aircraft fire, Major Townsend fearlessly continued on his target run until enemy searchlights caught his plane and began cycling his cameras, nullifying his attempts to photograph the target. Exposing himself to the enemy ground barrage as well as the night fighters from the Sinuiju area, Major Townsend dived on the searchlights, glide bombed them with flash bombs and then intrepidly offered himself as a decoy to enable night intruders to suppress the defenses operating against him. The resulting photographic coverage gave vital intelligence to the United Nations Command. The skill and daring of Major Townsend, his great courage and devotion to duty reflected the highest credit upon himself, the FIFTH Air Force, and the United States Air Force.

subjected to intense enemy automatic weapons, small arms and mortar fire. The volume of fire laid down by the enemy was murderous and the wicked cross fire of the enemy's automatic weapons and machine guns kept the entire company pinned down. Aware of this situation Captain Truscott and two of his men moved out in an attempt to knock out one of the enemy machine guns in order to halt the enemy cross fire. By running across open ground they finally reached an advantageous point from which their weapons could destroy one of the enemy machine guns. With this enemy gun disabled the company had more freedom of movement thus enabling them to knock out one enemy mortar and another machine gun nest. Captain Truscott continuously exposed himself to the intense enemy fire to care for the wounded and direct the men to the spots where they were most needed. Captain Truscott's gallantry in action, devotion to duty, courage and heroism reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

VANDER HEIDE, HERBERT JOHN

Herbert Vander Heide graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1929. He retired in 1962 as a U.S. Army Major General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Herbert John Vander Heide (ASN: 0-17754), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of the 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action near Lsil Gol, Korea, on 21 September 1951. Company G was fighting deep in enemy territory with the objective of establishing a blocking position. After intensive fighting, the friendly troops accomplished their mission, but were in danger of being overrun by numerically superior, counterattacking enemy forces who had them surrounded on three sides and were deploying devastating mortar, machine gun, automatic weapons and small arms fire. Ammunition was running low and the enemy threatened to cut the group off from other friendly units. The men, realizing the dire position they were in, were bordering on panic. In the midst of this confusion, Colonel Vander Heide appeared among them. With utter disregard for his personal safety, he calmly moved throughout the company, unhesitatingly exposing himself to the murderous enemy fire to shout words of encouragement and to instill in his men the aggressive will to win. Seizing a rifle, he shouted to the soldiers to follow him and then rushed toward the enemy lines, firing with deadly accuracy into their positions. The men, inspired by his fearless leadership, reorganized with renewed determination and attacked the surrounding enemy, fighting more fiercely than ever until the enemy was cleared from his advantageous positions. Colonel Vander Heide's courageous action, inspirational leadership and deep devotion to duty contributed immeasurably to the success of the unit's mission and reflect the highest credit on himself and the United States Infantry.

W

WAGONHURST, ARLAND HERTZOG

Arland Wagonhurst graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1974 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry), [then First Lieutenant] Arland Hertzog Wagonhurst (ASN: 0-2203704), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3d Battalion, 5th Regimental Combat Team, 24th Infantry Division (then Commanding Officer of Company K, 5th Regimental Combat Team, 24th Infantry Division) near Tosang-Kogae, Korea, on 23 April 1951. His company, holding defensive positions, was savagely attacked by a large enemy force supported by intensely concentrated artillery fire. The friendly forces, however, were thoroughly prepared for the assault and swept the enemy mass with devastating streams of fire. Captain Wagonhurst continually moved throughout the area, exposing himself repeatedly to the murderous enemy fire as he directed the deployment of his men and pointed out strategic targets to them. He personally directed the evacuation of the wounded, displaying complete disregard for his own safety as he exposed himself to enemy fire to do so. Captain Wagonhurst's courageous action, exemplary leadership and selfless performance of duty throughout the action reflect the highest credit on himself and the United States Infantry.

WALKER, SAM SIMS

Sam Walker graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1946. He retired in 1978 as a U.S. Army General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry), [then First Lieutenant] Sam Sims Walker (ASN: 0-28197), United States Army, for gallantry in connection with military operations against an opposing armed force while serving as Commanding Officer of Company A, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division. Captain Walker distinguished himself by courageous action near Sonju, Korea, on 23 September 1950. After a forced march over twenty miles, during his battalion's advance, his company was assigned the mission of clearing large enemy forces from the left position of the town. As the company entered, the enemy swept the area with intense mortar and small arms fire. With utter disregard for his own safety, Captain Walker moved among his men placing them in positions from which they could obtain maximum fire power and urging them on to greater efforts. During the furious fight he repeatedly exposed himself to withering fire in order to better direct his command in its assault against the well dug-in enemy. His fearless example served well to inspire his men who went on to secure their objective, inflicting heavy casualties among the enemy force and destroying or capturing many guns and other equipment. Captain Walker's courageous actions, devotion to duty and exemplary leadership reflect the greatest credit on himself and the United States Infantry.

WARNER, VOLNEY FRANK

Volney Warner graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He retired in 1981 as a U.S. Army 4-Star General. His son by the same name (USMA 1976) earned a Silver Star in Operation DESERT STORM, and retired as a Brigadier General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Second Lieutenant (Infantry) Volney Frank Warner (ASN: 0-62620), United States Army, for gallantry in connection with military operations against an opposing armed force while a member of Company L, 3d Battalion, 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry division, in action near Hakugyoku-do, Korea, on 26 September 1950. On that date, Lieutenant Warner's company leading the advance to the city, was halted by heavy artillery, mortar and automatic weapons. Signaling his platoon to follow, he advanced through a hail of deadly fire until a position, from which small arms fire could be directed on the enemy's artillery, was reached. Determined to eliminate this obstacle to the advance, he led his platoon in a full bayonet assault, and the men, inspired by his gallant example, overran the position and captured four field pieces. Regrouping his platoon after this fight, he again led a frontal assault against an estimated force of company strength which broke and withdrew in complete disorder. Lieutenant Warner's fearless actions and superior leadership reflect the greatest credit on himself and the United States Infantry.

WEATHERS, JAMES WESLEY, JR.

James Weathers graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1944. He retired in 1968 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Major (Infantry), [then Captain] James Wesley Weathers, Jr., United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of Company C, 1st Battalion, 7th Cavalry (Infantry) Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action against the enemy near Yonchon, Korea, on 22 September 1951. After his company had been forced to withdraw, despite the intense enemy fire, Major Weathers courageously remained at his forward position. After the men had reorganized, he recalled them to their original positions and led two squads in a continuation of the attack on the enemy, being the first to reach the hilltop. Major Weathers was wounded by an enemy grenade, but refused evacuation until assured that effective defensive positions had been established. His aggressive participation in this battle materially aided in the success of the attack and proved highly inspiring to his fellow soldiers. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Major Weathers, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

WEBSTER, WARREN, III [KIA (KOREA)]

Warren Webster graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950. He was killed in action while serving as a U.S. Army First Lieutenant during the Korean War.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Warren Webster, III (ASN: 0-62774), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company C, 23rd Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 26 April 1952, in the vicinity of Haduch'on, Korea. On that date, Lieutenant Webster, was in command of a volunteer five man patrol whose mission was to recover the body of a dead comrade which was deep in enemy held territory. Skillfully leading his men out across the open cultivated terrain Lieutenant Webster directed and guided his men with unerring timing and leadership. Throughout this entire period, the patrol was under intense enemy artillery, mortar, automatic weapons and small arms fire. Moving from man to man, fully exposed to a withering hail of enemy fire, Lieutenant Webster shouted words of encouragement and instructed his men to their deployment. Upon retrieving the body of their fellow soldier, Lieutenant Webster displayed superior ground tactics while the patrol was making its retrograde movement, of which there were no friendly casualties. Lieutenant Webster's gallantry in action and outstanding devotion to duty were an inspiration to all who observed him and will live forever in the hearts of his comrades.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pride in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star (Posthumously) to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Warren Webster, III (ASN: 0-62774), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of Company E, 17th Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division, in action against the enemy near Haugne, Korea, on 21 February 1953. He was leader of a combat patrol which, under cover of darkness, advanced deep into enemy territory to gain information and to capture an enemy soldier. Separating part of his patrol into a support group and placing it in ambush, he and five comrades advanced within 100 yards of an enemy-held hill in an attempt to lure enemy troops into a trap. Suddenly the group was attacked by a large force which had moved up and in between the two friendly patrol groups. Sensing the seriousness of the situation and the necessity for immediate action in order to permit the support group time to counterattack, Lieutenant Webster fearlessly charged forward, encouraging his men to follow. With deadly accuracy, he poured machine gun fire into the assailants, which inflicted heavy casualties and threw the enemy into chaos. Although wounded in the onslaught, he gallantly continued to return fire with his pistol and simultaneously urged his men to strike the enemy with vigorous forces. He and several others were mortally wounded before the enemy was forced to withdraw. Lieutenant Webster's resolute determination, inspirational leadership, and consummate devotion to duty reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

WELLS, JOHN THOMAS, III [KIA (KOREA)]

John Wells graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1944. He was killed in an accidental fall during a mission in Korea on June 1, 1951.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) John Thomas Wells, III (ASN: 0-26911), United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, X Corps, in action against the enemy in Korea, from 25 May to 1 June 1951. Traveling by small native craft through heavily mined water, Captain Wells, as officer-in-charge of a confidential intelligence mission, established a base some sixty miles behind enemy lines on the east coast of Korea. This mission furnished the United Nations Forces with information otherwise unattainable. Captain Wells continually exposed himself to possible enemy action in order to obtain vitally needed information regarding enemy troop concentrations, movements, and supply installations. In addition, he established an agent net of informants in the enemy rear area. On 1 June 1951, while attempting to communicate intelligence obtained to a United Nations vessel passing off the coast, it was necessary for him to scale a cliff to reach high ground to signal the ship. During the ascent, the ground gave way and Captain Wells fell seventy feet to the rocks below. Death was instantaneous. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Captain Wells, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Second Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a Second Award of the Silver Star to Colonel (Infantry) Arthur Harrison Wilson, Jr., United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving as Commanding Officer of the 5th Regimental Combat Team, 24th Infantry Division, in Korea, on 25 April 1951. Colonel Wilson led his men in a skillful retrograde movement out of an enemy trap in a narrow mountain pass near Pisi-Gol, Korea. During the savage conflict, he moved among his men shouting encouragement and giving such support as was possible, often firing his own weapon, killing and wounding many of the enemy who had managed to infiltrate through friendly lines. His utter disregard for personal safety and conspicuous display of brilliant leadership were a constant inspiration to his men. Colonel Wilson's heroic actions, indomitable spirit, and outstanding devotion to his men, reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Franklin Wilson graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, Class of 1951. He retired in 1981 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

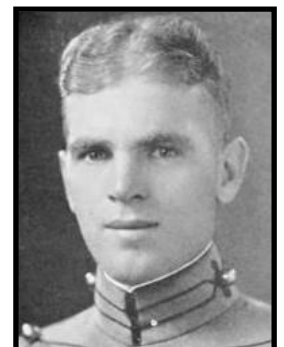

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Franklin Loeb Wilson (ASN: 0-63975), United States Army, for gallantry in action as a member of Company I, 3d Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy in Korea. During the early morning hours of 15 June 1953, in the vicinity of Chat-Kol, Korea, Company I, 3d Battalion, of which Lieutenant Wilson was company commander, had the mission of counterattacking and regaining control of friendly positions the enemy had overrun in earlier action. The numerically superior enemy force was concentrating mortar, artillery and automatic weapons fire on the area to disorganize any attempted counterattack. Lieutenant Wilson realized that without aggressive leadership, the company would be pinned down and the counterattack would fail. He organized his unit and instructed each squad in their specific phase of the assault. With complete disregard for his personal safety, he led the men through the intense fire, directing friendly fire and offering the men encouragement. Several times during the battle, elements of the company were cut off, however, Lieutenant Wilson quickly directed action that destroyed the intervening enemy. His skillful deployment of his troops and planned evacuation of the wounded resulted in an overwhelming victory for the friendly force. Lieutenant Wilson's outstanding gallantry and devotion to duty reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

WILSON, WESLEY CARLTON

Wesley Wilson graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1929. He retired in 1957 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Wesley Carlton Wilson (ASN: 0-17725), United States Army, for gallantry in action Commanding Officer, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, in action on 2 August 1950 in the vicinity of Obangsan, Korea. The enemy estimated at two regiments, launched a vigorous attack against the 19th Regimental Combat Team and the First Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment soon after the First Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment crossed the line of departure to attack the enemy east of Chingju. Four lead tanks and four armored cars were promptly knocked out and the protective infantry was killed, wounded or dispersed. When his troops became dispersed and intermingled with the 19th Regimental Combat Team, Colonel Wilson, with complete disregard for personal safety, led platoons and small groups from his battalion, under intense fire and placed them in defensive positions. He led a short counterattack to determine the conditions around the immobilized tanks and to recover the wounded. Many times during the day he walked about under fire to positions to steady groups of men. His gallantry, fearlessness and disregard for his personal safety was an inspiration to men both from his own unit and the 19th Regimental Combat Team, contributing materially to beating off the enemy attack while inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy. His outstanding courage and fearless example reflect high credit on himself and the military service.

WOHLFEIL, CARL HERBERT

Carl Wohlfeil's parents died when he was only two years old, and he was brought up, along with his brother, in St. Johns Lutheran orphanage in Buffalo, New York. In 1932, he graduated with honors from South Buffalo High School and enlisted in the Army that fall. While stationed at Schofield Barracks in Hawaii, he attended the Academy preparatory school and received an appointment to West Point. He graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1939. He retired with disability in 1966 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Field Artillery) Carl Herbert Wohlfeil (ASN: 0-21907), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 15th Field Artillery Battalion, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy from 19 to 21 May 1951, in the Soyang River Sector, Korea. During that period the sector of friendly lines held by the 9th Infantry Regiment, which was being directly supported by the fires of Colonel Wohlfeil's light artillery

Battalion, was being fiercely attacked and was outflanked in places by two enemy divisions supported by artillery. In spite of a very grave possibility that such action might result in enormous losses of men and materiel, because of the unfavorable terrain and the tactical situation, Colonel Wohlfeil's personal gallantry, daring and aggressive command actions were outstanding. He displaced his battalion over narrow, rough, winding roads in darkness into an area where tactical employment of artillery was extremely unfavorable. The battle of the Soyang River was a United Nations victory primarily because of the splendid combat effectiveness of the 9th Infantry Regiment as augmented by Colonel Wohlfeil's gallant and decisive stand. His personal gallantry, when his positions were almost totally surrounded and the enemy was in very close proximity, coordinating his fires with the needs of the infantry, constantly visiting each gun position and continuously ignoring intense enemy fire to direct and encourage his men, was an inspiration to all those observing him. The gallantry displayed by Colonel Wohlfeil reflects great credit upon himself and upholds the highest traditions of the Military Service of the United States.

WOOD, ROBERT STEPHEN [POW (KOREA)]

Robert Wood was a non-graduating member of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1950.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Second Lieutenant (Infantry) Robert Stephen Wood (ASN: 0-1913004), United States Army, for gallantry in action while a member of Company E, 2d Battalion, 8th Cavalry (Infantry) Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action against the enemy near Yongdong, Korea, on 25 July 1950. During early morning hours, in an effort to escape a three-pronged enemy trap, the Second Battalion started a withdrawal from their advance positions. Unknown to the withdrawing troops the enemy had set up a strong road block on the escape route and allowed the leading element to pass unmolested, however when the main body of the Battalion approached it was subjected to heavy cross fire by enemy machine guns. Lieutenant Wood, whose platoon was the leading element of the Second Battalion, immediately realized the great danger to all elements of the Battalion as well as the psychological effect of being pinned down in an open area without cover. Without delay, Lieutenant Wood gave orders to his platoon to attack. Armed with hand grenades and a 45 caliber pistol, Lieutenant Wood led his platoon up a steep rock-faced hill directly toward an enemy machine gun nest at the same time shouting directions and encouragement to members of his platoon. Those who were not destroyed in their positions, fled in terror before an attacking force numerically inferior to the enemy forces. This gallant action on the part of Lieutenant Wood and the superior leadership he displayed reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

YACKER, EVERETT JACOB

Everett Yacker graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1949. He retired in 1969 as a U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to First Lieutenant (Infantry) Everett Jacob Yacker (ASN: 0-59153), United States Army, for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action while serving as a Platoon Leader of Company F, 2d Battalion, 65th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division. During the morning and afternoon of 30 January 1951, in the vicinity of Tolwol-Li, Korea, Lieutenant Yacker was a platoon leader with the mission of occupying commanding ground near enemy-held Hill 262. As Lieutenant Yacker led his men toward the objective, the platoon was subjected to sporadic small arms and automatic weapons fire which steadily increased in intensity. Courageously climbing the steep slope, the force then began receiving heavy enemy mortar fire concentrations and sustained many casualties. Disregarding the intense bombardment, Lieutenant Yacker immediately supervised the treatment of casualties and then, with a force of 10 men, continued the attack. As he moved up the hill, he called in accurate artillery fire on the enemy positions and skillfully led the remaining platoon members to the objective. Lieutenant Yacker's aggressive leadership and sound judgment in securing this vital position enabled his company to successfully flank, assault and overrun the strategically valuable Hill 262. Lieutenant Yacker's outstanding gallantry and devotion to duty reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

ZIMMERMAN, WILLIAM MORRIS

William Zimmerman graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1942. He retired in 1971 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) William Morris Zimmerman (ASN: 0-53738), United States Army, for gallantry in action as Commanding Officer of the 1st Battalion, 23d Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, in action against an armed enemy on 1 and 2 August 1952, in the vicinity of Chorwon, North Korea. On those dates, Colonel Zimmerman was in command of an Infantry Battalion which had the mission of securing and holding Hill 266, better known as "Old Baldy". During this action, the lines of communication were cut by an intense artillery barrage. Realizing the seriousness of the situation, Colonel Zimmerman, completely disregarding the imminent danger, left his observation post, a place of comparative safety, and moved from company to company, issuing orders and helping to organize the positions. While accomplishing this feat, the area was subjected to one of the most devastating artillery and mortar barrages of the Korean War. His intrepidity in the face of danger was inspiring to his men and aided immeasurably in the success of the mission. Colonel Zimmerman's outstanding leadership and courageous conduct reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

ZOLLER, VIRGIL LEE

Virgil Zoller graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1938. After serving in the Army Air Forces in World War II, he transferred to the U.S. Air Force when it became a separate branch of service in 1947. He retired in 1963 as a U.S. Air Force Brigadier General.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Colonel Virgil Lee Zoller (AFSN: 1440A), United States Air Force, for gallantry in action as pilot of a B-26 Invader Attack Bomber and as Commanding Officer of the 3d Bombardment Group (Light), FIFTH Air Force, during a daylight interdiction mission on 11 December 1950, when he attacked enemy transportation, buildings and troops in the vicinity of Sinuiju, Korea. Disregarding intense and highly accurate ground fire, Colonel Zoller made repeated attacks with bombs, rockets and machine gun fire which resulted in the destruction of a large important factory. Although attack by enemy aircraft was probable and expected, Colonel Zoller continued his strafing passes destroying targets of transportation and personnel. Only when his fuel supply became dangerously low did he break off his attacks. As he was returning from the target area, he discovered a large concentration of enemy troops in the vicinity of Ch'argon-Gwan.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY HEROES (VOLUME IV)

Although his low fuel supply made further attacks extremely dangerous, he elected to press the attack. He made several effective passes, encountering heavy and accurate ground fire, and destroyed numerous enemy personnel and vital equipment. Colonel Zoller's gallant performance and outstanding devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the service and reflected great credit upon himself, the FAR EAST Air Forces, and the United States Air Force.

William Zook graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1975 as a U.S. Army Colonel.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Captain (Infantry) William Eugene Zook, United States Army, for gallantry in action while serving with Headquarters, 7th Cavalry (Infantry) Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, in action against the enemy near Yonchon, Korea, on 4 October 1951. When Company C, attacking strongly defended enemy positions, encountered heavy resistance which threatened to halt the advance, Captain Zook, the Battalion S-3 (Operations Officer), disregarding his personal safety, moved up to the lead elements. Here he continuously exposed himself to intense hostile fire while directing and instructing the men in an inspirational and aggressive manner. The gallant actions and dedicated devotion to duty demonstrated by Captain Zook, without regard for his own life, were in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

RATTAN, DONALD VOLNEY

Donald Rattan graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1945. He retired in 1979 as a U.S. Army Major General.

First Award

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress July 9, 1918, takes pleasure in presenting the Silver Star to Lieutenant Colonel (Infantry) Donald Volney Rattan, United States Army, for gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in the Republic of the Congo, in Africa, on 19 August 1964, while serving as Chief Observer of a Mobile Training Team during a violent uprising in the Republic of Congo. Colonel Rattan was participating in a reconnaissance mission with three other members of a joint team when they were suddenly attacked by an overwhelming force of Congolese rebels. Upon sustaining gunfire damage to his vehicle, he immediately directed the members of the team to flee to safety while he remained in his position, acting as a decoy although armed merely with a rifle in opposition to the onslaught of twelve hostile warriors wielding automatic weapons. Despite the extreme danger, he steadfastly covered the withdrawal of the team through two kilometers of hazardous terrain and succeeded in keeping the hostile force pinned down until his associates were hidden safely in the dense bush. Through his determination, indomitable courage, and complete disregard for his own safety to protect the lives of his fellow men, he prevented possible casualties and capture of the team. Colonel Rattan's conspicuous gallantry in action is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

RECIPIENTS BY STATE AND HOMETOWN

A large number of the USMA Silver Star recipients grew up in military families that served all over the United States and around world, hence they find it difficult to pinpoint any specific hometown. The hometowns listed in these volumes often come from the USMA year books, The Howitzer, and sometimes reflect the state from which the cadet was appointed. World War II general orders for awards, and some Korean War general orders, often reflect the recipients hometown at the time of service. The following listing of recipients by their hometown is based on the best information available, and in the case of living recipients, often by their listed preference.

The list, broken down by state, first lists the recipients hometown in that state when known, followed by their name. A number in parenthesis indicates those recipients who received multiple Silver Stars The number in brackets [] indicates the recipients class year, and I have further noted those recipients who were killed in action, missing in action, and/or prisoners of war.

U.S. MILITARY HERO BOOKS

81 HERO BOOKS

23 Million Words

37,500+ Pages

If someone had told me that these numbers would define my life-work, I'd have never believed it possible. It was certainly nothing I planned.

More than two decades ago I began building a website (www.homeofheroes.com*) and developing a database containing the citations for the highest valor awards to American Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen and Marines. Fortunately I had the shoulders of great historians like Harry Stringer (WWI), Jane Blakeney (Marine Corps) and above all, the late Colonel Albert Gleim, to stand on.

I understand the passion of these great historians because I felt the same drive and passion to insure that the accounts of men and women who have received our highest combat decoration should never be "lost to history".

The military services neither track awards or compile award citations for any award other than the Medal of Honor. Two decades ago I began the seemingly impossible mission of fixing that problem. Unfortunately, my efforts including testimony before Congress, have failed to get a positive official response to the need for a comprehensive database of highly decorated American heroes.

I have estimated that somewhere near 350,000 awards above the Bronze Star have been awarded in history. My two decades of research has identified 200,000 of these, including 95% of all who received awards of the Silver Star or higher. I have compiled and digitized more than 80,000 of these awards including the citations for every Medal of Honor, Marine Corps Brevet Medal, Navy Cross, Air Force Cross, and 85% of the Distinguished Service Crosses.

When I began this project in the early 1990s there were very few books available, even related to the Medal of Honor. In recent years much has been published about the Medal of Honor and recipients of that award, but other highly decorated Americans are vastly overlooked. I am determined to change that. In addition to continued research and digitizing of citations, over the last few years I have begun to these citation compendiums available in print form. It is my way of insuring that my decades of research and work "outlive me."

Feel free to click through the various pages of this, my new website. You are sure to find books that will interest you. In fact, not infrequently have individuals found a friend or relative listed in the database I curate for "Military Times" (<https://valor.militarytimes.com/>) that did not even know that person had received such high awards. In a couple of instances, I have heard from combat veterans who found themselves listed for awards as high as the Distinguished Service Cross and Silver Star, who themselves, never knew they had received that high accolade.

These cases, and the fact that I know that these heroes will live on in history, is what motivates me. If all these books become my legacy, I will be satisfied to know I did my best and accomplished something important.

BEYOND BELIEF

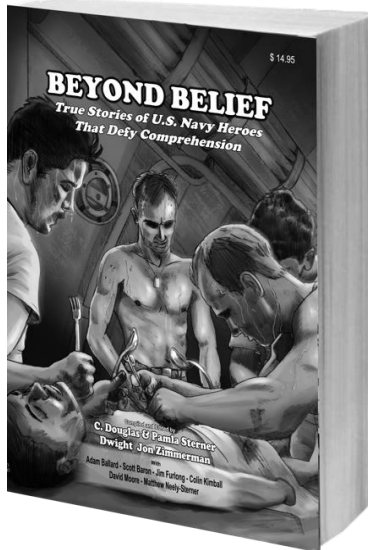

Beyond Belief is a projected series of true, inspiring stories of some of America 's most unbelievable, but TRUE, stores of heroism. The stories are written by a team of authors all of them committed to our goal of providing readers with the stories that will leave them shaking their heads in wonder.

New volumes are planned for release twice each year, one on Memorial Day, and the other on Veterans Day.

The following 24 volumes of U.S. Military Heroes by Branch of Service comprise the largest collection of award recipients ever published. Each 8 ½" x 11" book contains the names, citations, and often a photo and brief biography of the listed recipients. Often the last volume in any set (MOH, DSC, Navy Cross, Silver Star) and when broken down by war, includes informational appendixes analyzing awards by the rank of recipients, military occupational specialty, and unit, as well a list of recipients by how state and town. These represent more than 20,000 pages of detailed information on our most highly decorated heroes.

WINGS OF VALOR

A Projected 6-Volume History of Army & Air Force Heroism in the Sky

Volume I—The Birth of Military Aviation

Read the evolution of early combat aviation in World War II through the lives and actions of the 4 WWI Air Service Medal of Honor recipients. Follow the continuing efforts to establish a military air arm in the interim from 1918—1941.

Volume II—At War in the Pacific

From the attack on Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941 until the close of 1943, the tide of war turned quickly in the Pacific. Through the lives, heroism, and in too many cases their death, the eight Pacific War Medal of Honor recipients from 1941 to 1943 reveal inspiring tales of the continuing evolution of combat aviation.

Volume III—Bombs Over Europe

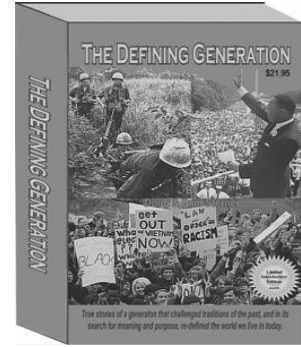

The stories of 18 Medal of Honor recipients demonstrate how the United States Army Air Forces went head-to-head with the vaunted German Luftwaffe, and gained the aerial superiority necessary to enable the subsequent D-Day ground invasion.

THE DEFINING GENERATION

True Stories of a generation that challenged the traditions of the past, and in its search for meaning and purpose, redefined the world we live in today.

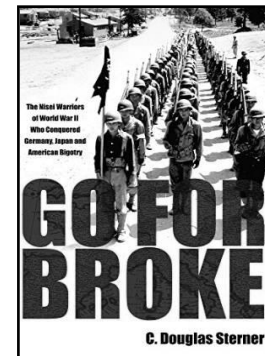

Fifteen years in development, “The Defining Generation” is a 600+ page tribute to the children of “The Greatest Generation.” Baby boomers themselves, authors Doug and Pam Sterner weave personal vignettes, history, and the inspiring true stories of heroes and leaders of their generation. It is a positive portrayal of a generation in rebellion that rose up against traditions of the past, rejecting “the establishment” and its narrow views of life, equality, poverty and world need. The genesis of their thesis: “The Greatest Generation indeed saved our world (in World War II), but their children redefined it, making it better.”

GO FOR BROKE:

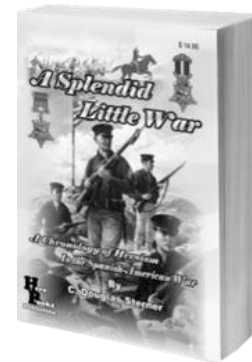

The Nisei Warriors of World War II Who Conquered Germany, Japan, and American Bigotry

During World War II, Japanese-Americans were forcefully removed from their homes and businesses, and placed in “relocation” camps throughout the West. With countless instances of “Gestapo-like” tactics used against them, no one would have faulted them for being bitter or angry at the country that held them captive. Instead, the remarkable story of these Nisei (first generation Japanese born outside of Japan) warriors explains why they were eager to defend their American homeland, and how they became the most decorated fighting unit ever assembled in U.S. military history. Go For Broke is the incredible story of how these soldiers, known as the purple Heart Battalion,” helped liberate Europe, the Pacific, and America from its pervasive and systemic bigotry.

A SPLENDID LITTLE WAR

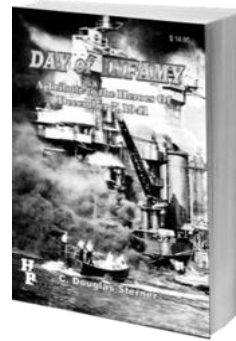

“A Splendid Little War” recounts the chronology of events leading up to and during the fighting of the Spanish-American War. Perhaps no war in our history has been more popular at home or among those who fought it. American media played a significant role in instigating war, and fanning the patriotic fervor that made it so. In these pages you will meet the heroes of both sides and follow the chronology of battle through the actions of the aging Civil War heroes that commanded the American forces, and the young Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Army Nurses who were conspicuous by their gallantry and devotion to duty and to each other.

DAY OF INFAMY

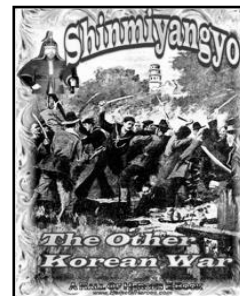

A Tribute to the Heroes of Pearl Harbor

The Japanese surprise attack on Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, on December 7, 1941 was perhaps the most cataclysmic event of the 20th Century. Within two hours the U.S. Navy 's Pacific Fleet was almost completely destroyed and Americas air forces at Hawaii and in the Far East were nearly annihilated. "Day of Infamy" takes the reader through the chronology of that fateful day through the actions of the 15 Sailors whose heroic actions in earned them the Medal of Honor. The little known stories of other heroes, and interesting snippets of human interest, enhance the narrative. Liberally illustrated with photos, maps, and pictures of individual heroes, this book is more than a history book—it is a look inside the human character of those who faced unbelievable odds in the most trying of times.

SHINMIYANGYO—THE OTHER KOREAN WAR

This book details the first American incursion in Korea in 1871, with narratives that are woven through the actions of the 14 Marines and Navy Bluejackets who received Medals of Honor for this first foreign war.

BOOKS BY AND ABOUT US

HOW PUEBLO BECAME THE HOME OF HEROES

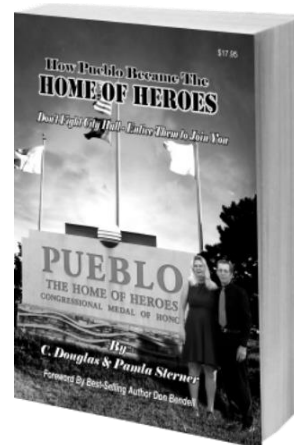

Don't Fight City Hall – Entice them to Join You

How Pueblo Became the Home of Heroes is much more than a fun read which is hard to put down. It is a memoir about the unique couple who spearheaded the drive to make Pueblo the Home of Heroes: Doug and Pam Sterner. Doug and Pam are both magicians, singers, ventriloquists, but more important, patriots.

Pueblo, Colorado, the town they live in, at one time, was the only city in America which was the home of four living recipients of the Medal of Honor. It prompted a President of the nation to ask, “Is there something in the water out there?”

The stories of the celebrity-filled visits to Pueblo by celebrities, such as Wayne Newton and Adrian Cronauer (Good Morning, Vietnam!) and too many Medal of Honor recipients to share are neat and interesting. Few have done more to honor Medal of Honor recipients and other recipients of valorous military awards for all branches than the Sterners. It is great to read the story behind the stories.

RESTORING VALOR

One Couples Mission to Expose Fraudulent War Heroes and Protect Americas Military Awards System

Stolen valor occurs when a person lies about receiving military decorations that he or she has in fact never earned. It has become a major societal problem that has been discussed numerous times in the news and, most recently, by the US Supreme Court. In Restoring Valor, Doug Sterner provides riveting case studies of the stolen valor imposters he has investigated and exposed, and the serious crimes—including murder—they have committed. He chronicles the evolution of stolen valor from the inception of the republic to today. Sterner demonstrates why the federal law he and his wife Pam helped to enact, called the Stolen Valor Act, is necessary.

JAMIE 'S STORY: GOD IS GOOD

A True Story of Friendship and Faith

Jaime Pacheco, one of the last Army Rangers killed in the Vietnam War, was the close friend of this author. In this small booklet, Doug Sterner details his own missions as a combat correspondent with Jamie 's Ranger Team, the impact on his life of Jamie 's death after Doug returned home, and the unexpected reunion with Jaime 's family decades later. Originally written as a personal memoir, this touching story set the stage for Doug 's subsequent work in his Home Of Heroes website, and much more.
